One of the least known countries of the Arabian peninsula is the sultanate of Oman, which occupies the southeastern extremity. The country is largely mountainous. The area has not been exactly determined, as the western, or desert, border has never been fixed. The population, which ranges from 250,000 to 500,000 is distributed mostly along the seacoast and a few interior valleys that can be irrigated. There are no rivers, and the annual rainfall is not more than five inches. Wells are the only source of water. The Tropic of Cancer crosses the sultanate, and while the winters are pleasant the summers are long and extremely hot. Arabic is the language generally spoken, though in the ports many persons speak Persian, Baluchi and Hindustani, and every native merchant can conduct his business correspondence in either English or French. The sultan or any of his walis, or governors, decides a case which may be brought before them without reference to any other case or to any law, except local customs and such precepts of the Koran as may be deemed applicable. Commercial law is unknown. Wages, formerly extremely low, have been increasing steadily, a condition said to be due not to any increase in the demand for labor, but to a deficiency in the supply caused by the dying out of the sedee, or negro, population since the importation of slave cargoes ceased. The prevailing daily wages, United States currency, in cents, are: Carpenters, 46; house servants, 17; cooks, 32; masons, 34; coolies, 24; messengers, 20, and women date packers, 37. Goats, sheep and burros, of poor and stunted types, owing to scanty forage, are raised; but the dromedaries which the tribes of the western border grow are said to be the best breed in the world. Horses are few, there being probably less than 500 in the whole country.

Paid Good Price for His Cutlet.

The Brazilian nabob, Baron Fereau, was as miserly in trifles as he was extravagant in other directions. It was one of his peculiarities never to fee servants, and the waiters of the various hotels at which he sojourned were, for that reason, not partial to him. One morning, while staying at the magnificent Maux hotel, in Rio de Janeiro, he came down to breakfast and ordered a cutlet. After he had eaten it he ordered a second. "Baron," said the head waiter, maliciously, "it's a custom with us never to serve the same course twice at a meal." "Is that so?" said Fereau, and rising from his seat he left the room. In ten minutes he came back into the dining-room. "Waiter," said he, "I have just bought this hotel and am master here now. As you will not be able to get accustomed to my plan of serving guests according to their wishes, you are dismissed at once." Thereupon he took up his napkin again and called to another waiter: "Now, bring me another cutlet!"

Guest Room Slate.

One of the greatest conveniences which a hostess can devise for her guests is a clearly written card set on the bedroom writing table detailing the hours of meals, the times of incoming and outgoing posts, the principal trains and other useful information.

It was someone's clever idea to provide a small china slate in each room, on which might be written instructions for the housemaid. It is often difficult to find her during the day in order to ask for the hot bottle, the glass of warm milk, the necessary help when dressing for dinner, or other needs that may be required, and to ring for her often is not desirable.

Does Seem Odd.

"Napoleon was a remarkable man."

"Yes; he was a remarkable man. But why should he wear seven suits of clothes at Waterloo?"

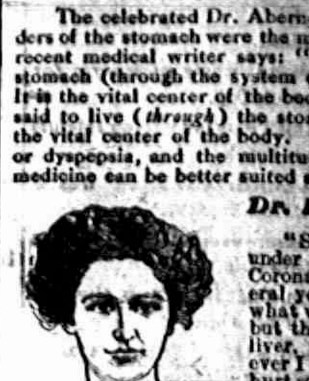
"Seven suits?"

"I have seen that many in various museums."

NO ONE STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

The celebrated Dr. Abernethy of London was firmly of the opinion that disorders of the stomach were the most prolific source of human ailments in general. A recent medical writer says: "every feeling, emotion and affection reports at the stomach (through the system of nerves) and the stomach is affected accordingly. It is the vital center of the body. * * * *." He continues, "so we may be said to live (through) the stomach." He goes on to show that the stomach is the vital center of the body. For weak stomachs and the consequent indigestion or dyspepsia, and the multitude of various diseases which result therefrom, no medicine can be better suited as a curative agent than

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.



MRS. MURKEN,

"Several months ago I suffered from a severe pain right under the breast-bone," writes MRS. G. M. MURKEN, of Corona, Calif. "Had suffered from it, off and on, for several years. I also suffered from heart-burn, did not know what was the matter with me. I tried several medicines but they did me no good. Finally, I was told it was my liver. I did not dare to eat as it made me worse. Whenever I swallowed anything it seemed that I would faint—it hurt so. I grew very thin and weak from not eating. Was told to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took five bottles of it and could feel myself getting better from the first dose. I could eat a little without pain and grew strong fast. To-day I am strong and well and can do a big day's work with ease. Can eat everything and have put on flesh wonderfully. I will say to all sufferers write to Dr. Pierce. He has my undying gratitude."

KEEPS HENS AT THEIR WORK

Simple Contrivance Used by Western Man Cures Them of Desire to "Set."

Owners of hens are frequently greatly annoyed by the persistent desire of their fowls to set, in season and out, on eggs, stones or other objects to hand. But a western man has evolved a plan to circumvent the hen in this respect.

The cure consists of a cheap watch, with a loud and clear tick, inclosed in a case that is white and shaped like an egg. When one of the hens belonging to this westerner manifests a desire to set out of season he gently places the bogus egg under her sheltering breast. The "egg" ticks cheerfully away, and soon the hen begins to evince signs of uneasiness and stirs the noisy egg around with her bill, thinking, no doubt, that it is already time for it to hatch. She becomes more and more uneasy as the noise continues, and soon jumps off the nest and runs about a while to cool off. Soon, however, she returns to her self-imposed task. Matters get worse and worse; she wiggles about and cackles, ruffles her feathers and generally shows distress. Finally, with a wild squawk, she abandons the nest for good and all, and the incubating fever is broken completely.

The westerner has found use for half a dozen of these noisy eggs, and he claims that they pay for themselves again and again during the year by holding the hens to their business of laying and preventing them from wasting the golden hours in useless incubating.

SOMETHING NOT IN DEMAND

One Accomplishment That Employers of Cashiers Make No Great Effort to Foster.

Having graduated from a business college with honors the young man thought himself competent to tackle any problem in banking that could be learned without actual experience, but the old clerk knew better.

"Can you make an erasure so neatly that it would take an expert to tell where it had been done?" he asked.

"Yes, sir," said the young man with conscious pride.

"Well, for heaven's sake don't tell your prospective employer so or you will be looking for a job this time next year," the old clerk said.

"Employers are afraid of too much skill in that direction. It gives such enormous opportunities for fraud that they will fight shy of hiring you.

"I found that out in my young days. I also was an expert with the ink eraser and proudly proclaimed my accomplishment. Finally, when I found myself toeing the starvation mark, I ceased to boast, and have held a good situation ever since."

Ruins of Immense Age.

Prof. Hiram Bingham, director of the Yale expedition to Peru, reports among the archaeological discoveries a number of Inca or pre-Inca cities, including Macchu Pichu, a city probably built by the "megalithic race" which preceded the Incas. The ruins are on an almost inaccessible ridge, two thousand feet above the Urubamba river. They are of great beauty and magnificence, and include palaces, baths, temples and about 150 houses. Carefully cut blocks of white granite, some of them twelve feet long, were used in the construction of the walls.

TIME TO THINK

By Jeanne O. Loizeaux

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

The girl seemed splendidly oblivious to her fellow travelers all day. She had boarded the train at Denver with very little but super-elegant baggage, and alone. She had been excited at first, but as the hours passed her gaze became quieter, more thoughtful. She leaned her cloud of gold-brown hair back against the seat and idly watched the porter light up as the dusk fell upon them.

Down the aisle a few seats and facing her sat a youth with his hat tipped back on his head. He was playing cards with a Kansas farmer, a traveling man from Chicago, and an old German woman. A little old lady, perfect in feature and every detail of dress, still beautiful, was amusedly watching them all. The youth caught the traveling man's glance as for the thousandth time it rested on the girl.

"Easy to look at, isn't she?" quoth the youth. "But she wouldn't stand for any freshness—from you, say!" he observed.

The man laughed with uneasy impudence. "If Kansas and I lick you and the lady in this round, I'll show you! I'll go over and make good with that girl—my trick!" And then the little old lady slowly rose, and made her way to the girl, whose eyes were feverishly bright. She smiled, as anything alive to fineness must smile, when the old lady took the seat beside her—not like a protector, but as one seeking company.

"You are alone, my dear?"

"Quite—quite alone!"

Then they talked, impersonally, but with friendliness, as strange women of the same world approach each other, the older woman wistful at the freshness of youth, the girl wishing for the tranquility of age. The landscape was quite dark when she spoke again.

"I was—going to California," she said. And then, brusquely, "Did you ever do anything you were—sorry for? I mean, any really big thing? Did you ever make a decision because—you were blind with ignorance, and be sorry and—scared after you had time to think?" She hurled the questions at the old lady, who accepted them calmly. She had watched for this chance, feeling something was wrong.

"Yes, my dear child. You are a stranger, so I don't mind telling you. Once, because I felt uneasy, I got off at a station after I had been started by my father to a girls' school. I reached my father just in time to save him from suicide from melancholy over my mother's death, and thinking my education was taking me also from him. I never left him again—not even when I married."

"Forgive me—but did you marry the right man?" The little old lady laughed inside, and turned the worn wedding ring on her finger. She had known the troubled look was because of a man! It nearly always is! She reached for the girl's hand, which tightened about hers, and continued:

"I went up the altar steps twice—once to realize at the last moment that it was to meet the wrong man. It was the terrible moment of my life, but I held on to my courage. I whispered to him that I could not go with him, and then I mercifully fainted. A year after, I married the right man. He lived only two years—but I had the two years; all the rest, before and after, was only for that—and I have my son."

"Then you would always—follow your—"

"Always follow your heart. If you let yourself be quiet, there will in any great event be a still voice that will show you the right path to choose." The old lady waited.

The girl grew very pale.

"But if you had promised your father—when he was dying—to marry somebody, and you liked him, and respected him! And when it was almost time for you to marry him and you were all ready, and the whole world knew about it, supposing some one else came, and you knew in one moment that he was the right one? And you felt instantly that he knew it, too? And then when you were taking the train west to the first man's mother's, where all your wedding things were sent on, what if the real one forgot himself at the station and—showed you his heart?" She was breathless and white, but her voice was very low.

The old lady was silent.

"What would you do?" insisted the young voice. "Can't you help me? I wish there would be a wreck!"

"That is very foolish. Better be quiet and tell me about it. You know it is not right to marry where you do not love. Nothing can make it right to do wrong."

"My promise—?"

"The dead cannot live for the dear ones they leave behind. Your father would not hold you to it, nor require such a sacrifice."

"But the man—he cares for me, he has built me a home."

"Tell him the truth. If you are sure about this, ask him to release you. If he loves you he will do so, if he doesn't love you, that also would end it. There is only one right way. It would be wrong to keep this from him. Am I right?" The girl nodded. The baffled traveling man passed them on his way to the dining car.

The old lady rose decisively. "I'm famished," she said. "And you have eaten nothing for hours. Go in with me, and be sensible, and we'll decide what to do. We have an hour's wait—I am bound for California, too. Should be there now, but have been on a hurried business trip to Denver for my son. Come, my dear."

The girl followed and ate what her new friend ordered. Finally they returned to their car.

"You will think it strange that I am alone. I have lived with a cousin. She was to take me, but I started a week early. I could not trust myself in the place with the right man another day. I should telegraph—they will not expect me. I have never seen Rex's mother—they were in the dark vestibule and the girl did not see the older woman start at the name. "People tell me I am sure to love her. I can't bear to have her think ill of me."

"She will—understand," breathed the old lady. "She will think no ill—but are you sure, sure about the other man?"

"If I could have one week—one day with him, I would die happy!" She was taking her seat again and her eyes shone. "I would follow him anywhere in the world, give up anything for him—oh—"

"My dear, listen. We will be in Salt Lake early in the morning. We can stop off, go to a hotel and you can decide what to do. I will help you. You must have your berth made up now, and go to sleep. It will come out right for everybody." But suddenly the old lady's face seemed to have aged. "Helen—will you kiss me?" The girl did so.

Afterwards she remembered that she had not told her name. And in her berth she wondered dreamily whether Rex Wharton would forgive her. Then she forgot all about him and fell into dreams of Sherman King.

At the dirty, prosaic station at Salt Lake, in the brightness of the May morning, a quick, strange scene occurred. The old lady and Helen Travers had just entered, when the girl gave a cry. A tall, blond young fellow, very pale, snatched her to him and kissed her without a word. While the older woman was looking her astonishment, another man, also young but graver, with a dark, fine face, stopped short at the door and watched the group. His features were a larger model of the fine old lady's face, the chin more square, the forehead higher. He came over and took her hand.

"Rex!" she breathed. "Oh, Rex, my poor boy! It couldn't be helped—she isn't to blame!" For still, though standing apart from him, Helen saw only Sherman King, and he her, and he stood talking to her in a low, eager tone.

Rex Wharton almost crushed his mother's hand in his. "Mother! I thought I would meet you here, send you on—home, and then go to Denver for—her. What does it—mean?"

Then, as if a voice called her, Helen turned and saw him. She walked straight up to him, truth and courage in her eyes.

"Rex," she said, "you must forgive me. But I can't—I—"

"You love some one else? Don't be afraid of me! I can bear what is coming to me!"

She gave a tragic little gesture and the other man stepped to her side with a protective movement. Wharton gave a bitter little laugh, and the girl breathed the men's names to each other. Rex put out his hand and gave King a hearty grasp—he was a man.

"I suppose," he said slowly, "that I don't deserve—happiness. At any rate, you seem to be the better man. Helen, I am still in a manner responsible for you. What do you wish to do. Shall my mother—"

The girl's eyes filled with sudden tears. "Oh," she said, "if my mother had lived! Will you—stay a few hours until we—"

"Can be married? I will make arrangements immediately," King finished. He turned away and Rex went with him a few steps, then returned.

"Take a taxi to the St. James," he said, "and wait for us."

"Oh!" said the girl, "I feel like a wicked—wicked—"

The old lady gave a rueful little smile. "Sherman King avenges my treatment of his—father," she said quietly. "It comes back to—my son."

Nora's Luck.

In the employ of a Brooklyn household there is a servant named Nora. Although Nora is frequently scolded for one thing or another, the family aver she always gets the best of the argument.

Recently she was taken to task by the mistress touching the dusty condition of furniture in the living room. Nora ran her thumb along the seat of one of the chairs. She regarded the result with much interest. "It shure bates all, mum," said she, "the difference ye find when nobody sits in 'em for jist the wan day, mum! I congratulate mesilf, mum, that I wolk for such a popular family. Now, if it weren't for your visitors, mum, where'd I be? At thim chairs, mum, the whole day long with my cloth!"

DISPELLED DREAM OF WEALTH

Danish Woman Finally Convinced as to the Value of Note Peculiarly Marked.

The woman handed her friend a $5 bill. "See the number of small fives engraved on it?" she asked. "When I was in Denmark a few years ago such a bill as that caused me a great deal of amusement, and I had to surrender one before I could prove myself clear of a false belief regarding my finances. An aunt whom I was visiting saw in my purse one day a number of these bills, and she asked to examine one, as it was so different from any of the Danish money. She studied it attentively a few minutes, and then asked me how much it was. I told her it was $5, and, to my surprise, I saw she did not believe me. 'If it is only that amount,' she said, 'why has it so many little figures on it?' I tried to explain, but I made little impression on her. Later I heard she had told our relatives that I was 'worth thousands and thousands of dollars' and was trying to conceal the fact from the family lest they should expect some things of me that they would not otherwise. When I heard that I was visiting in another part of the country and could not very well defend myself, so I hit on the expedient of sending my aunt a present of a $5 bill. When she went to have it changed into the money of the country she was at last convinced, though at the price of having her dream of wealth rudely shattered."

Birds Flock to Their Death.

An old sportsman of Normandy declares that round the lighthouse of Barfleur last November there were picked up in the course of four nights 10,000 birds of all sorts, including 1,800 woodcock. The lighthouse on the Pointe de Penmarch, in Brittany, has a revolving light of 30,000,000 candle power. Visiting this on November 10 last year, and again on the 12th, an observer saw tens of thousands of birds whirling round, and it seemed to him that the light shot out a perfect hail of electric sparks among the migrants. Next morning he was present while the dead bodies were being collected. These are dispatched every day to Paris by train, and the "catch," he was told, often comprised 2,000 to 4,000 victims; one morning alone there had been more than 500 woodcock in the "bag."

GOVERNOR DENEEN WILL SUPPORT TAFT

So Informs Progressives Who Call Upon Him.

Andrew Russel Tells Committee He Will Reply In Writing—Dixon Announces Third Ticket In Illinois.

A committee of progressive Republicans appointed to wait on Governor Deneen and the other candidates for state offices on the Republican ticket to ask them whether they would support Taft or Roosevelt for president were informed by the governor that he would support Taft.

The other candidates made the same statements, except Andrew Russel, candidate for state treasurer, who informed the committee he would send an answer in writing to Chairman McCormick.

The conference was of short duration. After visiting the governor's office the committee waited on Secretary of State C. J. Doyle, who gave them the same answer as did Governor Deneen. Mr. Russel was next visited and replied that he would send Chairman McCormick a written answer. Auditor of Public Accounts J. S. McCullough was the next man waited on and here the committee received the answer that he would support Taft.

The committee went to the supreme court building, where Attorney General W. H. Stead made the same reply. Governuor Deneen gave out a typewritten statement to the committee, as did also Secretary of State Doyle. Mr. Doyle voiced the views of the other state officers when he said in his statement:

"As long as I remain a candidate on the Republican ticket I feel in honor bound to support the Republican platform and nominees. I cannot believe that the Republican party has fulfilled its destiny and should be abandoned as an agency for the promotion of good government."

United States Senator Joseph M. Dixon of Montana, spokesman for Colonel Roosevelt, while in Chicago, struck terror to the hearts of the anti-third ticket progressives in Illinois when he came out flatly for a third party ticket from top to bottom. This was considered the ultimatum of Colonel Roosevelt and tossed to the winds the attempts to confine the third party movement in Illinois to a "stub" or presidential electors' ticket.

Colonel Roosevelt's plan will have to be downed in the Roosevelt state convention called for Aug. 3 if a third state ticket is to be kept out of the field in Illinois. Three tickets, politicians declare, will mean the supremacy of the Democracy all along the line in November.

GUADAJARA SHAKEN

Ninety Distincet Shocks Are Felt In the Mexican City.

An earthquake shook Guadalajara, Mex., destroying a large number of buildings and rendering several thousands homeless. It came as a climax to a series of seismic disturbances covering a period of more than five weeks. Ninety distinct shocks were felt within that time.

Scarcely a structure in the city escaped damage and large areas are masses of ruins today.

Five thousand fled in panic when the final shock came.

The beautiful cathedral, built more than a century ago, was split in two, as well as the municipal palace.

TURKS SINK TWO ITALIAN WARSHIPS

Torpedo Boats Attack Entrance to the Dardanelles.

Many of Rome's Sailors Reported to Have Perished In the Engagement.—To Close the Dardanelles.

Eight Italian torpedo boats attacked the entrance to the Dardanelles early in the morning.

The Turkish forts replied vigorously, sinking two of the Italian war vessels and damaging the other six.

The cabinet ministers were hurriedly called to the palace where, at a council of war, it was decided to close the Dardanelles.

Tewfik Pasha, the Turkish ambassador to London, who, on July 17 was appointed grand vizier, has undertaken to form a new cabinet.

Many Italian sailors are reported to have perished in the straits.

The Turkish losses, undoubtedly small, have not been divulged.

The Italian fleet has long been menacing the Turkish seaboard. Many times warships have steamed to a point just out of reach of the Dardanelles batteries.

These forts are of great strength and are equipped with the most modern guns.

The Italian navy has almost a clean sweep up to this time. The shelling of cities along the coast of Tripoli has amounted to little more than target practice.

Continued success has led to such confidence that international complications have been narrowly averted after seizure of foreign ships.

At Beirut, where the whole Italian fleet, under the command of the duke of the Abruzzi, shelled the town, sixty noncombatants were slain. It was at first reported that an Italian ship was sunk, but this was not true.

News from the land forces occupying Tripoli is not to be had. So close a censorship is maintained by the Italian government that many newspapers which sent correspondents to the front at the beginning of the war, have recalled them.

It is known, however, that the Turks are putting up a stubborn resistance and that the Italian army has not gained any foothold away from the coast.

MIKADO IS BETTER

Big Drop In Temperature Is Shown—Has Long Period of Sleep.

Emperor Mutsuhito is better. The physicians' noon bulletin was highly encouraging. The remarkable drop in temperature, with the long period of sleep and the symptoms noted, lead doctors other than those in attendance to express belief in the triumph of medical science. During the night the emperor was given ice cream, a little soup and wine. His perception appeared to be distinctly clearer and the delirium ceasd.

The American ambassador, Charles Page Bryan, personally presented a telegram of sympathy from President Taft.

OIL LANDS ARE LEASED

Canadian Company Enters Into Agreement with State

Long Struggle of United Fuel and Supply Company to Get State Mineral Rights Nears End.

Lansing, Mich., July 19.—The proposition of the United Fuel and Supply company of Canada to lease and operate the state mineral lands in Montmorency county was again before the public domain commission.

The meeting was a lively one, and brought forth several firm positions on the part of the members, especially Auditor General Fuller.

The company wishes to lease the lands of the state and pay it a royalty on the product secured. It asked a twenty-one-year franchise, with the privilege of three year renewals. The deal was stopped several weeks ago, by Attorney General Kuhn, who objected to the state entering into a blind deal that would jeopardize its future rights. Since that time the company has come forward with several better plans.

It was finally agreed by the commission to make a contract with the company providing that the state should receive 10 per cent of the gross product for the first three years, not over 12½ per cent the next three years and not over 25 per cent the remainder of the franchise term. Clauses were also incorporated in the lease, calling upon the company to show no discrimination or forfeit the lease, and to do a certain amount of work annually.

ANTI-TRUST LAW CHANGES

Radical Recommendations Made by the Stanley Committee.

Recommendations of the majority members of the Stanley steel committee, finally completed, are radical beyond anticipation.

The steel committee proposes the most far-reaching changes in the Sherman anti-trust law that have ever been laid before congress, and the program is particularly interesting in view of the fact that Woodrow Wilson is understood to have approved it.

The bill offered by the Stanley committee proposes that individuals shall have the power to bring suits in equity for an injunction under the Sherman anti-trust law and that they also shall have the power to intervene in any suit brought by the government under this act.

The bill also proposes that the burden of proof in regard to the reasonableness or unreasonableness of a restraint of trade shall be shifted from the complaintant to the defendant corporation. In addition to these recommendations the committee's bill defines acts which shall constitute unreasonable restraints of trade.

CONCERN PURCHASES TOWN

Village Included In Deal Involving Sawmill and Railroad.

Marquette, Mich., July 22.—One of the biggest transactions of the kind in this region in a number of years took place when the Lake Independence Lumber company purchased the sawmill plant, 20,000 acres of timber land, a logging railroad and the town of Birch from the Northern Lumber company. The consideration is not announced. The holdigs concerned are, however, estimated to be worth approximately a quarter of a million dollars.

The Lake Independence concern is controlled by the Brunswick-Balke-Collender company of Chicago, manufacturers of billiard tables, bowling alleys and hardwood fixtures of various kinds. It owns the town of Big Bay, where it operates a sawmill and a bowling pin factory, and it possesses also a large acreage of wooded lands.

CELEBRATION MARRED

Premature Explosion of a Bomb at Detroit.

Six Persons Are Injured, One of Whom Is Expected to Die—Great Crowd at Scene.

Detroit, Mich., July 24.—Premature explosion of a bomb during the fireworks display which inaugurated Detroit's Cadillaqua celebration resulted in the injury of six persons, one of whom is expected to die.

The explosion occurred on Belle Isle, where a tremendous crowd had gathered to witness the first number of the week's program of festivities.

Mrs. S. C. MacKnight of Barberton, O., was struck in the face by a portion of the bomb. One eye was torn out and her cheek bone was crushed. Her condition is serious. Patrolman William Dean of Detroit received a gash on the knee. Mrs. M. M. Smith of North Tonawanda, N. Y., was hit by a piece of the bomb. Three others received minor injuries.

JUST TO SPITE NEIGHBORS

Woman Refuses to Plead Guilty, Though Admitting She Is.

Cadillac, Mich., July 20.—Mrs. Rebecca Root, sixty years old, grandmother of Nora Eileen Graham, aged six, pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault and battery upon her granddaughter, and will stand trial. The aged woman, admitting that technically she was guilty, said she did not care to give her neighbors, who made the complaint, the satisfaction of pleading guilty.

Mrs. Root is charged with beating her granddaughter until the child no longer could stand.

Settled; Is Released.

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 20. — L. W. Lankerd, a former manager of the Kalamazoo branch of the Commercial Milling company of Detroit, who was arrested after being accused of embezzling $3,000 from the company, was released from jail. Lankerd's release followed a settlement with the company.

MRS. MORROW NOT GUILTY

Trial of Chicago Woman Charged with Killing Husband Ends.

The case of Mrs. Rene B. Morrow at Chicago who was charged with the murder of her husband, Charles B. Morrow, was ended when the jury returned a verdict of acquittal.

Friends in the courtroom, society women, fellow club members and members of the Forty-First Street Presbyterian church, who have loyally stood by her during her ordeal, rushed to her side to offer congratulations. Her face wreathed in smiles, Mrs. Morrow sobbed out her gratitude to her friends, her attorney and the jurymen.

ALLEN IS GIVEN POST

White House Official Will Be Made Assistant Secretary of Treasury.

At Washington, D. C., President Taft will appoint Sherman P. Allen an assistant secretary at the White House offices, to be assistant secretary of the treasury succeeding A. Piatt Andrew, who recently resigned after a row with Secretary MacVeagh.

Mr. Allen formerly was a newspaper man here.

GRAND RAPIDS — Following the recent announcement of the new $2,000,000 Pantlind hotel here, John Bertsch bought property in the heart of the wholesale district and will erect a $100,000 warehouse. The building record for the city so far for this season is greater than for the past ten years.

TICKET IS PUT UP BY PROGRESSIVES

Name L. Whitney Watkins of Jackson for Governor.

Osborn Men Open Fight When State Senator Is Nominated for the Governorship of Michigan.

Jackson, Mich., July 22.—Michigan progressive Republicans divorced themselves absolutely from the Republican party in their state convention here.

By an almost unanimous vote the delegates went on record as favoring the placing of an entire ticket, both state and national, in the field. A few instructed delegates voted against the move in order to record the sentiment of their home counties, but explained to the convention that they personally were for separation from the old party.

Members of the state central committee recommended the following men for state offices:

For governor—L. Whitney Watkins of Jackson, state senator.

For United States senator—Theodore M. Joslin of Adrian.

Friends of Governor Osborn protested vigorously but futilely against the indorsement by the convention of a candidate for governor. They insisted the people should not be offered any suggestions regarding candidates. When the convention indorsed Senator Watkins, circulation of Osborn petitions were begun immediately.

Henry M. Wallace of Detroit was unanimously elected Michigan national committeeman.

Presidential electors were named by district as follows:

N. H. Hill, N. S. Dean, Walter S. Powers, F. R. Belknap, G. A. Hahn, Harry S. Chapman, E. S. Black, Orson B. Randall, R. J. McDonald, Luther B. Beckwith, Sherman D. Eldrey, Bates G. Burt.

Electors at large were:

Virgil E. Hungerford, Charles James, C. C. Declampo.

The state central committee chose two men from each district as follows:

1—Charles P. O'Neil, P. G. Davis.
2—John I. Beck, R. T. Dobson.
3—F. A. Rothlisberger, J. A. Wagner.
4—J. Mark Harvey, R. W. Sherwood.
5—Oscar Brenan, William D. Cline.
6—Ira T. Sayer, W. S. Kellogg.
7—Jefferson T. Brown, W. T. Bope.
8—Charles H. Ganshaw, Edward G. Mason.
9—Frank S. Burbank, E. B. Dana.
10—Luther G. Beckwith, E. L. Gardner.
11—J. D. Dunwoodie, Dr. Nelson Abbott.
12—W. T. Feetham and another member yet to be named.

BAY CITY — Beautiful, young Mrs. Myrtle Stanley is dead, murdered by her husband; Norman Stanley, the husband, is dead by his own hand, and Police Sergeant Harry Anderson is in the hospital with three charges of shot in his body, fired there by Stanley. Sergeant Anderson was shot while trying to arrest Stanley. Mrs. Stanley left her husband a short time ago and this, it is said, is the cause of the shooting.

GRAND RAPIDS — After he had called upon the young woman and was escorting her down town Clarence Jinks proposed to Miss Ines Valkeburg. She as suddenly rejected him. Jinks then thrust a knife three times into his breast and fell unconscious to the walk. He narrowly missed puncturing his heart in his attempt at self-destruction. When he is discharged from the hospital he will face prosecution for disorderly conduct.

JOHN MITCHELL SENTENCED

Federalton of Labor Official Is Given Nine Months' Term.

At Washington, D. C., John Mitchell, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, was sentenced in the District of Columbia supreme court to nine months' imprisonment for contempt of court growing out of the Buck's Stove and Range company case.

An appeal was taken and $4,000 bail furnished to abide by the decision of the upper court.

In the same case President Samuel Gompers recently was sentenced to one year and Secretary Morrison to six months.

NEW CABINET POSITION

House Passes Measure Providing for Another Department.

At Washington, D. C. the house passed the bill to create a department of labor, the secretary of which shall have a place in the cabinet. The measure long has been pressed by organized labor, and now goes to the senate.

The new department would relieve the department of commerce and labor of much of its authority. All bureaus dealing with questions affecting labor or capital would be transferred to the new department as would the bureau of Immigration.

The measure was hard fought in the house.

ROSENTHAL'S MURDER

New York Citizens to Raise Funds for a Private Investigation.

The murder plot in New York city which brought Herman Rosenthal to his death that the gambler might tell no tales is being hourly brought closer to the "police system."

Citizens have promised funds for a private investigation by private detectives to clear up the mystery in which the police are involved. With the advent of these detectives five distinct investigations will be under way.

William Shapiro, part owner of the "murder car," is giving the public prosecutor information by piecemeal that strengthens the belief that the slaying of Rosenthal did not spring from the enmity of a gamblers' clique.

Shapiro admits that when his motor car was engaged he was told that policemen had knowledge of what was going to happen and that nobody was in any danger.

"Bald Jack" Rose, gambler and a friend of Police Lieutenant Becker, who surrendered himself to the police, has given the name of a gambler and a gun fighter who was in the car the night that Rosenthal was shot down in front of the Hotel Metropole. His name is Schapps, and detectives are searching the town for him.

RIVER BILL PASSES SENATE

Measure Carries $6,000,000 for Improvement on the Mississippi.

At Washington, D. C., the rivers and harbors appropriation bill, carrying about $33,000,000, including $6,000,000 for Mississippi river improvement, was passed by the senate when the conference report was adopted.

JACKSON — A further extension of time of sixty days was granted by Judge Parkinson in the Milton J. Daly bribery case, the defense asking the extension so that a bill of exceptions could be settled or arrangements made for a second new trial Daly was tried and convicted three months ago of a charge of bribing Allan N. Armstrong, former warden of Jackson prison. The defense asked for time in which to prepare a bill of exceptions or ask for a new trial, and this time was fixed at ninety days. The time expired July 17. The extension of time was given only with the understanding that the case would be placed on the October calendar of the supreme court.

MAKING RAIN

An epidemic of "rain making" has broken out in various parts of the country originating in some experiments made by C. W. Post near Post City Texas. Battle Creek has been making arrangements to compel rain out of the heavens at any moment. Prof. Willis L. Moore, chief of the Weather Bureau is quite digusted with these efforts of the experimenters and says in all seriousness, that rain cannot be produced by explosions and says in effect, "It can't be done, and that's all there is to it."

The car was beautiful decorated in yellow (by Mrs. Doe) and the ladies each carried large boquets of yellow flowers. they were heartily cheered all along the route the men tipping their hats and shouting their welcome, the ladies responding by waving their flowers.

Sewing Made Easy.

Persons with the store window habit have found something to stare at in a little notion store. Stretching across the window are three strands of No. 40 white thread still attached to the spools. Suspended from each thread are twenty-five needles.

"My little daughter threaded them," the storekeeper said. "They are a wonderful convenience for people with such poor eyes that they can't see to thread their own needles. Here is a whole bunch of them already threaded and all the sewer has to do is to unwind the thread until she has the desired length for the first needle, then slip the other needles along until it comes their turn. Maybe in some neighborhoods that contrivance wouldn't be appreciated very highly, but here it is a real blessing. Within a few blocks of the store are three old ladies' homes. The old ladies like to sew, but they have found it impossible to keep their needles threaded. Now that job is already done for them for the original cost of the needles and thread."—New York Press.

Bride's Puzzling Order.

An absent-minded bride, anxious not to forget to order two chickens for dinner, repeated to herself as while clearing away the breakfast things: "Grocer — chickens — grocer — chickens."

The words became confused in her mind, so that when she went to the telephone she asked: "Have you any nice young grocers?"

"Why—why—yes," replied an astonished voice at the other end of the wire.

"Well," said the bride, "send me two, dressed."

"Dressed?" said the voice, more astonished than before.

"Why, no," answered the bride, "I believe you may send them undressed. If my husband comes home early he will wring their necks and the cook can dress them."

Obituary

DEATH OF JOHN I KNAPP

Of Adrian Tuesday Evening July 23

John I. Knapp of Adrian, a life long resident of Lenawee County passed away Tuesday at 3 o'clock p. m. at the Colonial Home at the age of 86 years.

Mr. Knapp has been identified with the interests of Lenawee Co. and was an active worker in the Lenawee Pioneer and Historical society and some years ago wrote a history of the county. He was one of those who met under the Oaks in Jackson when the Republican party came into being and was an active member of that party. He belonged to the Masonic fraternity and enjoyed the meetings of his order until his extreme deafness came upon him. He was a member of the first Baptist church of Adrian and was deeply interested in its various lines of work On Sunday he called for an envelope and went through the motions of preparing it for church seeming to realize that it was Sunday

The funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the First Baptist Church under the auspices of the Masonic Lodge with burial in the family lot in Oakville cemetery

Mr. Knapp will be remembered by many in Tecumseh as he has visited here many times in past years.

MRS. SUSAN MANGUS

Mrs. Susan Mangus a former resident of Tecumseh died at the home of her daughter Mrs. Sarah Thornton in Lyons O. Saturday July 20 at the age of 82 years 2 mos and 17 days. She leaves to mourn her loss her two daughters Mrs, Julia Hubbard of Galveston Texas and Mrs. Sarah Thornton of Lyons, O., four grand children seven great grand children and a host of friends.

MRS. FRANK DAVIDSON

Elizabeth C. Laycock, only daughter of Henry and Susan Laycock was born at Leoni, Jackson Co., Michigan Sept. 11, 1840, and died at Tecumseh July 21st 1912.

She came to Tecumseh with her parents when a small girl, attended the High School here. and later taught school.

She was married to Frank Davidson, March 26, 1863, and they started life together on a farm three miles east of Tecumseh. Early in the 60's she gave her heart to God and joined the Methodist church at Ridgeway where she was a faithful and consistent member at the time of her death. To them were born five children, the two oldest dying in infancy leaving three children George Davidson and Mrs. J. W. Camp of Tecumseh and Guy J. Davidson of Detroit, a husband and a host of friends and neighbors to mourn her loss.

For the past five years she has been a patient sufferer, never murmuring or complaining, simply waiting for God to release her as she often said.

To know her was to love her, naturally a home body she was a faithful wife, a loving and devoted mother, Unselfish to an unusual degree. her life was a sacrifice for others. She was "everybody's friend".

The funeral was held at their home in Tecumseh July 23rd the Rev. Scarlett officiating, Interment at the Ridgeway cemetery in the family lot.

Those from out of town who attended the funeral were Guy E. Belton of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. McCann Auten of Milan, Reuben Westfall and wife Moorville, Will Graves and wife, Cambridge, Elmer Ellis and wife, Dundee, Cyrus Smith and wife, John Britton and Mrs. Ed Bachman of Britton and Mrs. Chas. Dixon of Adrian.

Two children came to bless their home, Mrs. Maude E. Scott who passed away Feb 6, 1911 and Mrs. Mabel Cornell who with the husband and four grandchildren are left to mourn her loss. She passed away July 21, at the age of 59 years 1 mo. 3 days,

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks for the kind assistance of the friends and neighbors, and for the beautiful floral pieces and especially to the ladies of the M. B. A.

Mr. Benjamin Hindes,
Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Cornell.

Spanish Soil Yields $656 an Acre.

The most intensively cultivated region in Europe is that part of the province of Valencia, Spain, which lies between the mountains and the Mediterranean. It has a rainfall of only about seventeen inches a year, but so fertile is the soil and so skilled are its workers that it produces crops worth an average of $656 an acre, according to a report sent to Washington by Consul Robert Frazer, Jr.

There are districts, he says, where 100 acres support 160 families, and where single families live on the product of four-tenths of an acre. Farms are rented for $29.50 an acre, and the tenant pays 45 cents an hour for pumped water, which flows in a stream of 200 gallons per minute.

Almost all farming is done by hand, as minute attention is given to crops and even to individual plants. The average production of the principal crops is as follows, in metric tons of 2,204 pounds: Oranges, 400,000 tons; olives, 65,000; carob beans, 72,000; peanuts, 13,500; melons, 36,000; grapes, 87,000; peppers, 12,000; tomatoes, 17,000; wheat, 62,000; barley, 18,000; corn, 38,000; rice, 200,000.

Tall Tales From the Tall Timbers of Texas

BY SAM JAY

Alvin, Texas,
June 28, 1912.

Dear Editor:—

I am not an expert horticulturist—atmosphere of a high temperature is my specialty—but when I first came down to Brazoria and the immediate Gulf counties, I remarked with some emphasis that these low lying pratiles would not grow peaches or plums, but they DO grow to perfection on the rolling sandy loan land of Northeast Texas.

An interesting country is this piney woods section with its fruit farms, cut-over and standing timber, blossoming trees, vines and luxurious vegetation; its natural park landscaped groves and shady nooks which invite one to rest upon a carpet of health giving pine needles. For me there seems to be an irresistable fascination about pines and I want to go back. I want to renew acquaintance with the gashing fiddlers, the razoobacks and hill-billies; to hear the native Texans discourse on crops democracy and the "money power," to eat a chicken dinner with indigenous vegetables and fruits prepared by the incomparable negro cook; to gaze with admiration mixed with pity on those dark eyed damsels of the forest who dip snuff, chew tobacco and expectorate like a war veteran; and to meet again those industrious progressive folk who are striving for higher developement, not entirely for personal aggrandizement or financial gain, but for the betterment of mankind in general and the good of the State. For the Texan, as a rule, is more loyal to his state than to his country. He cannot forget that she was once a republic in her own right and secretly cherishes the idea that some of the other states are a superflulty; and she could perhaps be more independent if it were not for existing industrial conditions which can and will be altered, Nine-tenths of the raw material and products are shipped and labeled with artistic, embellishing touches and then returned to us for consumption.

Some economists claim that the present system is best; that it is cheaper to export raw material and import finished products, while others maintain that a farm, county, state or country should, as far as possible, raise and manufacture its own necessities and sell the surplus.

Perhaps we'll arrive later on.

An observant stranger visiting this part of this country would gain a lasting impression of the extravagant buying and prodigal waste that is almost universal. In the timber counties, millions of dollars worth of valuable wood is burned or left to rot by lumber companies and private individuals By-products are not considered.

Seventy-five miles to the southward from a sawmill burg is a bustling prairie town where ordinary cordwood may be selling at nine dollars per cord Machinery, tools, clothing, etc. rust or rot quickly in this damp climate and the people of both sex who have not reached the years of discretion, are addicted to the wearing of flimsy, fancy articles of adornment, which, however much or little they enhance personal charms, are soon thrown aside.

But I haven't come in contact with much suffering or poverty on this account for there seems to be enough for all.

To resume our gastronomical talk or agricultural essay—which stopped at the pecaches as they unsually conclude a dinner with the exception of the nuts which can also be raised here in the shape of pecans and English walnuts—let me proceed to name a few of the counties and towns with their prominent and peculiar features and characteristics. For instance: Brazoria for strawberries, autos and silk socks, Hidalgo and Cameron for celery, cabbage and watermelons, Webb for onions, Wharton Co. for potatoes and Cherokee for tomatoes. Polk Co. raises hawgs, hill-billies and H—l. Rusk, Shelby and Smith counties for peaches and Hardin for oil. Bexar Co. raises Mexicans and r-r-revolutions, Sabine Co. on the extreme east, raises long leaf pine. Crane Co. is given over principally to quadruples there being but sixty-seven bipeds genus humans bipedus, to be found within the fences. Chambers and Sefferson for rice and Ellis Co. holds record for cotton. Some counties are especially adapted to the raising of corn which produces John Barley corn and that raises kinds of ructions. Garza Co, is owned principally by C. W. Post who journeys there occasionally to shoot bob-cats and jack-rabbits.

Wm. S. Bryan, "the peerless leader and silver tongued orator of The Platte," owns a farm in South Texas where he raises onions, which may account for the vigor and frequency of his political "come-backs."

Wm H. Taft may be obliged to draw on the resources of the family ranch at Taft, Texas, before this political mix up is settled.

Of the two hundred and forty-nine counties in the State, there are a few rough and barren ones but it is impossible to describe them all in detail and THE HERALD is not publishing atlases or encyclopaedias.

TO BE CONCLUDED

Long Hours of Miners.

Fourteen hours was considered a day's work for miners during the early part of the last century.

In Society

ENTERTAINED AT BRIDGE

Mrs. G N. Stacy entertained the bridge club Tuesday evening. There were five tables played. The guest of honor was Mrs. Frank Turner of Flint who is spending a few weeks with her sister Mrs. Stacy. The guests from out of town were Mrs. Ed Baird of Dayton, Ohio, Mrs. Changworth of Toledo, Mrs. E. Roy Mead of Chicago.

SHOWERS

No, not a genuine shower of rain, but a blue willow ware shower for the bride-elect Miss Helen Wilson. Some fourteen of the young friends of Miss Helen met by special invitation at the pleasant home of Mrs. Howard Bredow on Wednesday at 6 o'clock p. m. and after an elaborate supper served on this favorite ware, the bride to be was instructed by her hostess to seek and find, the search was a long one, but most successful, and a fine assortment of blue willow ware dishes rewarded the searcher. A most delightful evening's visit then followed and when the guests departed at a late hour they again showered their friend with their loving wishes for her future happiness

And then on Thursday evening the same crowd assembled at Adams Park and enjoyed a pot-luck supper, after which the bride-to-be received a miscellaneous shower consisting of linen, china and kitchen utensils. After a pleasant hour spent in visiting the party adjourned to the picture show and this completed the evening's entertainment.

THE DIGNIFIED DOZEN

The Dignified Dozen were entertained Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs, R. B. Gillespie. A fine supper was served and the usual happenings of this meeting, and a social good time were enjoyed by each member of this band who have clung together for so many years.

MEMBERS OF LENAWEE BAR PLAN BIG OUTING.

The Lenawee County Bar Association through their committee, are sending out invitations for their annual feast and sports day to be held at Devils Lake July, 31. They will entertain their brother Attorneys of of Hillsdale County.

They are training strenuously for the ball game and expect to have two strong teams in the field.

CADILLAQUA

The Toledo Blade has the following in its issue of July 23 which expresses the situation in Detroit during this week of pageantry and show.

Officially, the celebration which is now going on in Detroit is in honor of Antoine de la Motte Cadillac, that stout-hearted explorer who was responsible for the beginnings of Detroit. The celebration bears a name in general aspect suggestive of Cadillac, though in sound suggestive of something the matter with the steam pipes.

But in reality the festival is in honor of the automobile, the manufacture of which brought Detroit out of the deadly complacency of a city which was prepared to admit that it had seen its liveliest, if not its best days. The community pays tribute to the accelerator, the thing that woke it up, the restorer of good times and the stimulant of ambition and pride.

Behind the thankfulness to Cadillac's judgement, is a truer gratitude—that for the judgement of the manufacturers who picked out Detroit for their enterprises. Underneath the pageantry of the past is the greater love for the present. It is a fine thing to have a romantic foundation. It is a better thing to be based on a busy and growing industry.

AMUSEMENTS

DANIEL BOONE ON THE TRAIL

What the Little Rock, Arkansas Daily Democrat has to say of the Robt. H, Harris' show that is to appear here Tuesday night July 30th.

The citizens of Little Rock were royally entertained with a new form of amusement last night. The Robt. H. Harris Daniel Boone on the Trail company presented a three hours show last night and it is safe to say that never in the history of Little Rock did so many people gather together to see a show except to the biggest of big circuses. It teaches a grand lesson, showing the hardships and deprivations of the early settlers of our country. The big tent is arranged supplied with scenery, mechanical effects and show parphernalia to perduction in a creditable manner. The parts are well played by the members of the company. The action of the drama is fast and the comedy very strong. Perhaps the happiest character in the production is the old negro servant, who follows "Marse Col Boone" through thick and thin, The big audience seemed to be out for a good time, and if applause and laugh count, everybody throughly enjoyed the production. A special free entertainment will be given in front of the big tent previous to the big show to which everyone is cordially invited.

Appropriate Title.

"Farewell!" was the title of a poem sent to a certain newspaper, says the Laclede County Republican. "It's a good thing the gifted authoress bade it good-by," the editor remarked, "because she will never see it again."

BAD ACCIDENT

Little Arlene Gillispie oldest daughter of Mrs. G. B. Gillespie met with a very painful accident, Wednesday afternoon. She with several other children was catching a ride on the gravel wagon and was seated on the back, when the driver whipped up his horses and the sudden start threw her to the ground, breaking both bones in her right arm, one bone breaking through the skin. Dr. Conklin was called and reduced the fracture, and the little miss is as comfortable as she can be under the circumstances.

WHAT'S THE REASON?

Many Tecumseh People in Poor Health Without Knowing the Cause.

There are scores of people who drag out a miserable existence without realizing the cause of their suffering. Day after day they are racked with backache and headache; suffer from nervousness, dizziness, weakness, langour and depression. Likely the kidneys have fallen behind in their work of filtering the blood and that is the root of the trouble Look to your kidneys, assist them in their work— give them the help they need. You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills— endorsed by over one hundred thousand people, and by your neighbor in Tecumseh.

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective, At that time my kidney were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame and aching back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not taken them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co. Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

Remeber the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Summer colds are hard to get rid of and frequently lead to asthma, bronchitis, and hay fever. Do not let your cold get a hold on you, but use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for quick relief. W. H. Allen, Chelsea, Wis., says: "We prefer Foley's Honey and tar Compound to other coughs and colds. It will ward off a cold if taken in time" Contains no opiates. For sale by all druggists.

George L. Higbie, Manton, Mich., used Foley Kidney Pills for kidney and bladder trouble. He says: "I find for my case no ther medicine equals Foley Kidney Pills for beneficial effect." They are a safe and reliable medicine for kidney trouble and rheumatism. Contain no harmful drugs. For sale by all druggists.

JUDGE HANFORD RESIGNS

Washington Jurist, in Danger of Impeachment, Quits Position.

Judge C. H. Hanford, western district of Washington, in the Ninth circuit, notified President Taft that he had tendered his resignation. The formal resignation, he stated, is on the way in a letter and the president, it was announced at the White House, will take no action until the document reaches his hands.

Representative Victor Berger of Wisconsin, the Socialist member of the house, who introduced the resolution which was adopted calling for an investigation of charges against the federal judge looking to his impeachment by the senate, will take no further steps. Upon learning of the judge's action he announced that the voluntary resignation closes the case, so far as he is concerned, and that he will take no further proceedings.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

GRAND RAPIDS.— A rather peculiar phase in the sudden death of Frederic P. Wilcox, a wealthy attorney here came to light in the register of deeds office. Four hundred and five assignments of mortgages were filed for transfer to his widow. They also covered the mortgages assigned to him by her, p to his demise The documents represent a value of more than half a million dollars. The peculiar phase is that heretofore the register of deeds had no record of such mortgages, the mortgagors being, it is represented, non-residents of Michigan. A gigantic task confronts the county and state officials in figuring out the mortgage tax law and collecting it. The amount of the state inheritance tax law provisions will also be large.

MARSHALL — The Calhoun Democrats held a conference here and decided to support the following for county officers: Probate judge, W. P. Porter, Marshall; Sheriff, Frank B. Garrick, Pennfield; clerk, W. A. Cady, Battle Creek; register of deeds, Charles Standiford, Athens; treasurer, Walter Watson, Albion; drain commissioner, Ed Ansterburg, Albion township; coroners, M. S. Delavergne, Marshall and Oscar G. Hubbard, Albion. Dr. Palmer will get the united support of both counties for state senator. Roy M. Ludlum of Battle Creek will be named for prosecutor. He ran on the Republican ticket six years ago but is now a Wilson man.

IRON MOUNTAIN — A successful attempt was made to destroy Mayor R. L. Hammond's home with dynamite. The dynamite was placed under the kitchen floor and set off with a long piece of fuse. The kitchen was entirely destroyed and furniture and glassware in other rooms smashed. Mrs. Hammond was the only one home at the time and was sitting on the front porch. No clue has been found as to who did the dastardous deed. Ex-Mayor Miller's home was wrecked in the same manner several years ago.

TRAVERSE CITY — Mr. John I. Gibson of the Western Michigan Development bureau, returned from a trip abroad. He received an order for 100 carloads of apples while in England, and his first work will be to secure the apples as soon as possible. A local association has been formed to take charge of the work in this county and a start has been made in other counties in this territory. While in Ireland, Mr. Gibson made arrangements to bring 100 families to settle in western Michigan.

CADILLAC — While alone and with one portion of his body paralyzed, G. R. and I. Operator C. E. Northway, succeeded in extinguishing the blazing roof of his shanty at Missaukee Junction, and saving the building. Northway is learning to be left handed and his long service for the company secured him a job as soon as he could walk, following the stroke.

BATTLE CREEK—"No more bathing will be allowed in Goguac Lake," was the edict of the board of public works. Lake Goguac is the source of the city's water supply and from one to 1,000 persons bathe in the placid waters daily throughout the summer. The board figures that this practice contaminates the water and that it must be stopped.

FOR WOMEN ONLY.

That is the nature of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—the one remedy for women which contains no alcohol and no habit-forming drugs. Made from native medicinal forest roots. Dr. Pierce tells its every ingredient on the bottle-wrapper. Prominent physicians and some of the best medical authorities endorse these ingredients as being the very best known remedies for ailments and weaknesses peculiar to women.

This is what MRS. GENETTI E. COFFEY, of Longstreet, Ky., says: "I feel it my duty to write and tell you what your medicines have done for me. I was a great sufferer for six years from a trouble peculiar to women, but I am thankful to say, after taking four bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' I am not bothered with that dreadful disease any more. I feel like a new woman. When I first wrote you for advice I only weighed 115 pounds—now I weigh 135.

"I thank you very much for your kindness. You have been as a father to me in advising me what to do, so may God bless you in every effort you put forth for good.

"I hope this testimonial will be the means of some poor suffering woman seeking health."

MRS. COFFEY.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition, answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know.

Predicted 1912 as "Black Year."

Astrology is the pseudo science which essays to foretell future events by studying the position of the stars and ascertaining what their influence may be on human destiny. The Chinese, the Egyptians, the Chaldeans, the Romans, and most other ancient nations were implicit believers in astrology, as were the later Jews, the Arabs, with other Mohammedan races, and the Christians in mediaeval Europe. So we see that the science has a long and honorable record behind it. "Young Moore," the British astrologer, predicted long ago the social and political troubles of recent days. He wrote of 1912 as the "black year," and tells us how it is done. He says: "Genuine astrological horoscopes and forecasts are based exclusively upon exact astronomical and mathematic calculations, and the trained scientific astrologer will calculate the past or future of any person by the same methods that the astronomer employs to calculate the return of a comet, the new and full moon, eclipses, high and low tides, weather changes, and other natural phenomena."

Last Co-Eds All Take Honors.

The passing of co-education at Wesleyan University is made notable by the fact that every young woman in the graduating class this year, which is to be the last class of women to receive diplomas from the university, has been awarded honorary membership in the high scholarship society of Phi Beta Kappa. Only a small proportion of the men received this honor.

One of the arguments which the men students have advanced against co-education, which becomes extinct at Wesleyan this year, is that the young women have taken scholarship honors which otherwise would have gone to men.—Washington Evening

I Love You

By Luella Mabelle Sidney

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Ellerton Fuller lay stretched out in his easy chair. The cigar between his lips had gone out. Across his knees the evening paper lay unread, while he stared gloomily into the fire.

That morning he had received notice from the firm that he was to take charge of the branch house in San Francisco for a year, and that he would have to start west the next week.

He had been dismayed, for it meant separation from the girl to whom he had been devoted for a long time.

In the evening, as soon as possible after a hurried dinner, he had called upon her, and, finding her alone, had told her of his love, and had asked her to marry him.

She had refused him. When pressed for her reason she had said that although she liked him, she did not care for him enough to marry him.

"But you must like me a little, or you would never have let me see so much of you in the past year."

The anxious question in his voice hurt her.

"It is just because I like you so much, and respect you so highly, that I don't want to do you the injustice of marrying you without loving you. Every man has the right to be loved with the mind, body and spirit of the woman who marries him. You would be defrauded of that right."

"I am willing to run the risk."

"You may be now, but later on we would both feel the lack of the complete love, and you would be restless and unhappy."

"If I were here and could have this time with you I might make you love me."

"That is something beyond our knowledge."

"Will you let me write to you while I am away? That will help you to remember me. All of your other friends will be here with you, and one of them might win you."

She hesitated, then said. "No. I don't care to correspond with any man."

"Then I am to go away and leave you for a whole year, without hearing from you?"

"It would be far better to do that than to raise false hopes."

"Make me just one promise before I go. If you are free when I get back, may I have another chance to try and win you?"

"Why—yes, you may if you still feel the same then."

All the way home he was haunted by the question, "How can I teach her to love me when there are to be so many thousand miles between, us? A year is an eternity, and some other fellow will win her."

"There is nothing to do," he thought hopelessly. "A man cannot force himself on a woman who does not want him, and even letters are denied to me."

The whole world was wrong: the woman he loved refused him; he must leave his friends and go among strangers for a year. Even his cigar failed to bring comfort to him.

With a sigh he picked up the paper. "Well, I will keep busy, that will help a little," he thought. He glanced listlessly over the pages. A short paragraph at the end of a column caught his eyes. The words "I Love You" were the title.

The article said that a writer had compiled a book telling how to say "I love you," in every language known to man. He read it a second time. An inspiration came to him, and he cried, "the very thing."

The next morning when Dorothy Roberts came down to breakfast she found a letter beside her plate. There was just one sheet of paper, and in the middle was written,

"I love you."

"Faithfully yours,
"ELLERTON FULLER."

She studied it with a puzzled frown. "What an odd thing for him to do," she thought.

She put the letter into her desk, and in the hurry of the day forgot it.

A box of violets came late that afternoon. The card on the top read:

"Mr. Ellerton Fuller."
"Faithfulness."

Being a true woman, she was pleased with the gift, and the pleasure did not fade until the next morning, when she found beside her plate a letter in the same fine handwriting. All it contained was:

"Je t'aime.

"Faithfully yours,
"ELLERTON FULLER."

"Well of all the silly creatures," she thought, "what absurd thing will he do next?"

In the afternoon the violets came with the one word, "faithfulness" on his card.

Day after day it was the same. Each morning the letter was at her plate, but the words "I love you" were in a different language. Each afternoon the flowers came.

She was at first vexed, then amused, then really angry. Finally she wrote him a formal note asking him to discontinue sending them.

The answer came back, "I am sorry that you do not like the letters. I intend to win you if I can. I must have some way to make you care for me, Let me correspond with you regularly and I will stop the other letters."

She made no reply, and as the letters continued to come she put them away unopened.

One rainy day in cleaning out her desk she took up the fast accumulating pile of them. Curiosity to see in what language it was written made her open the top one. She concluded it must be Chinese from the characters, and burst out laughing at the absurdity of it all.

Amusement at a thing is only another form of interest for it; so she began each day to open the letters as they came. It was fun to try to trace out what language they were in. She began haunting libraries and hunting obscure tongues, many of which baffled her completely.

But she always knew what the words meant, even if she did not know the language, and the letters began to interest her.

She knew that Ellerton Fuller was across the continent, and yet twice each day came a message of his love and loyalty to her.

A man who could be so faithful deserved to be loved, and she began to worry because she could not love him. This led to her thinking of him more and more. At last not an hour of the day passed without something suggesting him to her thoughts, and her life seemed full of him, of his letters, and of his flowers.

One morning there was no letter. She looked again and again through her mail with the same result. Thinking that perhaps the maid had been mistaken, she searched through all the other letters on the table. Nothing!

Perhaps it had been delayed and would come by the next post; but she was restless and broke an engagement to stay at home all the morning and listen for the postman's whistle.

When the afternoon brought neither letter nor violets, she was filled with anxiety. She forced herself to go through dinner, but told her mother that she would not go to the opera, as she had a severe headache.

"Your cheeks are unusually red, my dear," said her mother. "You must have taken cold, for you are feverish. You had better take a hot lemonade and go to sleep early."

"I could not sleep. I will lie down and read in the library."

About half past nine the bell rang, and the maid brought up a card.

"I told him you were ill, ma'am, and might not be able to see him," she said.

Dorothy glanced at the card. It was familiar enough. "Mr. Ellerton Fuller." The blood rushed over her face.

"Say that I will be down at once."

She held on to the banister for support, and slowly stepped from stair to stair, for she trembled so that she feared she would fall.

"Good evening," she said, putting out a hand which shook in spite of her efforts for self control.

Ellerton Fuller took her hand in both of his and looked her over eagerly, studying each feature again and again.

"I have been counting the very minutes until this hour for the last six months. Have I won or lost in my struggle to make you love me? My love for you has grown from day to day, until it did not seem as if I could wait to get across the continent. Dorothy, tell me, do you, can you love me as I do you?"

The girl did not answer nor look up, but something in her downcast face and trembling figure told him the truth, and as with reverent hands he lifted her face for his kiss, he said, "Thank God for the many ways of saying 'I love you.'"

TO STOP VOLCANIC ACTION

Scientist Believed He Would Be Able to "Chain Up" the Streams of Lava.

In 1767 Sir William Hamilton declared that were he to live long enough he might solve the problem of chaining up the lava streams in volcanoes. As it was, after studying the crater of an extinct volcano, he foretold with exactitude when an eruption might be expected. It has now been established by experiment that the earth grows warmer as the zone of volcanic activity is approached. Hence it is that a German who has made a great study of earthquake and volcanic phenomena advocates the establishing of volcanic stations for observation purposes, these to be located about the area chosen at certain distances from each other and connected with wires and a registering machine. First of all, the temperature of the soil and its average fluctuations are to be exhaustively studied, with a view to finding a means of dissipating the energy in the interior of the earth. The earth is to be sounded in the volcanic area and a system of wires and electric batteries introduced at a level which must necessarily be very deep. It is pointed out that a wire system under the earth connected with one above would make possible the study of volcanic action, as it is registered step by step on the recorder. When this shall be accomplished, attention can be directed to diverting the energy concentrated on a particular point before the volcano has a chance to get fairly started.

It is said that the Italian government has been approached in the matter and has considered proposals with reference to a study of Vesuvius.—Harper's Weekly.

Find Use for Waste Product.

In Wilmington, Del., a use is being found for the waste products of paper mills which have been accumulating for years and have been thought valueless. One factory has dumped over 100,000 tons of residuum from its boilers on the neighboring flats, covering about eight acres. This is now to be treated by a process for extracting the carbon for the market and the rest will be converted into fertilizer.

ADVICE MANY MIGHT FOLLOW

"Live Suddenly," Said Mrs. Brown to Friend, and Results Amply Justified the Counsel.

Mrs. Brown went in to see Mrs. Smith, whom she found, tired and pale, trying to sew with the baby on her lap.

"Life does seem hard," Mrs. Smith said, after a little ordinary conversation; "I've just had a letter from my sister wanting me to come there for a fortnight and bring the baby. It looks like heaven to only think of it, but, of course, I can't go."

"Why not?" asked Mrs. Brown.

"Oh, it would be perfectly impossible. There's the sewing and the cleaning, besides everything else. I've got to stay here."

"Suppose you died suddenly—what then?"

"O, then, of course, they'd just have to get along somehow."

"Then why not live suddenly, and let them get along somehow, just the same?"

Mrs. Smith stared.

"Live suddenly," she said. "Why, I never heard of such a thing!"

But, nevertheless, Mrs. Brown managed to get her to do it, and the next week she went off for a fortnight and didn't come back for a month.

What happened at home was like a miracle.

Elsie and Amy, whom their mother never allowed to take the least care, took all the care and made father and the boys have a regular picnic. The boys turned in and helped clean the house. Mrs. Brown cut out the sewing and showed the girls how to do it.

The whole family took hold exactly as they would have done had the wife and mother been suddenly snatched away.

Only, as she was just "suddenly alive" instead, there was joy instead of sorrow, looking ahead, instead of looking backward.

And then what a homecoming, with the baby rosy and all its back teeth out, and mother not tired, not pale, not fidgety, not nervous.

Really and truly alive for the first time in years. What a stupid lot of big children we are, anyway, fumbling over dirty old methods, when the new ones are showing clean, smiling faces everywhere! Here's to no more unnecessary people "dying suddenly." Let's all "live suddenly" and be happy forever after.—The Nautilus.

FOUR DROWN IN RIVER

Fatal Affair Occurs Not Far from Kankakee, Ill.

Women Venture Out Too Far While Bathing—Two Bodies Are Recovered.

Kankakee, Ill., July 29.—Four young people were drowned in the Kankakee river about four miles below this city at 5 p. m. The bodies of two of the victims were recovered later.

The dead:

Louis Burkhalter, Kankakee.
Walter Webster, Hammond, Ind.
Mrs. Paul Mastello, Hammond, Ind.
Miss Vida Hemstock, Hammond, Ind.

The Hammond people had come here Saturday for a week's outing, and Mr. and Mrs. Burkhalter drove down the river to visit them. In the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mastello and Vida Hemstock went into the river bathing. They had been in the water but a short time when Mr. Mastello noticed the women were going toward the center of the stream. He shouted a caution, but just then they sank into the water with agonizing screams. Louis Burkhalter and Walter Webster sprang into the stream to save them, but were unable to do so and all perished together.

Mr. Mastello, although a good swimmer, was too far afay to reach them in time. The bodies of Burkhalter and Vida Hemstock were recovered.

The place where the drowning occurred is a very treacherous part of the river. The victims were probably drawn under by whirling currents. Six deaths have occurred in this same place.

Killed by Blast at a Mine.

Calumet, Mich., July 29.—Ernest Elliott, a well-known cricket player, was killed and George Duncan was blinded while working in the Calumet and Hecla mines, when miners, in drilling into an old hole, exploded a stick of dynamite.

HOLDS OUT FOR $30,000

Jack Johnson Refuses to Fight Joe Jeannette.

Ebony Champion Says He Is Going to Retire Labor Day, and Hasn't Time to Train.

Elkhart, Ind., July 29.—Billy Gibson is on his way back to New York with Dan McKettrick, after having spent twenty-four hours endeavoring to make Jack Johnson take $20,000 for his end to fight Joe Jeanette at Madison Square Garden. Johnson stuck to his demand of $30,000 and, as Gibson would not igve him any more than $20,000, their trip was unsuccessful. Mr. Gibson cannot understand Johnson's refusal to accept the largest amount ever offered a fighter for a ten-round contest with no decision.

McKettrick maintains that with Johnson it is a case of sure defeat by Jeanette. McKettrick was so anxious to get Johnson in the ring that he agreed to accept almost nothing for Jeannette's services and further agreed to give Johnson Jeannette's end of the pictures, but Johnson would listen to nothing but thirty thousand dollars' guarantee.

Johnson says he will retire on Labor Day and has announced that under no consideration will he make the trip to Australia or accept the offer of $30,000 made by the Paris club to box Jeannette.

GEN. AUBERT TO LEAD FEDERALS

Will Conduct Strenuous Campaign against Rebels.

DISPLACES GENERAL HUERTA

New Commander to Pursue Enemy with Small, Mobile Bands of Troops and Fight Orozco in His Own Way.

El Paso, Tex., July 29.—The northern Mexico campaign against the rebels will hereafter be carried on by General Trucy Aubert, an intrepid cavalry manager, in place of General Victorieno Heurta, who made such a military fizzle of the attempt to trap and capture Orozco's army at Bachimba.

Aubert is planning to fight the rebels in the same fashion that they have decided to fight, in small mobile bands. He is planning to use as much cavalry as possible and to follow the rebel bands into the hills with small bands and fight it out with them. Heurta was keeping the entire federal army together with a ponderous artillery corps and much infantry and was proceeding only along the railroad by train.

Already a large part of the federal cavalry has been transferred to the vicinity of the W. R. Hearst ranch, east of Madera and west of Chihuahua City. It is in that region that a battle is expected in a few days between the rebels under command of Colonel Castaneda, chief of staff to Orozco, and the federals.

It is reported in Juarez that the rebels sent from Casas Grandes Saturday to Corralitos and Ojitos have met the federals and that they have been fighting. There is no confirmation of this, but it is considered probable by the rebel leaders. Daily brushes are occurring between the rebel advance guard in Sonora, under General Campa, and the federals who are defending the state under General Sanjines.

Forced exactions of money from Chinese and Spaniards by the rebels ar ereported from Casas Grandes and everything is closed tightly in Juarez, following the burning of several stores and the partial looting of a liquor house. Many merchants fear the federals will not find any city when they come to take it, after the rebels abandon it.

TRIAL OF DARROW NEAR END

Evidence and Arguments Will Be Finished Within Next Few Days.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 29.—The end of the Clarence S. Darrow bribery trial seems to be in sight. The trial began on May 15. Both sides agree that less than a week will be required to complete the evidence, and that with a reasonable time limit established for arguments, the jury will take the case early next week.

The defendant is expected to occupy the center of the stage at the trial for the greater part of the intervening time, first as witness and then as counsel in the arguments.

Woman Crippled by Burns.

Wabash, Ind., July 29.—While preparing dinner Mrs. Harry Pratt lost consciousness and fell on the stove. Both arms were badly burned and she will be a cripple for life.

URGE PLAN FOR FIXING PRICES

Members of Stanley Committee Issue Own Report.

ENDORSE GARY-PERKINS IDEA

Would Have Federal Commission Created to Make Prices of Products of Great Industrial Corporations.

Washington, July 29. — The Gary-Perkins plan for the creation of a federal commission to fix the prices of the products of industrial corporations is endorsed in a report made public by Representatives Gardner of Massachusetts and Danforth of New York, Republican members of the Stanley steel committee. Representative Gardner and Danforth recommended the enactment of a law under which all interstate corporations would be required to obtain a charter from the federal government before commencing business.

Messrs. Gardner and Danforth believe in effective governmental regulation of the activities of interstate corporations.

Representative Sterling of Illinois, the fourth Republican member of the steel committee, condemns the plan of government price fixing, recommends the enactment of a federal incorporation law and urges the "dissolution of industrial trusts into their integral parts."

Representatives Gardner and Danforth condemn those concerned in the payment of a fee of $62,500,000 to J. P. Morgan & Co. for organizing the United States Steel Corporation. They read the corporation a lecture, urging it to improve labor conditions in its various shops and factories. They charge that the Steel corporation was over capitalized and that the corporation through the medium of the so-called "Gary dinners" fixes "the prices and the independents follow suit."

DOCK STRIKERS TO REMAIN OUT

English Workers Refuse to Surrender to Employers.

NOISY MEETINGS IN LONDON

Men Tear Down Notices of End of Strike and Shout That They Are Anxious to Continue Struggle —Distress Among Them.

London, July 29.—The dock strikers have angrily repudiated the decision of the strike committee of the Transport Workers' Federation declaring the strike at an end and have declared for no surrender to the employers.

At a huge meeting of the strikers at Southwark Park the men called their leaders over the coals in rough language and it was not until something in the nature of an explanation was given that comparative calm was established.

The strike leaders, the members of the committee who had ordered the men back to work, knew long before the meeting that the action which they had taken would be disapproved and went to the park prepared to meet a storm. They knew that the men earlier in the day had torn down copies of the manifesto of the committee ordering them back to work and had furiously declared that their leaders had sold them out. The opening address of Harry Gosling, the strike leader, was hardly listened to, but when presently he explained that the manifesto was issued to give the men an opportunity of acting as they wished the audience begin to listen to him

"It has been said," said Mr. Gosling, "that the leaders have been forcing the men to continue the strike against their wishes. They now have the opportunity of declaring whether they will resume or not."

Thereupon there were shouts of "No surrender."

When order had been restored Mr. Gosling recounted the efforts that had been made by the strike committee last week to reach a settlement with the employers. He said the strike committee decided to tell the men to resume work if they wanted to.

At this point Ben Tillet, who recently called upon the Deity to strike Lord Devonport dead, arose and said that now the men have been given this mandate the strike will go on more vigorously than ever and that it would lead to a national strike.

Around another platform where leaders were addressing the men, the anger of the strikers was more vehement and several of the speakers were unable to obtain a hearing. At one place the men mounted the platform and seemed on the point of taking violent action.

SAW SLAYING OF ROSENTHAL

Important Witness Appears in Coroner's Court.

SAYS WEBBER WAS ON SCENE

Mayor Gaynor Writes to Police Commissioner Waldo Concerning the Charges Against Police Lieutenant Becker.

New York, July 29.—Testimony that "Bridgie" Webber, in whose gambling place the murder gang which killed Herman Rosenthal is said to have congregated for the assassination, and Jack Sullivan, alleged go-between for certain of the police and the gamblers, were in front of the Hotel Metropole at the time Rosenthal was slain, was given in the coroner's court.

Following these statements Sullivan, who has been held as a material witness, was rearrested on a charge of homicide and Webber was held without bail for the coroner's inquest on Aug. 15.

Louis Crese, a waiter, testified at the hearing that he saw the assassination. Two men sat in the "murder car" while four others who stood near by shot Rosenthal down as he came from the hotel. Crese identified Webber as one he had recognized on the scene, and pointed out Sullivan as having been there immediately after the shooting.

District Attorney Whitman is in receipt of information which leads him to believe that all the five men accused of killing Rosenthal for whom the police sent out a general alarm are in or around New York. He has heard that Harry Horowitz, alias "Gib the Blood;" Sam Schepps and "Whitey" Lewis have been seen on the streets and around their usual places of resort within a week.

Mayor Gaynor took a decided stand in the turmoil that has arisen over the inquiry. He wrote to Police Commissioner Waldo directing that Lieutenant Becker, who was charged by Rosenthal with being in league with the gamblers in this city, shall not be suspended or put on trial without evidence to justify his conviction and dismissal. On the "other charge" that Becker instigated the murder of Rosenthal the mayor said:

"This is possible, but so far there is no evidence to support the charge."

When District Attorney Whitman was asked whether he wished to comment on Mayor Gaynor's letter to the commissioner, he said:

"There is but one issue, and I have but one concern in the matter: Herman Rosenthal, as he himself had announced, was to come to my house to tell me of a corrupt alliance between the police and the law-breakers in the city. He was butchered in the most brilliantly lighted street in New York, because, as I believe, he was coming to me.

"He was shot down by four or more murderers in a block that literally swarmed with policemen. Nearly two weeks have elapsed and the actual murderers are, in my opinion, at large. Any further comment seems superfluous."

CUTS TARIFF ON SUGAR

Republicans Unite and Put Bill Through Senate.

Is Expected to Save $20,000,000 to Consumers and Cut Revenue $5,500,000.

Washington, July 29.—A Republican sugar tariff bill, the first purely Republican revision measure of the present congress, was passed in the senate. Deserting their allies of the last two days, the Republican progressives, by an ironclad agreement with the regulars, succeeded in passing a tariff reduction bill which they believe President Taft will sign if it reaches him.

The sugar bill was a compromise between the Lodge plan, endorsed by the regular Republicans and the Bristow bill, behind which the Progressives lined up. It would cut the present sugar duty of $1.90 to $1.60; would abolish the Dutch standard, under which practically no refined sugar can be imported; and would abolish the 7½ cent "refiners differential," an additional duty on refined sugar, which, it is claimed, has accrued directly to the profit of the sugar refiners.

It is estimated that the sugar tariff reduction, if it becomes effective, will reduce government customs receipts about $5,500,000, while its saving in the retail sugar bill of the nation is estimated at $20,000,000.

BANKER IS SENTENCED

Head of Defunct Concern in Indiana Gets Two to Fourteen Years.

Terre Haute, Ind., July 29.—W. H. Tuber, president of the defunct American State bank, whose attorneys deserted him and who was represented by counsel assigned by the court, after a two weeks' fight for delay pleaded guilty and was sentenced to a term of from two to fourteen years in the state prison.

Embezzlement of $30,000 and bad management threw the bank into the hands of a receiver.

Court Takes Charge of Traction Line After Fatal Collision.

Bluffton, Ind., July 29.—As a result of the head-on collision between two cars on the Marion, Bluffton and Eastern Traction line at Marion, which caused the death of four persons and injured sixty, the Union Savings and Trust company of this city was appointed receiver for the line.

TAKE ARMS FROM MORMONS

Mexican Rebels Make Useful Capture at Casas Grandes.

Casas Grandes, Mex., July 29.—The rebels forced the Mormons at this place to give up all their arms and ammunition and looted the stores in both places.

The Mormons had declared that they would not submit to being deprived of their arms, but the rebels seemed determined and rather than fight the Mormons submitted. It is said the rebels secured 400 rifles and 10,000 cartridges at Colonia Dublan alone.

BELINDA'S WAY

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

At his first meeting with Belinda Howe, Jack Owen determined that the charming girl should become his wife. On and after their tenth meeting he resolved to ask her the all-important question that must precede an engagement, but his courage was not equal to his desire.

"I'll ask her tomorrow," was always his desperate promise when his courage failed, and many tomorrows had become todays and yesterdays, and still the question was unasked, yet he almost knew, without being conceited about the matter, that Belinda cared and that her affirmative answer would be forthcoming when he asked her.

Time and again he had gathered his courage and on each occasion his tongue had clove to the roof of his mouth when Belinda's brown eyes had shyly dropped before the love light in his.

Occasionally he raged at himself for his stupidity. "If she only knew what a consummate ass I am she wouldn't have anything to do with me," he groaned one day.

Perhaps Belinda knew—or guessed the state of affairs!

"I'll ask her tomorrow—sure!" he said one evening after he had returned from a dinner party where he had taken Belinda in to dinner, and sat beside her in ecstatic wonder at his great good luck.

Tomorrow came and with it a note from Belinda saying that they were all going down to Sea Sands that day for the week-end and she hoped Mr. Owen would be sure to accept her mother's invitation to accompany them.

Mrs. Howe's invitation came in the same mail and Jack accepted it delightedly. Then he made hurried preparations for the journey because he wanted to be sure and catch the same train that Belinda was going on. He went to the station and engaged a seat, trusting to his customary good fortune to find it placed next to Belinda's chair.

It was next to Belinda's seat, but on the other side of Belinda sat a new man—a foolishly grinning idiot with his hair parted in the middle and a dimple in his chin. This was Jack's summary of the masculine charms of Mr. Harry Brompton.

Belinda was interested in Mr. Brompton, so deeply interested that she only spared an occasional smile for Jack, who sulked openly and determined to ask her the fatal question that very night—if he got a chance.

When they reached Sea Sands and the Howe's motor vehicles were filled with the expected guests it was found that Mr. Brompton was seated beside Belinda in one car while Jack Owen was squeezed between Mrs. Howe and her private secretary, a little pale black-eyed being who shivered with the excitement of the coming week-end gaities, of which she would only snatch an occasional glimpse.

"I'll show him!" sputtered Jack fiercely as he noted the devoted attitude of Mr. Brompton's by no means ill-looking head.

It was an added irritation to find that Mr. Brompton was to occupy the pleasant room which Jack Owen had always occupied on his frequent visits at Sea Sands. The room now appointed to Jack was pleasanter than the other, but jealousy is fed by little things like this and Mr. Owen became positively unhappy over the matter.

By the time Jack was ready for dinner the situation looked very bleak. He was positive that Mr. Brompton had been a dark horse in the race for Belinda's heart and hand and he was sure that gentleman had won out, and that the engagement would be announced tonight.

He hoped it would not be announced at the dinner table—he was positive that he would be unable to control his features. Yet it looked ominous enough. As he tallied the guests who would be there he realized that they consisted of old and intimate friends of the Howe family.

Harry Brompton was the only stranger to him. He wondered vaguely if any of these friends were related to Mr. Brompton or was the prospective bridegroom an orphan like himself?

He went down to dinner in a mood of black despair.

"Dear boy!" murmured Mrs. Howe, as he stopped for a word with her. "We are so delighted about little Belinda!"

"Then it is decided?" he asked in a hollow voice.

She looked at him in a puzzled way. "You mean about announcing it tonight?"

He nodded grimly. He could not speak.

"Oh, yes—of course you do not mind?"

Jack's face hardened. Of course they had thrust the knife in, but they needn't twist it around!

"No, indeed, Mrs. Howe, I am delighted, of course!"

"Poor boy!" she murmured sympathetically. "I suppose you are frightened to death—do go over and talk to William. Belinda has hurried us so, only notified us this morning and insisted on its being announced tonight."

"That's all right—don't mind me," faltered poor Jack and strolled over to William, who was Belinda's father.

"Keep up your courage, old boy!" whispered Mr. Howe. "Brace up—it can't happen but once, you know!"

"I won't give any one a chance to let it happen to me again!" growled Jack fiercely, but William Howe was happily hard of hearing, and at this moment dashed away, for dinner was announced.

"Mighty kind of 'em to be so careful of my feelings," thought Jack as he tried to quell a murderous thrill at sight of Harry Brompton's carefully parted curly hair.

Belinda came in then—a wonderfully radiant Belinda in pale pink satin veiled with white lace and with pearls about her throat. She included Jack in her swift survey of the room, and he saw that a rosy wave of color stained her cheeks from brow to chin and left her pale.

His own heart did not leap in response to her passing glance as it had been wont to do. It felt quite cold and still. It did not throb even when he found that he was to take Belinda in to dinner. His face was like a white mask as he gave her his arm and led her to her seat.

To his relief Belinda did not talk much to him. She seemed absorbed in conversation with Harry Brompton on her other hand while Jack was not obliged to talk, for a lady beside him chattered foolishly from course to course until dessert was reached.

An unusual silence came upon the company as Belinda's father slowly arose holding his wine glass.

"Friends," he smiled upon them, "may I ask you to drink to the health happiness of one who is very dear to me—my daughter, Belinda, and her future husband, Mr. Jack Owen."

"It is a joke!" gasped poor Jack as the company merrily drank to their health and happiness. "There must be a limit to—"

Nobody heard his voice save Belinda, whose hand sought his and pressed it significantly.

"I'll explain afterwards, Jack!" she said hurriedly. "You must respond to the toast."

"It's true, then?" he asked dazedly.

"Of course—stupid!"

Afterwards they commented on the brilliant speech of Jack Owen.

"Didn't know it was in him to be so funny!" commented one.

"Enough to make any one hilarious to win a girl like Belinda Howe!" retorted another.

"Who is this young Brompton?"

"Oh, I don't know—some friend from the west who inflicted himself upon them this morning and had to be invited down."

After dinner Jack Owen found himself mysteriously spirited away to the alcove in the library. Belinda was beside him, very pale, very quiet. Sounds from the company in the distant drawing room came faintly to them.

"Oh, Jack, do you mind?" asked Belinda after a long silence.

"Mind?" he asked, still dazed at the strangeness of the whole thing, and suspecting a trick of some sort.

"Mind being engaged to me?" she faltered.

"Mind being engaged to you?" he repeated. "Why, Belinda, darling, it's what I've been trying to accomplish ever since I met you!" His arms were around her now, and his lips were pressed against her wonderful hair. "I didn't understand, you see."

"I knew you wanted to, only you were so diffident—oh, indeed, sir, you are recovering rapidly—and it was the only way. You know this is leap year!"

HUMOR AT A NAVAL COURT

Sailors, Unused to Proceedings, Cause Much Merriment Among the Spectators.

At a naval court of inquiry, in New York, much unconscious humor was exhibited. The sailors called as witnesses were quite unused to such proceedings, and went about their work very much as a Sioux Indian might be expected to conjugate a Greek verb. One of them—Bill Bubbles—came shuffling forward, his eyes hunting all round the room, as if in search of some place of safety. "Come here," said the admiral. He came, of course, upon the wrong side. "No, here! What's your name?" "Bubbles." "What's all of it?" "Bill Bubbles." "Bill Bubbles, take the book." "Book, sir?" "Yes, here!" The admiral stood up, placing his eyeglasses astride of his nose, peered through them at the unhappy Bubbles, and held out the Bible. Bubbles made a motion as if to take the Bible, perhaps thinking it a gratuity. "No, no! just place your hand on it." Bubbles put up his left hand. "No, your right hand." Bubbles put up both hands. The admiral seized the left one between his thumb and finger and removed it. The right remained. "Now, Bubbles." "Yes'r." "Do you solemnly swear that the evidence you will give in this case shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, so help you God?" "Yes'r." "Well, then, kiss the book." "Hey, sur?" "Kiss the book." "Kiss it, sur?" "Yes, kiss it." Bubbles looked around appealingly, but there seemed to be no help for it, so he placed himself squarely on his feet, drew a long breath, bent over the Bible, and produced a noise which made the admiral jump. For an instant, the Bible seemed to be in peril, and the admiral, rescuing it with a sudden pull, looked sternly at Bubbles and said, slowly: "Go yonder and sit down." Another witness had had trouble with Lieutenant Lumley. "He says, sezee, 'Ef you wasn't so smal,' sezee, 'I'd knock you out of sight,' sezee. 'I'd like to see you do it,' says I. Also he done it." There is much eloquence in these four words.

Actor Holds Two Records.

Herr Bernhard Baumeister has just celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of his joining the Imperial Court theater of Vienna. This is believed to be a record for any player, and as Baumeister is now 84 years old, and still plays regularly on the same stage, he holds the double distinction of being the oldest actor in Europe, and the one who has played longest at one and the same theater. He appeared in the evening as Falstaff in "Henry IV," one of his most famous roles, and received a tremendous ovation, in return for which he delivered a short speech of thanks. The Emperor of Austria, who is two years Baumeister's junior, sent him a special message of congratulation and promised a pension for life to his wife, a comparatively young woman, whom the aged actor married only two years ago.

Uncertain About His Name.

There is a man in Milwaukee who doesn't know his own name and who says he cannot ascertain it unless he locates his mother, who has the information. Because he thinks it sounds something like his name, he signs himself Alfred Nehring, and he is asking the police to help him. He writes that his mother, a widow, whom he has not seen for many years, is living in Los Angeles, Cal., but he has been unable to get in touch with her. The family was large and he was turned over to others when a child, and gradually his name was lost track of. Of course, he doesn't know his mother's name, either, but he spells it phonetically as Nehring. It may be entirely different, he states, but he has hopes that she will recognize it.—Exchange.

Knew Where to Send Them.

He let her get in first and then followed quickly. "Fourth floor," he said to the elevator man. But, whether they do things somewhat leisurely in city hall or whether they have orders to go slow, the elevator did not start until the man with the young woman said again: "Fourth floor, please. He repeated this several times as the elevator went upward. When the fourth floor was finally reached the mean elevator man cried in a loud voice: "All off for the Marriage License Bureau," and the man and the woman were the only persons who left the car.—Philadelphia Record.

Tall Tales From the Tall Timbers of Texas

BY SAM JAY

Alvin, Texas, June 28, 1912.

Dear Editor:—

A few words about climate and people.

Whatever may be said or written in favor of this soft, balmy air, I have found by experience that it requires some effort to shake off the feeling of legarghy and indolence, the desire to take it easy which grows on one by long residence. By using discretion in the selection of food and drink—cut out the alcohol—it is possible to maintain good health and some ambition, but I know of people living in tents and pine shacks without any modern conveniences, who drink creek water and consume half cooked food and yet appear to be as healthy and active as those who use extreme precautions.

I meet many kickers and discouraged ones from all States, usually those who are either too young or too old and who cannot adapt themselves to different surroundings and conditions. They are too well educated and supersensitive, lacking that physical and mental roughness which Jack London calls "elemental simplicity" and cannot become interested in any sort of work because of those weakening heart burnings and yearnings for their former life. Others plug along complaining of everything in general and finding neither the promised wealth or happiness because they do not obey the biblical injunction: "With all thy getting, get understanding."

One cannot help being impressed by the progress being made in Texas, with its different types of people, towns and cities; its various climates, soils and products; its flat prairies, undulating plains and wooded hills which all yield to the industry of man. It is a place where work and Progress progs,

Well Progress, old boy, we welcome thee as a long-last and much-needed friend! We need the stimulating sound of your voice and we are learning to love the musical whir-r-r of your car as you roll through highways and byways! Come and see us often and stay longer! As the Texans say: "Come by," which means, "Stop and come in!"

I started out to give you some news and find that I have drifted, rambled, and strayed like an old mule. Plumb locoed.

One often wonders how it is possible for one person, family or estate to own so much of this land—say from one thousand to a half million acres—but the process of securing it was very simple. In earlier days of Spanish possession the crown frequently granted large tracts to those who had performed some service or favor; in those days also, some squatters maintained with the assistance of a small arsenal, that possession was nine points of the law. Since the days of Statehood there has been a law to the effect that anyone fencing in a tract of land, large or small, and holding it for five years without legal contest, may then have clear title.

Again, land has been very cheap until recently. Only a few years ago, as late as the seventies, one could buy a big square mile of Texas dirt for one hundred dollars. There is no government land here but there is plenty—1,500,000 acres—of public school land now on the market at from $1 to $5 per acre with forty years time to pay. The majority of this is not good agricultural land and lies in rough rocky, semi-arid counties of the trans Pecos region. If I wanted to get rich quick and perhaps get indicted too, I would go into the land business. The necessary equipment consists of an automobile, a few dollars and an inexhaustable supply of cunning, gall and greed.

I know of people who have been badly stung on buying land and of others who are doing well. Land is sometimes worth two bits an acre or it may have a real value of five hundred dollars according to productiveness and location.

But this is ancient history. What's the use of talking any more about this old Texas dirt and dirty old Texas? Let's quit.

Sincerely Yours,
Sam Jay.

WISHES TO PROTECT SNAKES

Pennsylvania Professor Asserts That Many of the Reptiles Are Valuable Friends of Man.

However men may regard the proposition advanced in the following editorial comment in the Chicago Record-Herald, there are mighty few women who will not experience a chill of horror that such a dreadful idea could be entertained in the human brain. Says the Record-Herald:

Legislation to protect snakes that are harmless to man and destructive to rats, mice and other creatures obnoxious to farmers is being sought in several states, according to Prof. H. D. Bailey of Muhlenberg college, a Pennsylvania institution. In a recent lecture Prof. Bailey pronounced the "king snakes, the milk snakes, the bute, the corn, fox and indigo snakes all valuable allies of the farmer" and commended efforts to increase the number of bull snakes, which, though large, are harmless and abound in some western states.

As man's knowledge of nature increases he finds many creatures useful or harmless to his interests, and he should act accordingly. Many snakes are benefactors of man, according to authorities, and once the instinctive dread of them disappears through knowledge and familiarity there is nothing objectionable in their presence in fields or gardens. The movement to protect useful and harmless snakes, like the movement to protect song birds, should find favor throughout the country.

PICNIC PARTY

About thirty of the ladies and friends of the Auxiliary of Beers Post G. A. R. met Saturday afternoon at the pleasant home of Mrs. Wyrill, for a social visit and picnic supper, the time was most pleasantly passed in the re-union of old friends and greeting the new. The guests from out of town were Mrs. Emma Ford of Blissfield, Miss Merrill Crossman of Toledo, and Miss Fannie Schaffer of Seattle.

About five o'clock supper was served by Miss Florence Linton assisted by her friend, Miss Merrill Crossman. As the twilight shadows began to fall each one wended their way homeward with the happy consciousness of a pleasant meeting with a host of friends

DANIEL BOONE ON THE TRAIL

The coming of the celebrated Daniel Boone on The Trail Company, presented by the Harris company under their mamoth tent, for tonight only promises to be the theatrical event of the season. It is said that this season Mr. Harris has outdone all previous records and has combined his experience of the past, and elaborate to such an extent that the coming attraction is one that may be anticipated by every theatregoer in our city. Special free exhibitions will be given in front of the big tent previous to the real performance, to which every one is invited. It is said that the free entertainment is worth many times the price of admission into the big show. If the free entertainment pleases as it is sure to do, no one should fail to grap the opportunity of seeing the magnificient historical production, and it is positively asserted that no one has ever gone away from the Harris Shows without having felt well repaid for their time and money. This season it far surpasses anything ever offered before, and the coming engagement may well be looked upon as a special event.

TOO STRENUOUS A JOB

MOSQUITO EXTERMINATOR HAS HAD ENOUGH.

Recently Went Through Experience That It Must Be Admitted Was Calculated to Discourage Almost Any One.

Charles F. Staedler, marshal of Verona, N. J., is also chief mosquito exterminator of that city. It is his duty to hunt out the breeding places of the winged rapiers that made New Jersey famous and deluge their larvae with kerosene oil. The life of the chief mosquito exterminator has been a tranquil one. But recently the foe of Jersey's curse met with an experience that confines him to his bed under the care of a physician.

The chief exterminator and his able assistant, Thomas Brennan, set out to visit some marshy land at the head of Verona lake. As the chief exterminator stood upon a bog pouring oil upon the hatchery of a flock of mosquitoes his foot slipped and into the mire went the marshal.

Before Brennan could grasp him the chief exterminator had sunk to his armpits. Brennan labored hard to pull his colleague from the bog, and, with a frantic yank at his chief's coat collar, he, too, slipped and joined his companion. The two struggled in the bog as did Bunyan, but to no avail.

Then, almost engulfed, they raised their voices and roared for aid. Little Hughie Ervine heard the wild calls from the bog and saw two heads protruding above the mire. Hughie tore several boards from a nearby fence and built a walk to the spot where the mosquito terrors lustily struggled for freedom. But Hughie could do nothing more, and the moments were precious, for each convulsive effort only settled the mosquito catchers deeper in their miry prison.

Hughie was dispatched for instant aid. He qualified for the Olympic team in his sprint up the road to David Slayback's place. David set forth in his motor car with a long rope.

Slayback, with Hughie's aid, dragged Brennan from the bog. For almost two hours they labored, and Staedler was almost ready to close his eyes and murmur, "Farewell, proud world," when Slayback was struck with a brilliant idea. He fastened one end of the rope under the chief exterminator's arms. The other end was tossed over the branch of a nearby oak and then tied to the rear of the motor car.

Slayback took his seat in the car and grasped the starting lever. Brennan raised his hand and Slayback put on full power ahead. It was a hard pull. The chief exterminator almost was pulled apart, but up into the air he finally shot and dangled twixt box and blue sky, dripping ooze and words of anguish.

As far as the chief exterminator is concerned, all the mosquitoes in Jersey can go to blazes. He said so himself, only his verbiage was more strenuous.

Artificial Rubber Factory.

A factory to produce artificial rubber has been established at Ymuiden, the port at the mouth of the North Sea canal. It is said that the company instituting this factory has succeeded in producing a substance having the qualities of rubber and also certain special advantages over genuine rubber. The process is a secret, but the principal ingredient of the product is said to be fresh sea fish, which are brought to Ymuiden in vast quantities by the Dutch fishing fleets. According to report 15 to 16 per cent of natural rubber is added to the fish, and the result is a substance as flexible and elastic as rubber, but much cheaper—about as 1.25 to 8 in price, compared with real rubber. The low price of this product will be caused partly by the by-products which are possible, for it is said that much albumen will be made from the fish and that half of the factory is arranged for the manufacture of guano. It is stated that this artificial rubber can be vulcanized in a short time; that it is benzine proof and can resist the effect of heat. At first sight the substance much resembles real rubber. A slightly fishy smell betrays the chief ingredient, but it is explained that this will be prevented by extracting the fat of the fish.

ITALICS USED FOR EMPHASIS

They Reveal the Writer's Sense of the Relative Importance in Things He Has Written.

Doctors of style in the writing of English declare that the use of italics for emphasis is a positive fault, showing weakness of construction and inability to express ideas strongly by a right arrangement of words. Nevertheless, italics are used deliberately by some forceful writers to gain added effect and to fasten the eye and the mind of the reader upon important points, somewhat as a speaker will strengthen his oration by vocal emphasis and gesture. Whatever may be said for or against the use of italics, they certainly reveal the writer's sense of relative importance in the things he has written. He has selected certain words and hence, as we note their significance we begin to know more of the man behind the words. His choice of emphasis tells us what manner of man he is. His italics are an index of his mental or moral character.

We are all writing history day by day. On every page some things are written small, others stand out boldly in italics. Take up the book at night and read the story of the day. It will be an interesting record—perhaps a startling one. Doubtless we shall feel very much like correcting the proof when we find where the italics are

WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Arizona women have succeeded in having their iniative petition signed by 300 more than enough voters to make woman suffrage one of the proposed amendments submitted to the voters this fall. This makes the Sixth State in which a campaign for suffrage is now on. The Ohio election is on September 3. Wisconsin, Michigan, Oregon, Kansas and Arizona will settle the question in November,

A yellow wagon drawn by "Suffragette", a new convert, left Cleveland on July 3rd. Rosalie Jones and Elizabeth Freeman, wearing white caps with yellow ribbons, were in the wagon; likewise much literature and suffrage novelties for sale. At Medina on the Fourth of July they found themselves advertised to speak to 10,000 people at the Public Square and the Fair Grounds. While the aviator at the Fair Grounds was repairing his machine. After that they were scarcely able to satisfy the demand for literature. Miss Freeman and Miss Jones expect to tour Ashland and Wayne Counties before the end of August.

English militant suffragists cannot boast that they alone endanger themselves for the Cause. A Connecticut woman was recntly absorbed in tacking a large purple green and white poster to a telegraph pole, when she became conscious of the curious sniffing of twelve soft, wet noses. She was entirely surrounded by cows. Of course, she didn't scream, but she called her friends. They stood in a circle back of the cows calling "shoo" The cows stood still and snorted, The imprisoned suffragist finally bolted for the automobile, but stumbled over a stone en route and sprained her ankle. As she lay groaning, the cows charged the automobile.

FORESTRY PROBLEM IN JAPAN

Little Brown Brothers Have Safeguarded Themselves Against Destruction of Forests.

Just at the time when this country is beginning to struggle with the problem of husbanding its forest resources, of protecting its mountain slopes, and of improving the waterways, it is interesting to know that the Japanese have successfully attacked the same problem, before the land suffered severely from the evil effects following deforestation. The far-sighted people of Nippon have foreseen the results of the destruction of their extensive mountain forests, and have safeguarded themselves by placing all of these under government control.

The practice of forestry has been carried on in Japan for a longer time than in any other country. For 1,200 years the people of Japan have been planting and growing forests, with a success that has been a little short of marvelous. Under careful management, the Japanese forests yield very high financial returns. This high yield is only made possible by the close utilization of every bit of the tree so that scarcely a twig is wasted, and by the improvement of the growth of their forests by carefully conducted thinning and tending. The woods are first thinned at the age of thirteen years, and then every five years after that up to the time of the final harvest, at 120 years.

Statue That Sprang Up in Night.

In London, where one of the most luxuriant and beautiful parks in the world, the Kensington Gardens, is a vast playground for children, the fairies' own month of May was celebrated this year with a rare gift. A statue of Peter Pan, the boy who would not grow up, prettily lilting on an ancient tree-trunk and blowing his pipe, which brings the birds and squirrels and field mice out to listen, was set up in a single night and when the little children came next day to play they believed that the beautiful image of the little boy who plays with them at make-believe was left by the fairy folk themselves. And who would be so sadly grown up as to tell them any different?

The statue, presented by Mr. J. M. Barrie, author of the story, "Peter Pan," is of exquisite beauty. The inscription is: "Peter Pan, Friend of the Fairies and Little Children."—The

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

An Adrian dispatch says that with but one exception the present incumbents of office for Lenawee Co. who will be candidates for re-election are sticking to the G. O. P. George Smith candidate for register of deeds, will join the progressives,

Brooklyn business men, are up to date and are planning a big picnic at Clarks Lake for August 15. Committees are at work already and the Brooklyn's Business Men's Picnic promises to be a great success. Didn't we hear that Tecumseh men were talking of some such thing?

One of Hudson's progressives is having a sorry time of it, just because his wife hung a paper in the window to shut out the sun, and there was a full sized picture of Taft on the paper The poor man is feeling badly over the seeming insult to his political pride, but no doubt will be able to rise above such petty things, else why progressive?

A fight is going on at Lake Goguac the summer resort of Battle Creek. Arising from a decision of the city to prevent bathing in the lake from which the city gets its drinking water. The Supreme court has decided that the property owners own the rights in front of their land and can swim all they choose. Goguac has a summer population of over 600 people and a Sunday visitation of thousands. The attitude of the city arouses much interest and the owners of cottages will fight to the last and advise the city to get its water from Artesian Wells.

Not Good Testimony.

Patient (feebly)—"Doctor, my wife says that you have charged too much for operating on me." The Doctor—"But, my dear sir, you don't mean to tell me that you would take your wife's opinion as to your value?"—Life.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Plymouth Binder Twine

SAVES TIME AND GRAIN

PLYMOUTH TWINE

Twine is a small item, but good twine saves a lot of expense in harvest time. Every time your machine is stopped the delay costs you money. Time in harvest season is always valuable, and sometimes extremely precious on account of the condition of weather or grain. Be sure you use the best twine,—PLYMOUTH TWINE. Then you will be safe from the annoyances, delays, expenses, which ordinary twine causes. Plymouth Twine works perfectly in every machine. More of it is made and used every year than any other kind, because it is known to be the best and has been for years. Binds more sheaves with less expense, no knots, no breaks, and is guaranteed full length and extra strength. Get Plymouth Twine from the local dealer. Look for the wheat-sheaf tag.

Use Plymouth Rope. It has the same high quality as our twine.

WHAT'S THE REASON?

Many Tecumseh People in Poor Health Without Knowing the Cause.

There are scores of people who drag out a miserable existence without realizing the cause of their suffering. Day after day they are racked with backache and headache; suffer from nervousness, dizziness, weakness, langour and depression. Likely the kidneys have fallen behind in their work of filtering the blood and that is the root of the trouble. Look to your kidneys, assist them in their work—give them the help they need. You can use no better remedy than Doan's Kidney Pills—endorsed by over one hundred thousand people, and by your neighbor in Tecumseh.

Henry Kempf, carpenter, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I took Doan's Kidney Pills about two years ago and found them very effective. At that time my kidney were not doing their work as they should and I was suffering from a lame and aching back. I got my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills at Wright & Son's Drug Store and it did not taken them long to correct my trouble."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co. Buffalo, New York sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Summer colds are hard to get rid of and frequently lead to asthma, bronchitis, and hay fever. Do not let your cold get a hold on you, but use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for quick relief. W. H. Allen, Chelsea, Wis., says: "We prefer Foley's Honey and tar Compound to other coughs and colds. It will ward off a cold if taken in time." Contains no opiates. For sale by all druggists.

George L. Higbie, Manton, Mich., used Foley Kidney Pills for kidney and bladder trouble. He says: "I find for my case no other medicine equals Foley Kidney Pills for beneficial effect." They are a safe and reliable medicine for kidney trouble and rheumatism. Contain no harmful drugs. For sale by all druggists.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

Probate Court for said County.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on the 24th day of July in the year one thousand nine hunered and twelve.

Present, HARRY L. LARWILL, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of FRANCES KEHOE, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of James McCann, administrator upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses, and debts of said deceased and the expenses if administration thus far incurred, have been fully paid, and praying that his final administration account may be allowed and for such other order and decree as to this Court shall seem proper.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the 19th day of August next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition.

And it is further ordered, That a copy of this order be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for the three successive weeks, previous to said day of hearing.

FREIGHT FIGHT IN DULUTH

Some Boats Taken to Superior, Wis., to Be Unloaded.

Duluth, Minn., July 29.—The strike of freight handlers at the docks of the Northern Pacific railroad is spreading. Six hundred men are said to be out. The men still refuse to consider anything less than their original demand of 35 cents an hour for straight work and 40 cents an hour for handling cement.

Some boats have been taken to Superior, Wis., to be unloaded. The strikers stated that if they are not given an increase in wages they will call out the Superior freight handlers and the men known as "steadies," those employed to handle freight inside the sheds.

The Duck and the Trout.

As a Virginian was fishing below a milldam near a village in his state, so a contributor writes to the Companion, he accidentally threw his line across a duck, which suddenly turned round, twisted the gut about its neck, and fixed the dropper-fly in its breast.

Thus entangled and hooked, the duck soon broke off the gut above the dropper, and sailed down the stream with the other fly trailing behind it. It had no gone far before a trout about a pound and a half in weight took the fly.

Then began an extraordinary contest. While the trout struggled, the terror of the duck was very evident; it fluttered its wings and dragged the fish. When the trout grew more quiet the duck gave way, and suffered itself to be drawn under some bushes, at the edge of the stream. When the struggle was renewed the duck's head was frequently drawn under the water.

By chance, however, the gut got across a branch that hung downward into the water, when the duck, taking advantage of the purchase that this circumstance gave it, dragged the fish from its hole and obliged it to show its head above water. Then it became a contest of life and death. The trout was in its last agonies and the duck in a very weak state, when the gut broke and suffered each to go his own way.

The man who saw this strange contest stoutly affirms the truth of every detail.—Youth's Companion.

Pearson, Chihuahua, July 29.—Fifty rebels under Captain Ponce looted this place, taking many arms of Americans. When the looters appeared work was suspended in the Pearson lumber mills and all Americans were permitted to go to their homes to protect their families.

DRAINAGE CANAL LIMITED

Allowed by United States to Draw Only 10,000 Cubic Feet Per Second.

Ottawa, Ont., July 29.—"The United States has decided against letting Chicago bring any more water through its drainage canal. That was our recommendation in 1908, and it will be adhered to," said George Clinton of Buffalo, a member of the old international waterways commission, which is meeting here. The international waterways commission has been superseded by the international joint commission, but remains in existence until it finishes the work of delimiting the international boundary through the great lakes.

"We reported in 1908-9 against letting them have any more than the capacity of their canal, 10,000 cubic feet per second," Mr. Clinton continued. "They are now limited to this amount by the United States government and they will not be allowed to take any more.

"All the recent agitation has brought no result, as the decision of Secretary Stimson, with whom the matter rests, is against further diversions."

ILLINOIS BALLOONIST KILLED

Rope Attaching Trapeze Bar to Parachute Breaks.

Canton, O., July 29.—When 100 feet in the air the rope attaching the trapeze bar to his parachute broke and Thomas Heifield of Springfield, Ill., fell to his death here.

His body struck in the soft earth of a celery field, head first, and was buried to the knees.

Two Aurora Youths Drowned.

Aurora, Ill., July 29.—Two young men were drowned while paddling a canoe on the Fox river. They are Russell Gordon Wrout, nineteen years old, son of Charles Wrout, 580 Main street, and Albert Cummings, twenty years old, son of Lawrence Cummings, 487 Main street. A sudden gust of wind capsized the craft.

Claude Allen Found Guilty.

Wytheville, Va., July 29.—Claude Allen, one of the Hillsville outlaws, was convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of Commonwealth Attorney William M. Foster. At a former trial he was found guilty of murder in the second degree for the killing of Judge Thornton L. Massie.

Camp Meeting of Adventists.

Kokomo, Ind., July 29.—The annual camp meeting of the Indiana Conference, Seventh Day Adventists, will be held here Aug. 5 to 11.

FOR WOMEN ONLY.

That is the nature of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—the one remedy for women which contains no alcohol and no habit-forming drugs. Made from native medicinal forest roots. Dr. Pierce tells its every ingredient on the bottle-wrapper. Prominent physicians and some of the best medical authorities endorse these ingredients as being the very best known remedies for ailments and weaknesses peculiar to women.

MRS. COFFEY.

This is what MRS. GENETTI E. COFFEY, of Longstreet, Ky., says: "I feel it my duty to write and tell you what your medicines have done for me. I was a great sufferer for six years from a trouble peculiar to women, but I am thankful to say, after taking four bottles of your 'Favorite Prescription' I am not bothered with that dreadful disease any more. I feel like a new woman. When I first wrote you for advice I only weighed 115 pounds—now I weigh 135.

"I thank you very much for your kindness. You have been as a father to me in advising me what to do, so may God bless you in every effort you put forth for good.

"I hope this testimonial will be the means of some poor suffering woman seeking health."

Dr. Pierce's Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition, answers hosts of delicate questions about which every woman, single or married ought to know.

BRITTON

NIXON—POCKLINGTON

A very pretty home wedding took place Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs Frank Pocklington, when her daughter, Mayrion was married to Mr. Fred Nixon of Cadillac. The wedding ceremony took place in the presence of eighty guests. The four young ladies who received the guests were Misses Verda Allen, Winnifred Morrell, Sylvia Pilbeam and Margaret Hindes.

At four o'clock to the strains of the bridal chorus played by Miss Doris Zeluff, the bridal couple unattended, except by little Miss Geraldine Pocklington, niece of the bride, who carried the bride's roses, entered the parlor taking their places in one corner, which had been made beautiful with banks of ferns, and where the ceremony was performed by Rev. Peters of Detroit. The bride was beautifully gowned in pearl lansdowne trimmed with lace and brilliants, while her traveling suit was navy blue with white hat. After congratulations the guests were ushered to the dining room of the M. P. church where a lovely two course dinner was served by the sister of the bride.

The bride is one of our popular young ladies, having lived near Britton all her life, while the groom has won many friends during his visits here. Both have hosts of friends who extend congratulations.

After a trip to Buffalo and Niagara Falls, they will be at home to their friends after August 10, in their new home in Petoskey, Mich

Some very handsome and useful presents were received. The out of town guests were Rev. and Mrs. Peters and Mr. and Mrs. Will Pocklington of Detroit, Miss Bernice Hibbard of Adrian, Miss Bessie Rouse of Blissfield, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hause and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hause of Clinton, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Zeluff of Toledo, Mr. and Mrs. Fay Pocklington of Saline and Mr. and Mrs. James Cole of Salida, Colo.

BABCOCK—EXELBY

Wednesday afternoon a very quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Exelby, when their youngest daughter, Miss Hazel was united in marriage to Mr. Earl H. Babcock. The ceremony took place at four o'clock in the presence of just the immediate families, and was performed by Rev. F. L. Steffy of Adrian. After which a dinner was served by the Misses Donna and Doris Zeluff, the favors were white carnations. The bride was handsomely gowned in white voile, her traveling suit being brown with hat to match.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Babcock have spent the greater part of their lives here, are both graduates of the Britton school and also of Ypsilanti Normal. Mr. Babcock having just completed two successful years as the principal of Fremont school. The coming year he has accepted the position as Superintendent of Newaygo schools. They left for a short stay at Grand Rapids and Lansing, after which they will leave for their new home in Newaygo. Both young people have many friends who extend congratulations.

SURPRISE

Mr. and Mrs. Fay A. Wiggins were very pleasantly surprised last Wednesday evening, when about thirty of their friends walked in on them laden with all kinds of kitchen utensils for Mr. and Mrs. Wiggins in their new home. They spent an hour or so at the house with music and singing, then journeyed down to the Maccabee hall for the rest of the evening and had lunch served there. Dancing and games were indulged in until a late hour, when they returned to their homes, all reporting a fine time.

At a special election held Monday it was decided by a vote of 32 to 8 to raise $1,000 for the building of a town hall.

Among those who were in Detroit last week attending the Cadillaque were Dr. A. R. Lusty and family, Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Zeluff, Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Britton, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Will Curry Jr. H. F. Temple, H. E. Gill, G. L. Gripton, Joe Wiggins and Marvin Gregg.

Not Ashamed of Cowardice.

The idea that nothing is so disgraceful as cowardice is one that is not held by all races. Among the Bedouins a sheik may be the leader of his tribe only in peace. When there is war, the chances are that he will relinquish his leadership to the fighting sheik.

"I have not the gift of courage," once said an Arab chief to an Englishman, apologizing for not putting himself at the head of a band that he had sent to attack another tribe.

The Englishman learned that these nomads esteem personal bravery as a gift, for the want of which a man is no more to be censured than he is to be blamed for not being handsome.

A Bengali says, without the least sense of shame, "I am timid." Yet he will meet death, even when it approaches in the form of the hangman, with the composure of a martyr.—Illustrated Sunday Magazine.

Her Curiosity Shop

By Jean Dickerson

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Elsie was glad to leave the stuffy office and come out into the afternoon sunshine of Madison square. She paused for an instant and hesitated.

Up in the little hall bedroom that she called home in lieu of a better one, there was a pretty cotton frock to be finished if she expected to wear it on Sunday. Every afternoon for a week she had hurried home to sew, and every stitch must be made by hand—and yet, there was another and a stronger call that turned her feet toward Fourth avenue. Elsie Chapin yielded to the last call and went.

Perhaps it was laughable that a quiet little dove-like stenographer could find delight in poking about among the second-hand shops of Fourth avenue after a day spent in transcribing dull business letters on a clattering typewriter. It was true, however. Whatever of color and romance came into her lonely life was furnished by the multitude of lovely and curious articles in these antique shops.

There was food for fancy in the ancient pewter dishes and the willow pattern china; a chair that had belonged to some long-dead personage; perhaps a bedstead upon which royalty had slumbered in a distant land; tall clocks that had marked the days of forgotten lives; an empty jewel casket; a piece of rich tapestry—there was a story in every article, and Elsie Chapin had learned to read each one.

This afternoon she hastened her steps until she reached the particular shop that she called her own. The attendants had long ceased to be suspicious of her lingering there among the treasures. Perhaps they read in her rapt and dreamy eyed abstraction the truth of her coming. It was not the articles nor their value that she craved—it was the story she read in each one.

Sometimes one of the attendants called her attention to some newly acquired article, always assured of her interest and appreciation. They could not know that in the days before her unfortunate father's failure in business and his subsequent death, there had been many treasures in her own home. She was alone now and, perforce, content with looking at the belongings of other people.

There was an ancient escritoir with a fascinating number of pigeon holes and secret drawers that attracted Elsie this afternoon. She was standing there, wondering if within some still concealed compartment there might not be a bundle of old love letters tied about with a blue ribbon which would fall to pieces at a touch. There might be a withered rose or a wrinkled little glove, some relic of a bygone romance.

From her dim corner behind the escritoir Elsie was roused to look toward the front of the shop where the proprietor was in conversation with a slender, dreamy-eyed young man who was holding a violin to the light.

"It is an Amati!" protested the young man.

"All violins are Amati or Stradivarius," replied the proprietor skeptically. "Mr. Spohr, I will give you $100 for the instrument. If I buy it I am taking a risk. I do not like to handle musical instruments."

The musician bent his head over the beautiful violin. He passed a tender hand over the satiny wood, flicked a string that vibrated with almost human melancholy and then laid the instrument in its case.

"It is yours for that price," he said quietly, but Elsie read in his tone despair and almost agony at the parting with an instrument that was doubtless his means of livelihood, for Spohr was rather shabbily dressed and thin and pale, as though he were recovering from some long illness or had been insufficiently nourished.

Elsie's tender heart was wrung with pity at this little tragedy being enacted before her. Many times she had read tragedies and romances in the antiques of her curiosity shop. Now she was witnessing a real heart-breaking drama.

Fascinated, she saw the proprietor count out a roll of bills to the violinist, and triumphantly bow out the dejected young man.

By the time the proprietor had returned to the violin Elsie was standing beside him.

"This is for sale?" she asked quietly.

He nodded. "You saw that young man?"

"Yes—I heard what was said," she returned.

"You did!" He frowned. "He is Spohr, the violinist. He has been sick in the hospital and must have money so he sells me this—I am taking a chance, of course," he said, looking at her under his beetling brows.

"You mean it may be a poor instrument?"

Again he nodded. "It may be a fake."

"You regret your bargain already?" she asked with apparent simplicity.

The dealer scanned her with shrewd eyes and saw nothing save her little dove-gray personality with soft brown eyes under the gray hat.

"Yes—perhaps I let that hundred go too quick."

"Then I will give you $100 for it," said Elsie a little breathlessly.

"Well!" The dealer laughed shortly. "I would not make anything and I am in business to make money."

"You said it was not worth $100," corrected Elsie, looking him straight in the eyes. "I will give you $100 for it now." She opened her purse.

"Call it $105 miss, thank you. The violin is yours. Shall I have it dusted off?" He made a movement as if to take the case to the rear of the store, but Elsie quietly laid her hand upon the handle. If he was unscrupulous, she would not give him an opportunity to change the violin.

"I will take it as it is," she said. "Please give me a receipt for the money."

Five minutes afterwards Elsie Chapin walked out of the antique shop carrying a violin case. She had parted with half of her savings it had taken her two years to accumulate, but somehow she felt supremely happy. She was about to make someone very happy, too.

She called up one after another of the hospitals until she discovered the one wherein Spohr had been confined. There she learned his address and entering a subway train, she was soon at her destination.

It proved to be a lodging house in a very cheap quarter of the west side. When she rang the bell and asked for Mr. Spohr, the sharp-voiced landlady eyed her keenly.

"I guess he's up to his room. Takes your front hall. He ain't taking giving lessons here—because I won't have it," she rasped, stepping aside for the girl to pass her.

"I think not—" Elsie was beginning, when there came a step on the stairs, and she looked up to see Spohr coming down. He was without a hat, and in his hand he carried some money. The eyes of the landlady fastened avidly upon the money.

"Did you want to see me, Mr. Spohr?" she asked meaningly.

"If you please," he said gravely, and paid her the money. She was instantly overcome with servile politeness.

"Thank you so much, Mr. Spohr!" she gushed. "This young lady wishes to see you—you may use the parlor if you wish." She opened the door of a stuffy red-plushed room, and the violinist, with unmasked surprise on his face, stood aside while Elsie fluttered past him into the dingy room.

"You wished to see me?" he asked gently.

Elsie nodded. She was frightened now that she was in his presence. She had not realized that he was so tall and commanding of presence, or that his voice was so rich and vibrant. He looked proud, too. What would he say to her when she explained her errand?

What he did say to her in his amazed surprise neither of them ever remembered. When they parted it was with the sweet knowledge that each had found a friend. Gustav Spohr had expressed his gratitude so delicately, so gracefully, that Elsie parted from him without one doubt as the wisdom of her impulsive action. He had told her gently that he treasured her kindliness above everything that had ever happened to him, and that the return of his violin would enable him to resume his position with the large theater orchestra of which he had once been soloist; with the renewal of his health he would not only regain that position, but later on hoped to appear in concert.

After that there were many delightful musical treats in store for Elsie Chapin. Tickets had a pleasant habit of dropping into her mail, and many times she went to hear Gustav Spohr play. Once a month he sent her a payment on the $100, and she was almost disappointed when the debt was cancelled. The obligation, he said, never could be paid.

The day they were married, Gustav took Elsie to her curiosity shop and, to her delight, purchased the old escritoir which she loved, and behind which she had been hidden when she first saw him.

"I can't find any old love letters or even a withered rose, Gustav," she said, after she had thoroughly ransacked the secret hiding place of the desk.

"Never mind," he murmured, "hide our own love letters there for our grandchildren to find and tell them the story of your old curiosity shop, and how you found a husband there!"

Roof Sprinkling.

Lawn water down at Baltimore is used by a parson-inventor for cooling his house of 26 rooms—all for one old bachelor. Dr. Crawford-Frost, when hot days come, sees that the grass is not chilled to the bone by cold water. He has a scheme fixed up to sprinkle the roof with a fountain, and then the water runs from the gutters into a standpipe where it is caught and thus gives enough pressure for squirting it on the grass to the lawn. Say the thermometer is at 95 before using the sprinkler; it soon drops to 88 in the third story and in the second story it drops three degrees once the sprinkling begins. It is better for the grass not to have a drink of cold water just out of the ground, and it is cooler for the jolly old fellow in the house, besides.—New York Press.

Improved Form of Lighting.

A new kind of light has been developed in France for use in lighthouses, where the use of electric lamps presents some disadvantages. The lamp in question has a number of filaments mounted somewhat after the fashion of the fibers of an incandescent gas mantle. In this way a very strong light is secured which, moreover, has the desirable property of being very uniform in all parts of the circumference. According to recent trials, the new type of lamp gave twenty times as much light as a Welsbach burned and required very little attention. The lamp is particularly adapted for shore lighthouses, which are easily placed in communication with electric light mains.

Began Writing Early.

We have had many precocious infants among our famous authors, declares the London Chronicle. From the age of three, for instance, Macaulay read incessantly, and by seven he had begun a compendium of universal history. At eight he wrote a treatise designed to convert the natives of Malabar to Christianity, and about the same time composed his first poem.

Browning, too, had completed a whole volume of verse by the time he was twelve, but his earliest artistic effort was a painting of a cottage and rocks, which he painted at the age of two in lead pencil and black currant jam. But the small Macaulay was the worst. He had burnt his finger, and to Hannah More he replied from his child's stool: "Thank you, madam, the agony is abated." That at four!

Would Not Consider Dishes.

J. C. Stubbs, the Southern Pacific official, hasn't a great deal of patience with amateurs and those uninformed in the railroad game, and he is said to have told this story to illustrate the "wisdom" of an incipient railroad magnate.

When the stock holders of the Valley railroad were meeting in 1893 to plan the construction of the new line matters of detail were taken up among them, for even the smallest stock holder wanted a finger in the construction pie.

At one meeting a director who had to do with the engineering problems of construction asked, "How heavy shall the fish plates be?"

A stock holder growled, "What are we bothering with the dining car features for now? Let's go ahead and build the road first."

Not a Moral Objection.

A dance hall manager who could never by any stretch of the imagination be accused of harboring aesthetic convictions came out unequivocally against the season's dances.

"I am pleased to hear you take that stand," said a reformer. "Leaving morality out of the question, they are certainly ugly."

"Oh, I wasn't thinking about that," said the manager. "I'm dead set against them because it takes more room to dance them. My hall, that will hold 250 couples for ordinary dancing, now accommodates only 200 couples, and I lose all that money."

SIXTY-THREE PERSONS DIE IN BIG FLOOD

Disastrous Deluge in Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

MANY MINERS CAUGHT; 1[illegible] DROWNED LIKE RATS

Great Floods Sweep Down Upon Many Towns, Working Terrible Destruction—Scenes of Woe and Desolation.

With the streams pouring water into inundated valleys, western Pennsylvania is fighting a flood which already has cost scores of lives. The total number of dead so far reported is sixty-three.

The places and the number reported to have been drowned at each is as follows

Uniontown, Pa, fourteen; Smock, Pa., in the Redstone valley, fourteen; Grindstone, Pa., fourteen miners missing and reported drowned; Linn, Pa., two miners drowned; Wheeling, W. Va., three drowned; Lemont, Pa., four miners reported drowned; Ellenwood, Pa., H. L. King, wife and child drowned; New Mattinsville, six reported drowned; Monogah, W. V., one drowned; Fairmont, W. Va., two drowned.

In some of the mines there is no hope that any of the men caught are alive. It will take months to pump the water out of the lower levels.

Railroad tracks have been washed out and telegraph and telephone lines are down.

Dunbar, Pa., nine miles west of Uniontown, is the center of the region of desolation. The flood waters swept away homes and buildings, besides doing damage to mines, furnaces and coke plants.

Among the buildings caught in the swirling current were the city hall, a two-story frame building on Railroad street; J. P. Kelly's jewelry store; Sam Joseph's restaurant and A. W. Boyer's big grocery and warehouse.

The Neiman drug company suffered a loss of $10,000 to stock. A score of other business places met heavy losses, which have not been estimated.

All the machinery of the A. V. Purnell quarries was carried away and lodged back of the First National bank building on Connellsville street, where debris was piled twenty feet high above the trolley tracks.

At Evans station, three miles north of Uniontown, Pa., a cloudburst sent waters raging into the mouth of the Superba No. 2 mine. Fourteen men were drowned like rats in a trap, and thirty-seven others had miraculous escapes from a similar fate.

A few miles away at Lemont mine No. 2, three other men are reported to have been drowned in like fashion.

Up in the Redstone valley near to Brownsville, Pa., it is reported that at least ten miners were caught while at work by flood waters entering the mines and drowned.

For a radius of 100 miles around Pittsburg there are scenes of desolation. Wrecked buildings are visible everywhere, while streets are strewn with debris. In some places the debris is piled twenty feet high.

Officials of the railroads at Uniontown and Greensburg assert that when transportation and wire communication are restored throughout the county it is likely the list of dead will be increased.

LORIMER RECEPTION

Lincoln League and Friends Greet the Man the Senate Ousted.

William Lorimer was tendered a public reception in Chicago at Orchestra hall by members of the Lincoln league and political, financial and commercial and other friends. Mr. Lorimer came to Chicago from his summer home at Pistakee bay and was met at the station by a platoon of mounted police, bands and automobiles which formed a procession and marched to Orchestra hall.

Fred Lundin introduced William Hale Thompson, who presided at the meeting, which was addressed by Mr. Lorimer.

Mr. Lorimer told the story of his expulsion from the United States senate and entered a flat denial to the rumor that he will be a candidate for congress from the sixth district.

BENTON HARBOR—A remarkable chapter of accidents here resulted in the death of one boy by drowning, and perhaps the fatal injury of another. Loyal Ferris, twelve years old, was struck by an auto on one of the main streets and knocked unconscious. The car was driven by O. M. Maykes, a resort owner, and the boy was taken to Mercy hospital. He is injured internally. Archie Bayman was drowned in the St. Joseph river while swimming with some other boys. A brother of the victim nearly lost his life in trying to rescue the younger lad.

BRIBERY SCANDAL AGITATES DETROIT

Warrants Issued for Fourteen Aldermen and Secretary.

DID WABASH PAY FOR VOTES?

President of Council Glinnan and Secretary Schreiter of Council Committees Said to Have Made Confessions.

Detroit, Mich., July 29.—Warrants were issued for the arrest of fourteen members of the common council of the city of Detroit on charges of accepting bribes for their votes and influence in passing a measure affecting city property recently transferred to a railroad. It is alleged that $3,700 passed in bribes.

Thomas Glinnan, president of the council, and E. R. Schreiter, secretary of council committees and also secretary of the American League of Municipalities, were arrested first, and later Aldermen Louis Brozo, Frank Mason, Algie Delme, Joseph L. Thiesen and Martin Ostrowski were taken into custody.

Glinnan and Schreiter made full confessions soon after being arrested and Glinnan turned over to detectives who arrested him a roll of $1,000 in bills which he had received but a few minutes before.

The charge against the aldermen and secretary is taking money in connection with granting the Wabash railroad the right to build a freight warehouse on Seventh street between Fort street and Congress street. The proposition was strongly advocated by the board of commerce and others interested in the growth of the city, but was held up by certain aldermen, who demanded pay before voting for it.

To catch these aldermen Andrew Green, Jr., hired Burns detectives, who set a trap for them under an understanding with Attorney General Kuhn and Prosecutor Shepherd.

The amount paid was $3,700, ranging from $100 to some of the aldermen to $500 to Schrieter and $1,000 to Glinnan.

The Burns detectives posed as agents for the Wabash and opened offices in the Ford building, where the money was paid. Eight of the aldermen got theirs Thursday, the others coming in Friday.

The plan laid was to get all the other aldermen to take the money first, then have Glinnan and Schrieter come last. Glinnan fixed a date at 2 o'clock Friday when he would come after his, the plan being to arrest him and hold him in another room until Schrieter, who was to come at 2:30, got his, then go after the other aldermen who had taken their money earlier. The Burns men used a dictagraph on Alderman Glinnan and have a record of his entire conversation with them. Glinnan had the money on his person when arrested. Schreiter was grabbed in his office in the city hall.

DRILL OPEN STRONG BOX

Important Evidence Said to Be in Hands of Detroit Prosecutor.

Detroit, Mich., July 29.—The strong box of Secretary Schreiter of the common council, arrested for grafting with ten aldermen, was drilled open and its secrets are now in the hands of Prosecuting Attorney Newski and the Burns operatives. Schreiter had absolutely refused to either open his safe or reveal the combination. Just what underground channels of the alleged plunderbund have been revealed is not publicly known, but it is understood that there was in the box some evidence that points to other affairs in which money was used to influence aldermen than the cases now under investigation.

It is also intimated that a letter from a well known attorney to Schreiter, in which the former referred to "our mutual interests and their safety" was found. This letter, it is said, may figure in a supplemental investigation, involving well known lobbyists.

EXCISE BILL IS PASSED

Measure Is in Reality an Income Tax Bill in Disguise.

At Washington, D. C., the senate after about eight hours' consideration of the house excise bill passed that measure by a vote of 37 to 18. The bill is the one reported and passed by the house and extends the special corporation tax that was a feature of the Payne-Aldrich law to individuals and copartnerships.

It is an income tax in disguise and levies 1 per cent of the rate now imposed on corporations on all incomes from other business in excess of $5,000. The word business includes all professional and other activities yielding an income.

BISHOP WARREN DEAD

Succombs to Attack sf Pnemonia in Denver.

Bishop Henry W. Warren of the Methodist Episcopal church, who was retired from active work by the general conference last May, died in Denver after a few days illness. He was a victim of pneumonia.

The Right Rev. Mr. Warren was born in Williamsburg, Mass., in 1831. He was graduated with honor from Wesleyan university in 1853 and for two years thereafter taught ancient languages at Wilbraham academy.

After his elevation to the bishop's dignity he devoted much time to the building up of the Denver university. He was widely known as an extensive traveler.

LIEUT. BECKER ARRESTED

New York Police Officer Held for the Rosenthal Murder.

Lieutenant Charles Becker of the New York police was arrested and held by Judge Mulqueen for murder in the first degree after Jack Rose, Becker's collector of gambling money, had confessed that the police lieutenant had ordered him to have Herman Rosenthal killed.

The arrest and arraignment of Becker followed swiftly after Rose's confession and the confessions of "Bridgie" Webber and Harry Vallon, who corroborated Rose in important particulars.

District Attorney Whitman, questioning the three prisoners for four hours, pounded one against the other until they all broke down and said Rosenthal was shot down in front of the Metropole by a hired gang because Lieutenant Becker wanted it done.

Iowa Names Delegates.

THIRD PARTY TICKETS

Progressive Leaders Hope to Land 65 Out of 84 Counties.

Detroit, Mich., July 27.—With every ounce of energy at work driving home the importance of organizing county tickets in every county of the state, the leaders of the National Progressive party have 51 counties of Michigan listed in the "organized" column. Within a few days they hope to land at least a dozen more counties. To have every county in the state in line is, however, regarded as hopeless and if the party goes into the primary battle with 65 out of the 84 Michigan counties fighting for state legislative offices and county control, the leaders will be satisfied.

Thus far only two upper peninsula counties—Houghton and Gogebic—have put county tickets into the field, but it is expected that Dickinson will be in line with a complete county organization. Among the larger counties, Oakland and St. Clair, Thursday fell into line with complete state legislative and county tickets and Clare, one of the smaller, but decidedly enthusiastic counties, also put a top-to-bottom state into being.

Strings to Friendship.

"I suppose every man's friendship is worth having?" said the young man who is studying politics. "Cherish not the delusion," replied Senator Sorghum. "You must select with caution, owing to the fact that when you accept a man's friendship you incidentally acquire the neutral enmity of everybody who doesn't approve of him."

925 MILES IN THE AIR

Captain Honeywell, Pilot of Uncle Sam, Lands in Virginia.

The balloon Uncle Sam, piloted by Captain H. E. Honeywell, which started from Kansas City, landed a mile from Manassas, Va., after a flight of 925 miles.

This balloon, which had not been reported since the start, was the last to be accounted for of the seven which ascended here in the elimination race to decide which three contestants will represent the Aero Club of America at the international race in Germany next fall.

The winning team is made up of the Uncle Sam, the Kansas City II. and the Drifter.

Next in distance to the Kansas City II. is the Drifter, representing the Cincinnati Aero club, which landed at New Berlin, Wis., a distance of 425 miles.

The Million Population Club II. of St. Louis came down at Spring Green, Wis., after having traveled 375 miles.

Driven to earth by a storm, the Million Population Club 1., pilot Captain John Berry, descended near Nora, Ill., about 350 miles from Kansas City.

The Cole, after going 325 miles, came down at McGregor, Ia., while the Goodyear ended its race at Polo, Ill., after 340 miles.

ATTACK ON SOCIALISTS

Samuel Gompers Hurls Epithets at Their Organization.

Samuel Gompers of the American federation of Labor, bitterly criticises the socialists in an editorial in the American Federationist, the organ of the federation.

"The hodge-podge of socialistic rant," "fanatical," "unscrupulous," "frothy and fiery propaganda," are some of the epithets the venerable head of the trade union organization uses.

The editorial was called forth by caustic attacks by the socialists on the federation, and on Gompers particularly, as a result of the McNamara confessions of dynamiting outrages.

The article is believed to be the opening gun in a fight by the "conservative" branch of the labor organization upon the radical, "direct action" propagandists, among whom are numbered many of the most prominent socialists of the country.

BLOODY FIGHT AT SOCIAL

Two Men Killed and Others Injured at Dugger, Ind.

Grievances that caused a fist fight in the streets of Dugger, Ind., led to a pitched battle with revolvers when the rival factions clashed at an ice cream social at Levi Gambill's grove, near Dugger, at midnight.

As a result two men are dead, one is dying and three others are seriously wounded. No arrests were made at the time.

The dead are William Shepherd, forty-four years old, unmarried, shot through the heart; Walter Alsman, aged thirty-two, married, nephew of Shepherd.

Fractures Skull in Fall.

At Rockford, Ill., Forbes W. Talcott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walt Talcott of Rockford, suffered a fracture of his skull when his horse fell with him on the Talcott ranch near Tucson, Ariz.

HOLLAND—A bolt of lightning struck the residence of Peter Vantak during a severe storm. The bolt tore a chandelier from the ceiling and demolished a reading lamp on the table. Mrs. Vantak and her daughter were only a few feet away, but escaped injury.

EMREROR OF JAPAN HAS PASSED AWAY

Reins of Government Assumed by Crown Prince.

Yoshihito Succeeds Mutsuhito, Who Led Nation Through Period of Transformation and Radical Reform.

Mutsuhito, the emperor of Japan, died at Tokyo, Japan, at 12:43 a. m. Acute nephritis was given as the cause of death.

The crown prince, Yoshihito, has succeeded to the throne.

Tens of thousands of persons who had gathered in the park about the palace prepared to spend the night in prayer for the emperor gave expression of their grief when the announcement of his death was made.

The Mikado Mutsuhito has never been much more than an idea to his people. To the elect he appeared for a few moments twice yearly at a ceremonial garden party, but the masses have not only never seen him, but have never even seen his carriage roll past, or so much as the streets cleared for his passage. The crown prince is known about Tokio as a man of flesh and blood, for he has ventured out and shown himself, although always elaborately surrounded by his attendants.

Mutsuhito was of a quiet, unassuming nature, yet possessed of a will of iron, he accomplished great reforms.

As a statesman he commanded the respect of the nations of the world. As a leader of his people in peace and in war he was both loved and feared. To his virtues they attributed the victories over their enemies by land and sea. To his wisdom they credited the advance of ancient Japan to a place in the front rank of nations. His reign began in 1867 and outlasted that of all but two or three living monarchs.

Under the rule of Mutsuhito Japan enjoyed an unprecedented era of prosperity. Civilization has made rapid strides. The arts and ideas of the western world have been adopted and Japan has emerged from darkness into light.

Mutsuhito was born in Kyoto Nov. 3, 1852. He was the second son of Emperor Komei and succeeded to the throne on the death of his father in 1867, becoming the one hundred and twenty-first Emperor of Japan. The country was then in a ferment owing to concessions which had been granted as the result of a treaty made in 1856 after the visit of the expedition commanded by Commodore Perry, the American naval officer, in 1852-4. This threw open some ports to foreign trade. It was only by force of arms that the new ruler enforced his decree and saved Japan from reversion to primitive conditions.

In 1869 the emperor established a deliberative assembly. This and other reforms then inaugurated ended feudalism, which had existed for centuries in Japan, and the nation moved forward on the road of progress.

EMMET—William Cowhy, a well known bachelor farmer, living in Riley township, being short of help to take care of the harvest, went to Port Huron and hired a stranger. After paying his car fare to Emmet Cowhy and the man went to his farm and started to prepare dinner. During the preparation of the meal Cowhy stepped outside and during his absence the newly acquired help hid behind the door and as Cowhy entered, struck at him with a large club. Throwing out his arm Cowhy avoided a blow on the head and succeeded in overpowering the stranger, who, however, made his escape. Cowhy suffered a broken wrist and Sheriff Wagonsell is looking for the man.

MICHIGAN DRY TICKET

Banker Is Prohibition Candidate for Governor of Michigan.

Lansing, Mich., July 27. — Prohibitionists of Michigan put a state ticket in the field by filing nomination petitions for the primaries. As there will be no contests in that party the petitions are equivalent to nominations.

J. D. Leland, banker of Corunna, is the candidate for governor; F. O. Demorest of Albion for lieutenant governor, F. W. Corbett of Lansing for congressman at large, and W. A. Taylor of Battle Creek for United States senator.

LOSS OF LIFE FEARED

Severe Wind, Rain and Hail Storm Strikes Cadillac.

Two Boats Found Capsized on Lake Cadillac—Pleasure Steamer Driven Ashore.

Cadillac, Mich., July 31.—One of the most severe wind, rain and hailstorms which has hit this section of the state in several years struck Cadillac, considerable damage being done. Two capsized row boats were found floating on Lake Cadillac two hours after the storm, but no definite information concerning the whereabouts of the occupants can be learned.

The steamer Randall, which was running on Lake Michell, the larger of the two lakes, with forty pleasure-seekers on board, was driven onto the sand opposite the cottages on the south. The occupants were forced to wade fifty rods to the shore, where they took refuge in the resort cottages.

Trees in the city were blown down and scores of small buildings were overturned. Practically every rural telephone line going out of Cadillac was put out of commission and it is reported that the wind and hail did great damage to the crops. The storm belt extended from Boyne City to Reed City.

Petoskey to Have $80,000 School.

Petoskey, Mich., July 30.—By a good majority the electors, decided to erect the new $80,000 high school building on the present site, instead of buying new land or adding to the present property. Several options had been secured by the board but these were all rejected. Work on the new building will begin at once.

KALAMAZOO—The reverend W. H. Phelps, pastor of the First Methodist church of Battle Creek and son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Phelps of this city, was removed from a train in Chicago and operated upon for appendicitis. Fearing an attack he left Minneapolis in an effort to reach the home of his parents here before undergoing the operation. His condition became so serious that it was necessary for him to be taken from the train at Chicago. His parents and wife have gone to Chicago.

BATTLE CREEK—When William Ashley had returned to his home on South Jefferson street he noticed two men looking in the back yard, and when he stepped out on the back porch a few minutes later, revolver in hand, they had disappeared. A moment later Ashley's wife rushed out on the porch and yelled that the house was afire. An alarm was turned in and before the flames could make any headway they were extinguished.

BATTLE CREEK—Another wave of crime hit Battle Creek when the office of C. R. Brewer Lumber company, 111 Marshall street, was burglarized, and another robbery attempted at the home of Dr. C. D. Freeman, twenty-nine Tompkins street. The burglars opened the safe at the lumber company's office and secured $100 and a gold watch and chain. Nothing was obtained at Dr. Freeman's home.

LANSING—The board of trustees of the M. A. C. have filled the place made vacant by the resignation of Professor Thomas Blaisdell, now president of Alma college, by appointing Professor W. W. Johnson, who has been dean of the department of science and letters of the University of Oklahoma for four years.

SAGINAW—John Pearson of Saginaw committed suicide by taking carbolic acid. Pearson was forty-five years of age. He had come home under the influence of liquor and had threatened to end his life but his wife did not take his assertions very seriously. A widow and four daughters survive.

MISS LIFE'S REAL JOY

TRUTH IN CHARGE THAT AMERICANS TRAVEL TOO FAST.

Might Pay Well to Take a Lesson From Our European Kin, and Devote Some Part of Existence to Leisure.

Speed, hurry, rush—doubtless they are effective as commerce accelerators, but they are death to aesthetics. We have ceased to write letters, we propose marriage by wire and hold th[illegible]re until we hear the answering co[illegible]. Nothing can be funnier than the way in which we take our holidays. And an ordinary evening's joy is a Marathon between the office, the dressing room, the dinner table, the theater, the supper, then home, writes Kate Masterson in Lippincott's Magazine.

Life to us takes on the guise of scenery passed through on a fast express. Houses, humans, cows, sheep, flash by in confusion. We get impressions rather than clear views. Even our friendships, our loves and our hates are misty, indistinct affairs, that come and go and become dreams.

Our memories are blurs, for the rush of today is upon us, and tomorrow is treading upon our heels. A hand-clasp and good-by, and we part from a comrade, each hurrying on his own way, for there is no time for cronyship. Our national gait and our quick lunch system have made countless thousands merry. We are the push!

Not long ago Punch published a picture naively called "A Scene in America." A ferry had pushed off quite a distance from the dock and two belated passengers are portrayed poised midway in the atmosphere, in the act of jumping for the boat, while the other passengers look on admiringly.

"Thank goodness we'll catch it," says Jones. "There's not another for a minute and a half!"

We would not, if we could, put on the manners and moods of the Orient. They would sit on us unbecomingly as the turbans of the Hindu or the jeweled robes of rajahs. But we can learn a few lessons in leisure from our English neighbors, cultivating their rose gardens and stopping an hour each day for tea, though the heavens fall.

"And the Parisians with their grand dejeuner, their coffee under the trees on the Bois, their hour for the aperitif—so many pauses, in fact, for pleasure, that the business day is cut to a few hours, and it suffices. The speed maniac may call upon us to observe our own achievement, our progress, our healthy democracy, and a lot of other things. But is the art of living rightly not worth while? Are we getting as much out of life as we might if we stayed our pace and went more slowly down the path that leads into the sunset?

Woman's Unfitness.

An anti-suffragist once said, "Woman's unfitness for the ballot necessitates her continuance in a narrow environment."

This reminds us of the old negro who was asked why he did not seek religion. He replied, "Boss, I ain't fit."

"Well," said the other man, "why don't you get fit?"

Uncle Pete answered, "Boss, I ain't fitten to git fit."—Woman's Journal.

HEDGEHOGS TO CLEAN CAMPS

Woodsmen in Maine Find They Have Little Use for the Mop or Scrubbing Brush.

If the stories told by Maine woodsmen are to be believed they entertain many queer visitors in camp during the winter. Among the most familiar guests may be mentioned the chickadees and bluejays, but these are by no means the most interesting callers.

One woodsman, it appears, leaving camp on a Saturday afternoon left his shack door open, as was his custom, so that the hedgehogs might come in and clean up the floor. Inasmuch as the principal items of the camp menu are baked beans, pork and other dishes rich in fats, considerable grease is spilled upon the floor in the course of a week, and the average hedgehog will at any time risk his neck for a bit of fat.

Just as soon, therefore, as this particular camp was deserted by the humans for a while the spiny gluttons would hasten in and plane off the surface of the floor with their chisel-shaped teeth, eating away all the wood that held a trace of grease. So on returning to camp Monday morning the owner was enabled to sweep up and enjoy the luxury of a clean house for another week. About the only objection to this system lay in the fact that the camp must have a new floor each year.

The same woodsman tells how, late in February, a pair of white footed wood mice stole into his camp from their home in the forest and made a nest in acorns under the bunk. The first thing the little fellows did was to eat a hole in a bag of cracked corn and carry away more than a quart of the contents. The whole bag was sorted for the largest fragments, every one of which was denuded of its covering and freed from all grains of meal. The pilferings were put in a heap near the nest and covered over with strips of newspapers.

When these mice had been installed in their new quarters for about a week they began to construct a luxurious couch. The outside was made of shredded newspapers and ribbons of birch bark. The lining was of horse hair taken from an old chair.

Egypt to Reclaim Million Acres.

One of the most costly and comprehensive drainage projects for the reclamation of lands undertaken by any government in the world, and certainly the greatest enterprise of its kind in Mediterranean countries, has just been begun by the Egyptian government to make cultivable 1,000,000 acres of fertile land in the delta of lower Egypt. The reclaiming of these lands will necessitate an expenditure approaching $15,000,000 for drainage and approximately a like amount for irrigation. The work as planned will require over four years and will be brought to completion about the end of 1916. The principal object of the project is to redeem a tract of unproductive land and bring a fertile but now worthless region of the delta under cotton cultivation. When this is done it is roughly estimated that the increase in value of the reclaimed and improved land will approximate $100,000,000. The land to be reclaimed is 90 per cent government owned.

TECUMSEHITES PROMINENT

At Osteopathic Convention in DETROIT.

Drs. Arnet Garlinghouse and Winifred DeWolf.

In Tuesday's issue of the Detroit Free Press appeared a picture of the executive committee of the Michigan State Osteopathic Association, now in convention in Detroit Tecumseh is well represented.

We find in the front row a fine picture of Dr. Arnet Garlinghouse. Dr. Garlinghouse was born and spent his boyhood days in Tecumseh, graduating from our high school. About two years ago he graduated from the college at Kirkville, Mo., and since then has been practicing at Chaalotte, Mich., with marked success.

In the second row the familiar face of Dr. Winifred DeWolf is seen. She is a Tecumseh girl and always loyal to her home town. She also was a graduate of Kirkville, Mo., and since her graduation has had an office in Detroit where she has a large practice. Dr. DeWolf has been highly spoken of in the Detroit papers for her marked success with infantile paralysis We are especially interested in her and proud of her as well, as her first work after leaving school was reportorial work for THE TECUMSEH HERALD.

Interesting Spire.

Since the sudden fall of the great Campanile at Venice a few years ago scientific experiments have been made to afford assurance of the stability of other famous architectural piles in Italy.

Among these is the unique cathedral of Milan, built all of marble, with scores of slender pinnacles, and a lofty main spire terminating in a great marble statue of the Virgin. The experiments on this spire, while demonstrating its complete stability, show interesting effects of the wind and solar rays. As with other lofty towers, the point of the spire describes daily an elliptical curve, the size and precise form of which vary with atmospheric conditions. But the greatest displacement seldom amounts to more than a single minute of arc, in this case less than a third of an inch. A tempest of uncommon violence in 1905 displaced the top of the spire eight millimeters.—Harper's Weekly.

Makes Protest for Miners.

The Transvaal Cornish association, says a Johannesburg telegram, has passed a resolution declaring that, in view of the revenue which the state derives, directly and indirectly, from the mining industry, the state should contribute not less than 50 per cent. of the total required for the compensation of sufferers from miners' phthisis, and that no part should be contributed by miners as proposed in the government bill.

Wooden Vessel Superior.

Admiral Peary says that in some respects the old-fashioned wooden ship is less vulnerable to the dangers of the sea than the huge steel liner. He once crashed into a partly submerged iceberg while going at full speed in broad daylight. "The stout little ship" (the Roosevelt), he says, "caromed off the berg like a billiard ball, without injury; a steel ship would have had her bilge torn open from bow to quarter."

MID-SUMMER WEDDING

LYLE HILL AND HELEN WILSON UNITED IN MARRIAGE JULY 31, 1912

The House a Bower of Brown-eyed Susans

A pretty artistic wedding took place Wednesday evening at the home of Mr, and Mrs Andrew Wilson when again those old words, "O. Promise Me" were spoken by Miss Helen Wilson and Lyle Hill, the music being played by a sister Vesta while Mrs, George Witherell a cousin of the bride sang the words, in a most charming manner.

In an informal way the guests were met by the young couple who promptple at six o'clock took their places at the west side of the room which was a bank of Brown eyed Susans, The marriage ceremony was pronounced by the Rev. DeSpelder in a most impressive manner. The ring service being used.

The bride looked beautiful in a gown of white voile trimmed in lace and a broad band of yellow satin at the hem. She carried a shower boquet of Bon Silene roses, The groom was dressed in conventional black,

Directly after congratulations they proceeded to the dining room and were seated at the bride's table. At this table were seated also the two families of the bride and groom. The yellow and white effect was carried out with a gilt basket of Brown-eyed Susans in the center with place cards in yellow and white and in the three course supper that followed the color scheme was also carried out, The young ladies who served were Florence Aten, Harriet Teachout, Myrna Service and Veva Hendershot. A profusion of beautiful presents consisting of cut glass, silver, fancy china and linen will be pleasant reminders in their future home.

Mr. and Mrs. Hill left on the 9:03 train for Cleveland where they will remain for a month, after which they will be at home to their many friends in Toledo, Ohio

There were forty six guests present the out of town guests being:—Mrs. Hill of Berlin Heights, Ohio, mother of the groom, Dr. J Douglas, wife and daughter Elizabeth of Sandusky, Ohio, Mrs. Fannie Waterman of Glennwood, Fla., Mrs. Nina Lehr and son William of Detroit, Mrs. Albert Reason and son Freeman of London, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. Frank Camburn, Saline, Mich., Mrs. Eva Kimball of Tipton and Frank Osborn and daughter Margaret, Columbus, O.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Emerson celebrated the 21st anniversary of their marriage July 28, 1912. A fine three course dinner was served. The table was beautifully decorated with pond lillies.

Covers were laid for Messrs. and Mesdames Adam Habel, Daniel Habel, Peter Leibler, Glenora Leibler, Jacob Habel, Earl Habel, Mrs Elizabeth Leibler, Mrs. Meta Barhild, Hazel Barhild, all of Metamora, Ohio, these coming in their autos; Mr. and Mrs. Lester Fish, of Raisin; Mrs. Charles Emerson, of Clinton, and Mr. William Pam, of Sutton.

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson received several beautiful presents, among them a solid silver gravy spoon and a number of lovely boquets. The day spent with music and visiting. Ice cream and cake were served just before the guests departed.

GRANGE PICNIC SATURDAY

At Farm Home of Mr. and Mrs. Newton Bryan.

One hundred thirty-two Grangers met at the home of Newton Bryan, west of town, Saturday for a Grange picnic, and they had it too. Lester Coller was on hand and took a picture of the crowd, after which dinner was served, and such a dinner as only Grangers know how to serve at such a time. In the afternoon a program was given as follows.

Song by the company, "Old Black Joe".
Recitation—Mrs. N. Bryan.
Piano solo—Miss Erva Finch.
Comic stories by various Grangers.
Vocal solo—Miss Susie Wells.
"The Song My Mother Used to Sing—Six girls

After three cheers for their host and hostess, the crowd dispersed for their several homes, each thinking the day had been a happy one. Will Waldron was on hand with his hay rack and took about twenty to the scene of action.

B. Y. P. U. PICNIC

About forty of the young people of the B. Y. P. U. held a basket picnic last Friday afternoon in the grove by the Globe Mill pond. A fine picnic supper was served to which all did ample justice. A pleasant hour was spent in social festivities and the crowd, as they wended their way homeward, pronounced the picnic a perfect success.

GARDEN PARTY

Under the Management of Mrs. R. S. Moore, For the Benefit of the Baptist Church.

LARGE CROWD, BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS, PRETTY DISPLAY, DELICIOUS LUNCH FINE PROGRAM

The Annual Garden Party of the Baptist Church was held last evening at the home of Mrs. Robert Moore. An unusually fine program was given to an appreciative audience. The grounds as usual looked charming under the brilliant electric light.

The Electric display was unusually attractive, a large star in the center of the lawn from which radiated numerous lights making the scene as bright as day.

The porch which was used as a stage was beautifully lighted, also the grounds where the refreshments were served Here was an old fashioned garden filled with Bachelor buttons, Coreopsis, Petunias, Candytuft and Phlox such as our mothers used to grow. One could but feel that the ladies with their sheath gowns were out of place in this garden, which should be peopled with fair damsels with the patch upon their cheek, their flowing skirts and their mincing steps

Our home talent is to well known and appreciated to need mention. Mr. Percival gave a fine solo which was much enjoyed by all, and they hope to hear him again in H. M. S. Pinafore, Miss Schalk was fine in her piano solo, and was highly applauded. Those who heard Mr Porter in the young men's quartette last season, were glad of the privilege of hearing him last evening, and his response to an encore was cheered to the echo, Miss Hutton with her violin carried the crowd with her, and she was encored most heartily and responded with another delightful number. A tenor solo by Mr. Krone was such a song of Thanksgiving that his audience respondedd in heart if not in voice, Mr. Tuttle of Kansas, rendered a pleasing recitation and responded to an encore. The entertainment will net the committee about $60.

BRIDGE PARTY

Mrs Floyd Ager entertained at Bridge Thursday afternoon, honoring Mrs. A. E Reason of London, Ont., and Mrs. Nina Lehr of Detroit. Miss Alma Schmid of Manchester a sister of Mrs Ager, was also present. Four tables of Bridge were played. Dainty refreshments, were served and a delightful afternoon was spent by all

When the Sleeper Woke.

There is a prominent lawyer in New York who finds an after-dinner nap an absolute necessity. He cannot keep awake and the habit of drifting off for a few moments, no matter where nor how, brings him frequent embarrassments. Recently his wife saw him doze while talking to a distinguished judge who was their dinner guest, but she was clever and quick enough to divert the visitor's attention to herself, so that the lapse passed unnoticed at the time. Unfortunately, just as the host regained a stupid half-consciousness the guest rose to depart. The lawyer stepped forward with his most courteous greeting.

"How do you do, Judge?" he inquired, smothering a yawn. "Why, I never saw you looking better. I hope you're going to stay to dinner with us?"

California or Kansas and Potatoes, Which?

AS SEEN THROUGH THE EYES OF EDWIN TAYLOR AN OLD TECUMSEH BOY

Under this peculiar caption, we find an article in a late issue of "The Missouri and Kansas Farmer," published in Kansas City. An article by one of Tecumseh's old time boys, Edwin Taylor. Mr. Taylor is called the potatoe specialist and is Vice President of the Board of Regents, of the Kansas State Agricultural Society.

Mr. Taylor gives a very impartial comparison between the two States with more pro's than con's for both of them. He admits the California farmers are better than those of Kansas and are better merchants as they cooperate in buying and selling. California would as soon think of going to law without a lawyer as of going to market without an expert advisor and salesman,

He goes on to say that the question of California or Kansas, seems incompetent, irreverent and immaterial, as for most of the Kansas or Californians, they couldn't move here in any great number, nor could many of us go there, as should all wish to sell out there would be no buyers, so instead of longing for something we haven't got, and most of us cannot get, what wisdom it would be for all of us to note carefully and cherish more zealously the good things we already have—"and potatoes"—if there is anything better than new potatoes and cream gravy why whoever thinks so let him speak. The only trouble is we do not raise enough to supply our home market If you ask what is the matter with Edwardsville that she doesn't fill the breach my reply will be, we have not forgotten when we sold potatoes for 10 cents per bushel and she doesn't mean to chase to hard after anything that is liable to take a big drop.

Human Happiness.

Well-being and happiness are not an inheritance of which we take possession at birth and which we are destined to enjoy at our ease; they are to be searched after with unwearied assiduity. We enter into life destitute of everything but simple existence. All that we enjoy in our passage through life are acquisitions; they are the result and rewards of our own diligence and [illegible] communicated by the diligence and care of others.—Cogan.

THE JAMES OLIVER No. 11 SULKY PLOW

By reason of its simple construction, light weight, easy draft, durability, and perfect work is

THE BEST PLOW YOU CAN BUY

SOME OF THE REASONS

The only sulky plow made with which you can turn either gee or haw equally well, leaving no hard spots, and avoid the necessity of plowing out corners.

It is the lightest draft riding plow made, due to the entire absence of landside friction and the even distribution of the load. The weight of the plow and driver is CARRIED instead of being DRAGGED along.

One share on the No. 11 will outlast four walking plow shares. It holds to the ground at all times, especially in dry weather. May be used with or without tongue. The turning and scouring qualities of the OLIVER PLOW BASES are unequalled.

WHY IT SUCCEEDS

Because It's for One Thing Only, and Tecumseh People Appreciate This.

Nothing can be good for everything. Doing one thing well brings success. Doan's Kidney Pills do one thing only.

They help sick kidneys.

They relieve backache, kidney and bladder trouble

Here is Tecumseh evidence to prove it.

Mrs. Sarah E. Austin, Pearl St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have had no need of Doan's Kidney Pills or any other kidney medicine since 1908. I can still recommend this preparation highly. I suffered from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint for more than a year and when someone told me that Doan's Kidney Pills were effective in cases of this kind, I obtained a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They help me immediately and I continued their use until I was well."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agent for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

"I'm tired of laying eggs," complained the hen. "And I'm tired of lying about them," chimed in the dealer in the coldstorage product

Hay fever and asthma make August a month of intense suffering to many people. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound gives prompt ease and relief, and is soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes. Wm. M. Merethew, N. Searsport, Me., says: "A few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound relieved me of a severe attack of asthma and less than a bottle caused a complete cure." Refuse substitutes. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

THE TRIALS OF A TRAVELER

"I am a travelling salesman," writes E. E. Youngs, E. Berkshire. Vt., "and was often troubled with constipation and indigestion till I began to use Dr. Kings New Life Pills, which I have found an excellent remedy." For all stomach, liver or kidney troubles they are unequaled. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

It is said "most women have five senses. Some have common sense and a sense of humor, how many have you?

Dr. C. H. Ellsworth, Dentist, 16 Baldwin St., Rochester, N. Y., says Foley Kidney Pills gave him immediate relief and strengthened him wonderfully. "I have been bothered with weak kidneys and bladder trouble and suffered much pain. Foley Kidney Pills gave me immediate relief and strengthened me wonderfully. I am pleased to recommend their use." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Robert W. Heiter, Lawrenceville, Mo., who had been bothered with kidney trouble for two years, says, "I tried three different kinds of kidney pills but with no relief. My neighbor told to use Foley Kidney Pills, I took three bottles of them, and got a permanent cure. I recommend them to everybody." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh, Tribute to the Onion.

Kill the onion and you leave a gap in the universe. Kill anything else and there is a substitute. The potato is akin to the cereals, squash and cabbage and turnips and cauliflowers are of the same family, beans are elongated peas, the lemon is a pessimistic orange, beef reincarnated grass, watermelons just the survivor of a very fit cucumber, and so on. But the onion is sui generis, alone, unique, triumphant. It is a special creation to tempt the palate of a weary world. It proves the futility of man's wisdom. He might have guessed at everything else under the sun, but he would have never guessed an onion. Science may deduce a new star before it becomes visible, or radium before its discovery, but this succulent, fragrant, starry vegetable would have gone uninvented forever, had not its own insinuating, yet not bashful qualities forced themselves into tear-brimmed eyes and [illegible] anticipatory lips. With what a mixture of gratitude and awe [illegible] we view the spectacle of [illegible] [illegible] her energies to the transmutation of mere clay into a vegetable with an artistic temperament.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

KALAMAZOO—Frederick Slater, a sixteen-year-old youth was saved from death when he was caught in the arms of Brakeman C. F. Boluman of the Grand Rapids and Indiana railway, when an engine hit his auto. Knowing it would be impossible for the engineer to stop his engine before hitting the automobile, Boluman climbed through the cab window and down onto the side of the fender just as the engine hit the automobile. The impact threw young Slater into the air. Boluman caught him just as he was falling between the fender and drive wheels. Another boy was thrown onto the steam box, but rolled off down the embankment. Three other boys were hurled to the street, but escaped with slight injuries. The automobile was reduced to wreckage. One automobile wheel was thrown 300 feet and over the top of a house.

LANSING — The Michigan state railroad commission granted permission to the promoters of the Michigan City, Lakeside and St. Joseph railroad to build the line within the Michigan boundaries. The road will, if built connect St. Joseph and Benton Harbor with Chicago. An electric line is now operating between Michigan City, I- and Chicago.

Philosophy of Pessimism.

The visitor dared to ask why Mr. Hardy was "so pessimistic a writer." This was the reply: "You are a young man. The cruelty of fate becomes apparent to people as they grow older. At first one may perhaps escape contact with it, but if one lives long enough one realizes that happiness is very ephemmeral." "But is not optimism a useful and sane philosophy?" the visitor asked. "There's too much sham optimism, humbugging, and even cruel optimism," Mr. Hardy retorted. "Sham optimism is really a more heartless doctrine to preach than even an exaggerated pessimism—the latter leaves one at least on the safe side. There is too much sentiment in most fiction. It is necessary for somebody to write a little mercilessly—although, of course, it's painful to have to do it."—Interview with Thomas Hardy in English Illustrated.

Microscope In the Home.

Miss Frances Stern of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is an advocate of the use of the microscope in the home as a means of assisting in the proper preparation of meals. The use of the microscope, according to Miss Stern, would help the housewife to do her work more intelligently. The bread maker, for instance, could learn why her bread was not a success by using the microscope. The housekeeper would also be able to tell the difference between wool, cotton and silk fibre, avoiding all possible deceptions.

Foreign Interference.

Patriot—I understand you are living abroad now. Americans not good enough for you, eh?

Expatriate—Oh, it isn't that; it is simply that I prefer being at home with foreigners to staying at home with foreigners.—Judge.

MAN AND THE SOIL.

Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, author of the Common Sense Medical Adviser, says "why does not the farmer treat his own body as he treats the land he cultivates. He puts back in phosphate what he takes out in crops, or the land would grow poor. The farmer should put back into his body the vital elements exhausted by labor, or by ill-health induced by some chronic disease." Further, he says, "the great value of my Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is in its vitalizing power. It gives strength to the stomach and purity to the blood. It is like the phosphates which supply nature with the substances that build up the crops. The far-reaching action of is due to its effect on the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. Diseases that begin in the stomach are cured through the stomach. A bilious spell is simply the result of an effort made by the liver to catch up when over-worked and exhausted. I have found the 'Discovery' to be unsurpassed as a liver regulator and rich blood-maker."

Miss Lottie Knisely of Perth, Kansas, says: "I will here add my testimony of the effectiveness of your remedy upon myself. I was troubled with indigestion for two years or more. Doctored with three different doctors besides taking numerous kinds of so-called 'stomach cures' but received no permanent relief. I was run down, could not sleep at night with the pain in my chest, caused by gas on the stomach. Was weak, could eat scarcely anything although I was hungry nearly all the time. About one year and a half ago I began taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and after having taken several bottles am nearly cured of stomach trouble. Can now eat without distress and have gained fifteen pounds in weight.

I thank you for your remedy and wish you all success in your good work."

NEW YORKERS CREDULOUS

Show Amazing Ignorance of Country Outside of Tight Little Manhattan Isle.

This true story was told by a western merchant at one of the recent dinners given by a commercial organization here, says the New York correspondent of the Cincinnati Times Star. The merchant protested against the puerile ignorance of all the rest of the country which is displayed by the average New York man.

"I told the head of one of the biggest houses in town the old story," said he, "of the youngster who returned to New York after an absence.

"'I've been away out west,' said he.

"'And where were you?' asked his friend.

"'In Syracuse,' said he. And do you know, that merchant smiled a kind of doubtful, polite smile—the sort of a smile which is a tribute to one's business rating, and not to one's humor. He didn't see the point at all. But I thought that he was an exception until I walked down town with a friend of mine, who is at the head of a big commercial organization in the southwest. He specializes in Navajo blankets, and usually gets $35 to $50 for extra good ones from the jobbers here in the east. He called on the jobbers, to look over their stock of blankets, and finding that the man in charge did not know him, he priced the stock.

"'A good blanket,' said the man in charge, 'is worth from $250 up.'

"It surprised my friend, for he knew what he sold those same blankets to the same firm for. And he asked the reason. And that fog-brained, varnish-headed, white-eyed salesman told him this, in all seriousness, and believing every word he said.

"'You see,' said he, 'collecting blankets is a very dangerous business. Three men out of every five we send to the wilds are killed by the savage Indians.'"

"You weren't here yesterday, Algernon," said Mr. Topfloor the other morning as he got into the elevator. "I hope you were enjoying yourself somewhere."

"Was yo' eve' to a Sunday school picnic, Mistoh Topflo'?" responded Algernon. "Dat were I was. I went wif my broder-in-law an' his family. Dere was 'bout 600 head o' chilluns went, and a lot o' people, young an' ol'. Oh, no, sah, we didn' hab no dancin'. De minister o' dat chu'ch he don' b'lieve in dancin'. Oh, yas, sah, we all has a good' nuff time, 'specially de chilluns; but [illegible], yo' know, Mistoh Topflo', I t'ink I radder be runnin' de elebator; it's cooler an' dere's mo' 'citement an' less [illegible]."

An Intermediary

By NELLIE CRAVEY GILLMORE

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

After an hour's attention to the flying landscape, Billy's interest abruptly collapsed and his curly brown head sagged against the brown plush corner of the seat. He was roused suddenly by the sound of a voice—it sounded very close—addressing his pretty young mother just opposite.

"Anything I can do for you or the kiddie? I'm going into the smoker for a little—"

Billy sat up and rubbed his eyes. He turned them eagerly toward his mother's face; then up to the pleasant-looking man who had addressed her.

"Want to go, youngster?"

Mrs. Harcourt shook her head and smiled. "You mustn't annoy Dr. Steel, Billy. I'm afraid—"

"Oh, that's all right. Come along. We'll have a change of scene, eh, kid?"

Mrs. Harcourt cast an appreciative glance into the doctor's kindly gray eyes, and when they had disappeared hand in hand, she leaned back with a half sigh against the cushion, her lids drooping wearily.

Dr. Steel found Billy a comfortable seat on the arm of a great chair near the window and was soon immersed in the animated political discussion he had temporarily interrupted by his entrance. Presently, one of the men, having "had his say," withdrew and sat down in the big chair by Billy. "Hey—what's your name, little fellow?" he asked, pinching the plump leg that dangled over his shoulder.

"William," was the dignified rejoinder.

"That your papa over there?"

"Oh no. That's only Dr. Steel. I haven't any papa. Have you any little boys?"

"Yes—one." Billy was too young to notice the tone and he laughed and clapped his hands.

"I'm so glad. We can play together. Is he here?"

"No, William; he isn't here. He—he's at home you know. I haven't seen him for a long, long time. I suspect he's such a big man now I'd hardly know him."

"Do you live in New York, too?"

"I used to. I live mostly in hotels now and on railroad trains. I'm what you'd call a 'knight of the grip'—just a plain old everyday drummer."

"But you come to New York sometimes? You're going there now, aren't you? Perhaps you'll bring your little boy to see me one of these days!"

"I hope so. Who knows? That would be great fun, wouldn't it?"

"Bully. Is he as big as me?"

"He's seven."

"Do you know any good stories?"

"Perhaps—"

Somewhat to the stranger's surprise, Billy suddenly slid from his perch to the man's knee. "Tell me one," he wheedled.

But at this juncture Dr. Steel rose to go and Billy ruefully took leave of his new friend. The latter watched him out of sight with dreamy, wistful eyes.

A little sigh escaped him. The clouds, briefly dispelled by Billy's bright chatter, returned to his face. He rested his chin in one hand and gazed wearily through the rain-streaked window.

"Am I very badly hurt, Mamma?"

Mrs. Harcourt bent and kissed the small, flushed face above the cover. "Your arm is broken, dear. It will be tedious, but you'll be all right in the end. Dr. Steel gave you some ether and set it nicely."

Billy closed his eyes drowsily. Suddenly he opened them wide and looked around. "Where are we, anyhow? I don't remember anything that's happened since—since we ran into the freight train. Mamma, I wonder if that nice gentleman we saw in the smoker was killed?"

"No one was killed; some of the passengers were very badly injured though. Perhaps we might ask Dr. Steel?"

"I wish he'd hurry up and come, Mamma," he asked abruptly, "why haven't I any papa—like other little boys?"

"You—we lost him, Billy. Let's not talk about it now. Wait till we get back home. Some day I'll tell you all about it."

"When will we get back home?" he insisted.

"In a few days, I think. Meanwhile we must be satisfied to stay here. This is a country hotel about a mile from where the wreck took place. I think we shall be very comfortable—ah! here you are now, Doctor. Billy is very much concerned about a gentleman he saw in the smoking-room—"

"Laid up, kiddie—badly bruised. Nothing serious, though; I expect he'll be out tomorrow."

"And you'll bring him to see me? He knows some stories and—"

"Yes, yes; certainly. By the way, he was inquiring about you: 'the little tad' he called you."

Billy's face rippled. And presently he slept.

Dr. Steel came early the following morning. "I think you need a bit of fresh air," he said to Mrs. Harcourt, "would you care to walk down the road? Billy's pal is on his feet today and he will gladly come in and sit with him for a half hour. Come, what do you say?"

Mrs. Harcourt glanced dubiously toward the cot. "Shall I, dearie?" she asked.

"O, please do—if the nice gentleman will come and talk to me!"

And so Billy's mother rather reluctantly donned coat and hat and went down on the piazza to wait for Dr. Steel.

When the stranger came in, Billy was propped up on snowy pillows, his eager, flushed face turned expectantly toward the door.

"Well, well, little man, this won't do at all. What—a broken arm? And what do you think is the best cure for a thing like that, eh?" He fished a square white box from his pocket as he spoke and displayed it to Billy's curious gaze. "Marshmallows. But only a dozen at a time, you know," he cautioned.

"You're going to tell me the story now, aren't you?" he questioned anxiously.

The other sat down by the cot, drew a deep breath, nodded and began:

"Once upon a time there was the most beautiful little home you ever could dream of—all green and white and pink and gold with roses in summer. There were great velvet lawns reaching down to a hedge in front, and great, broad fields at the back, full of big, gnarled old trees that boys love to climb and a little amber creek running through, for boys to go swimming in. There were cows and horses and cats and dogs—"

Billy's steady glance gave a flicker of sudden delight. "And a Shetland pony like Jim Bailey's!" he interrupted breathlessly.

"Yes; a little spotted pony—for my boy." The words slipped out unguardedly, but he bit his lip and went on: "But one day something happened—it was little and trivial, it wasn't really anything—but it broke up everything. The little boy's mamma went away to live with her people—and his papa went away by himself."

"I'm so sorry." The moisture gathered in Billy's eyes and ran in crystal tracks down his cheeks. All at once he looked up and said earnestly: "I wish I was your little boy!"

The stranger laughed heartily and reached over and patted his chubby hand. "Do you really?" he asked.

Billy nodded. "Tell me another story," he begged. "That one didn't have the right ending."

The other took out his watch. "I wish I had the time, but I'm afraid it's getting too late. You see I must catch that downcoming train; I hear the doctor and your mamma coming now, and I'll run across the hall and pack my grips."

"Wait till they come, please. I want you to—Mamma!" he interrupted himself, "hurry up and come see the nice gentleman. He's going away on the train and you might not get another chance."

Mrs. Harcourt entered the room with cheeks glowing from her brisk walk in the biting morning air; her eyes shone as they rested on Billy's beaming face. She turned a smiling glance to greet Billy's "nice gentleman." She half expected to see a battered old hero of two wars with apple cheeks and silver hair. What she really saw was a man just verging on the prime of life—tall, broad-shouldered, strikingly good-looking.

"Will!" The name broke in a little quiver from her white, trembling lips. The stranger took a quick step forward; his own face had grown white. But the old smile, vivid and compelling, leapt to his lips. In silence he held out his arms. In silence she went to him and he held her there, as though he would never let her go. Suddenly they remembered and turned to Billy. But only the outlines of a tiny form appeared beneath the closely-drawn sheets.

Billy understood.

CASE OF STINGY HUSBAND

How One Head of a Family Superintended Expenditures for Household Needs.

In a lively article in the current number of Farm and Fireside, on the relations between husbands and wives on the subject of home finances, there are several interesting reports of actual cases. Following is a report of a stingy husband:

"'A girl I knew in my youth was married after a short acquaintance to a scholarly professional man. He had been brought up under hard conditions in a strenuous school of poverty. She was the daughter of wealth and had never been denied a reasonable wish. Her husband was what is called a good provider. He bought amply for the table, and was not averse to having plenty of fuel and sufficient house-furnishings to keep his home comfortable and dignified. He simply declined to let Betty buy so much as five cents' worth of anything. He did not wish her to have accounts at shops, nor did she desire them. When she wanted to buy anything for herself or the children, he accompanied her, superintended her purchases, examined every pair of stockings and every yard of muslin, and frowned upon ruching and trimmings as needless, drawing out his well-filled pocketbook and paying the bill with a flourish when the shopping had been done to his satisfaction. She never had any money in her possession except when her mother sent it to her as a gift, and when this was done, she took excellent care to keep Reuben in ignorance. Once the good man, for in some ways he was good, was compelled to leave home for a few days. He carefully counted the amount that his wife would spend for the house during his absence. Then he lost his train and had to wait over another day. Coming home, he asked her for the cash and put it back in his own pocket for the next 24 hours.'"

SHANTYMEN OF EAST CANADA

Strenuous, Genial and Virile Type That Has Not Changed in Seventy Years.

Of all classes of laborers, the eastern Canada shantyman—particularly the French-Canadian woodsmen of Quebec province—is the most strenuous, while at the same time the most genial of workers.

Skillful in all that pertains to log making and the use of the ax, which he has learned to handle from early childhood, he is ever at home in the forest and wilds. Like the Indian, were he unable to find his campground before nightfall, he would assure you that it is not he, but the camp, that is lost, for he is at home anywhere in the forest while cold and hardship have no terrors for him, since he can usually make himself comfortable in spite of the worst conditions imaginable.

Tracing the history of the shantyman through the romantic legends of the conteurs de conte, the impression is gained that those of the early lumbering days were of the roughest and most formidable character—physical giants, with whom the shantymen of the present day would be but miserably contrasted. From truer, though less romantic, sources, it is found, however, that those old bushwhackers could not chop more logs in a given time than the present day lumbermen. In fact, the whole system of log making in eastern Canada is, with few exceptions, the same today as it was some 50 years ago.—British Columbia Magazine.

The Main Thing.

Arnold Bennett, the English romancer, was much impressed in New York by the beauty of the girl stenographer.

"It isn't your actresses or your society belles that I'd award the palm for beauty," Mr. Bennett said at a luncheon. "It's to your stenographers.

"I won't say it's their beauty alone that gets these girls their positions, but I'll tell you a story.

"A male stenographer was talking about a girl who had displaced him.

"'Is she really an expert?' his listener asked.

"'Oh, no,' was the reply; 'but she's as expert as you'd expect a girl of her beauty to be.'"

READY TO LAUNCH NEW THIRD PARTY

Roosevelt Supporters Open Convention in Chicago.

VICE PRESIDENTIAL GOSSIP

Chicago, Aug. 5.—The first national convention of the National Progressive party was called to order in the Coliseum at noon by Senator Joseph M. Dixon of Montana, head of the provisional National Progressive committee.

After a prayer, Ex-Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana was chosen temporary chairman, and made the keynote speech.

Now the bull moose will flatten his antlers and make his get-away in the race against the elephant and the donkey.

There will be none of the difficulties in picking a rider for the latest addition to the menagerie of political symbols that attended the selection of a mahout for the pachyderm at the Republican convention in June and of a driver for the Democratic burro at Baltimore. Compared with the Republican and Democratic conventions the National Progressive convention will be more or less of a cut-and-dried affair, devoid of dissension and fights. But a new party is not born every day, and the formal launching of the third party will be attended with much of the spectacular. It will undoubtedly be one of the most vociferous conventions in political history and for the next two days the Coliseum will echo with the same tumult and enthusiasm that filled the Florentine room of the Congress hotel in June.

When the delegates were called to order the question of who is to be Theodore Roosevelt's running mate was almost the only matter of importance not decided upon beforehand.

Colonel Roosevelt has expressed a desire that the second place go to a southern Democrat, with the idea of strengthening the ticket. In case this plan is followed General Luke E. Wright of Memphis, who was secretary of war in Roosevelt's cabinet, is considered a strong probability. Another southern Democrat who was considered is John M. Parker of New Orleans. However, Mr. Parker declared himself out of it and avowed that the chief matter in which he would interest himself in the convention would be to make the new third party a "white man's party" in the south.

If it is decided to make an "east and west" ticket instead of an "east and south" ticket, Governor Hiram W. Johnson of California is most prominently under consideration. He declares that he will not seek the nomination, but among the delegates, who regard him as a second edition of Roosevelt, the sentiment is strongly in favor of placing him in second place. It is argued, however, that Roosevelt is so strong in the west that it would not strengthen the ticket to pick a westerner for running mate, while by giving the position to a southern Democrat, the ticket would gain popularity in the south, a region in which the Progressives are expecting to make a great fight.

There will be two "keynote" speeches. Albert J. Beveridge made the opening address of the convention. It sketched in high lights the proceedings in the Republican convention, dwelt on the most important of the contests and outlined the principles on which the third party is to be founded.

The second "keynote" speech will be delivered by Colonel Roosevelt himself, who arrived this morning. The colonel will not be a delegate, nor do his managers expect him to attend the sessions of the convention, but an invitation was given him to speak Tuesday noon. The original plan was for Mr. Roosevelt to make his address at a special meeting tonight, but this was changed in order that two "keynote" speeches would not be made on the same day. The utterances of the colonel will be perhaps the greatest feature of the convention, and they are being awaited with keen interest by leaders on all sides.

As the third step toward the organization of the convention, the provisional committee had met Saturday in the presidential suite of the Congress hotel, and perfected a temporary roll.

The committee determined contests presented from Florida, Mississippi, and Ohio. It laid down the rule in the southern contests that the state itself should decide the methods by which its delegates should be chosen. In other words, the white man will be in command of the situation in the south. This will mean, southern delegates contend, a wonderful development of voting strength in their section of the country for the new party.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON

California Man May Be Roosevelt's Running Mate.

NAME ILLINOIS TICKET

Progressives Hold Enthusiastic Convention in Chicago.

Frank H. Funk Nominated for Governor—Candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt Endorsed.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—The first Illinois state Progressive convention in Orchestra hall joined thoroughly with the national movement in the terms which had been outlined by the forces which are said to control the National Progressive convention now in progress in the Coliseum.

The following were nominated on the state ticket:

Governor — Frank H. Funk, Bloomington.

Lieutenant Governor — Judge Dean Franklin, Macomb.

Attorney General—Fletcher Dobyns, Chicago.

Treasurer—Philip Decker, Murphysboro.

Auditor—Edwin Winter, Danville.

Secretary of State—Edward O. Peterson, Aurora.

The nominees for trustees of the University of Illinois are B. F. Harris of Champaign, Mrs. Raymond Robins of Chicago, and Frederick L. Hatch of Spring Grove, the present president of the board.

The delegates at large are: Miss Jane Addams of Chicago, Mary J. Wilmarth of Chicago, C. D. Thomas of Champaign, Frank G. Allen of Moline, Frank H. Funk of Bloomington, Medill McCormick of Chicago, La Verne W. Noyes of Chicago, and John F. Bass of Chicago.

The convention also indorsed in unlimited terms the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt for the presidency on the Progressive ticket, absolved all ties which bound former Republicans or Democrats to the old parties, and issued a state platform directed chiefly at the administration of Governor Deneen.

Eight Boy Scouts Drowned.

London, Aug. 5.—A cutter containing a score of boy scouts was capsized by a squall at Leysdown and eight of the boys were drowned.

MT. ETNA AGAIN ACTIVE

Eruption Begins Unexpectedly, Following Several Earthquakes.

Rome, Aug. 5.—Mount Etna is again in eruption, fire, smoke and lava having suddenly burst forth from the crater. Several earthquakes, one of them severe, followed the eruption, arousing the population of Catania, who rushed into the streets panic-stricken.

A dense column of smoke was rising from the main crater at midday and a new mouth has opened on the northeast side of the mountain, throwing out lava and hot stones. At present there seems to be no danger from the disturbance.

CONGRESS WILL SOON END WORK

Scheme Is to Force Through Tariff Program

THEN ADJOURN FOR SESSION

General Expectations Is That the Lawmakers Will Go to Their Homes In About Two Weeks—Work To Be Done.

Washington, Aug. 5.—A tariff program that contemplates adjournment of congress on or about Aug. 15 has been framed.

The plan of the leaders is to pass five bills affecting the revenue, put them up to President Taft, who probably will veto four of them, and adjourn for the session.

The revenue bills that form the basis of the agreement are the measures revising the steel, wool, sugar, and cotton schedules of the tariff law and the excise bill that broadens the scope of the corporation tax law.

On the tariff bills it is known that President Taft will veto those reducing the rates on wool, steel, and cotton on the ground that the proposed revision is not based upon scientific inquiry by a goverament board.

The sugar bill, which proposes a marked reduction in the rates on that product as compared with free sugar as proposed by the house, probably will be approved by the president. There is a prospect that the president will veto the excess tax bill.

The plans for an early adjournment came to a head as a result of the agreement reached on the tariff program. The Democrats agreed with the senate leaders that unless there was prospect of approval by the president of tariff revision bills congress might just as well conclude its business at the earliest possible date. The plan tentatively agreed on is this:

Both houses will rush through the wool bill which was agreed to in conference. The other revenue bills will then be pushed through as speedily as possible. The Democrats proposed, and the senate leaders agreed with them, that the wool bill should first be sent to the president and that on that measure Mr. Taft should formally give notice of his attitude toward Democratic tariff revision.

Action will then be taken by congress on the steel, cotton, sugar, and excise bills. With the executive veto of the wool bill, the White House will receive in rapid succession the other four bills bearing on the revenues.

It is the general expectation that the tariff labors of congress can be completed within two weeks.

In the meantime the other work now in hand will be done under forced pressure.

The house passed, 156 to 72, the cotton tariff revision bill, when the Democratic majority claims will reduce the duties approximately 21 per cent. The measure is identical to that vetoed last year by President Taft on the ground that it was not based on official information.

TIPTON CASHIER PAROLED

Noah R. Marker, Sentenced for Embezzlement, Is Released.

Leavenworth, Kan., Aug. 5.—Noah R. Marker, formerly assistant cashier of the First National bank at Tipton, Ind., who has been a member of the "bankers' colony" of the federal prison here, has been released on parole.

Marker was received at the penitentiary Dec. 2, 1909, having been sentenced to seven years for embezzling $100,000 from the First National bank at Tipton.

MEDILL M'CORMICK

1,700 IDLE CHURCHES

These Startling Figures Apply to State of Illinois.

Sectarianism and Its Lack of Co-Operation, and Moving Out of Farm Owners Given as Reasons.

DeKalb, Ill., Aug. 5. — Abandoned churches to the number of 1,700 in the open country and in the small towns of Illinois are the figures which formed part of a startling picture of rural needs drawn by the Rev. Warren H. Wilson of New York at the country life conference.

Dr. Wilson is superintendent of the department of church and country life of the Presbyterian board of home missions. He based his estimate of 1,700 abandoned churches, he said, on an actual count of 500 secured in a survey.

This estimate does not include, Dr. Wilson explained, the churches that have been turned into corncribs, pigsties, barns, or have been burned or hauled away, but represents churches standing idle and unoccupied.

The moving out of owners and the incoming of tenants, sectarianism, with consequent lack of co-operation among the churches; false notions as to the function of the church as simply to prepare our people for heaven were given as some of the reasons for the present condition.

EXPECT COAL SHORTAGE

Lack of Stock for Winter Caused by Cessation of Work.

New York, Aug. 5. — Coal dealers here anticipate that by October the anthracite shortage in this and other cities will amount to 6,500,000 tons. This shortage, caused by the cessation of mining in April and May, will begin to be felt severely, it is believed, as soon as the winter demand for coal begins.

Nova Scotia dealers who have found it impossible to fill their orders in their territory came to this city and placed orders with the wholesalers. The mayor of Toronto, it is stated, has cabled to Wales for Welsh anthracite, which is inferior to the American article.

$100,000 WORTH OF LOOT FOUND

Former Chicago Teacher Makes Most Versatile Criminal.

ENDS MONTHS OF MYSTERY

Detectives and Police Capture Jacob F. Guthrie, Whose Operations Have Made Him Much Sought After In Constabulary Circles.

Chicago, Aug. 5.—Jacob F. Guthrie, a graduate of Armour institute and a former teacher in the Englewood High school, is locked up at central station as the perpetrator of the most extraordinary series of burglaries and forgeries ever committed in Chicago.

The plunder already recovered by the police is estimated by them to be worth about $100,000. When this booty was dug out of nine big trunks in which Guthrie had concealed it and was spread out in the basement of central station it made that dingy apartment look like the interior of Ali Baba's cave. The stolen articles, taken from the houses of wealthy Chicagoans ranged all the way from rubies to silver plate and on to valuable oil paintings.

Besides his series of house burglaries Guthrie got $11,800 in one set of forgeries committed in a period of twenty-four days. It known that he has stocks and bonds worth about $10,000. He has in addition admitted he speculated extensively and it is said he lost money in these operations.

In the brief time they have known him Guthrie has exhibited such a versality in crime that the police would not be surprised if further disclosures by the prisoner brought to light other operations as astonishing as those of which they are already cognizant.

Credit for Guthrie's capture belongs to Hugh C. McCafferty, an operative of the Pinkerton detective agency. McCafferty had been on the man's trail since May and had pursued him with all the craft of an experienced thief hunter. But McCafferty wanted Guthrie only for forgery. He did not suspect the man also was a burglar. In fact, when that idea was suggested to him as he first took the trail he scoffed at it.

James Markham of Captain Halpin's staff made the discovery that Guthrie had dabbled in another branch of crime besides forgery. That discovery was made only by an accident. Markham caught the prisoner while he was being searched at the station, trying to swallow two bits of paper. Those two bits of paper, choked from his throat, connected Guthrie with eleven sensational and successful burglaries.

The victims in each instance were prominent society people. Guthrie, in the words of the police, was "no piker." He went to the society columns to get the names of people to rob, and he robbed the people who were sojourning abroad or in Florida.

Gives Wife to Younger Man.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 5.—Admitting he was unable to support properly his fifty-year-old wife, Simon Koppel, a ragpicker, aged seventy-seven, appeared with her at the clerk of court's office and voiced consent to a divorce that she might marry a younger man. He plead that because of his love for her he was seeking to find a way to provide for her.

CHAS. R. CRANE FOR TREASURER

Chicago Man May Handle Money for Democrats.

APPOINTMENT NOT ANNOUNCED

Stated Authoritatively, However, That He Has Been Selected by Nominee Wilson and Chairman McCombs.

Sea Girt, N. J., Aug. 5. — Woodrow Wilson has returned to Sea Girt after some very fast work in New York. Except for the announcement of certain appointments, like the treasurership, chairman of the advisory committee and its members, the speaking committee and several minor bodies of not so great importance, he left nothing else in the matter of organizing for the campaign to be done. In a majority of cases he approved or suggested names of men who are at work already, but it has not yet been thought best to make their names public.

The report which comes from national committeemen who are not at Sea Girt is that Charles R. Crane of Chicago will be the treasurer and that Senator Charles H. Culberson of Texas will be the head of the advisory committee, as he was four years ago for Mr. Bryan. Senator Culberson has been in New York for several days and has frequently been at headquarters.

Governor Marshall of Indiana, the governor's running mate, is going up into Maine for a stumping tour and he may start out soon after Aug. 15. He will be in New York city today and will come to Sea Girt Wednesday for the notification ceremonies. He has to be back in Indianapolis for the twentieth, when he is to be told about his selection by Judge Alton B. Parker and his committee. Thereafter he will be free.

© by Dana Hull.
CHARLES R. CRANE.

National Chairman William F. McCombs, when seen in New York, would not admit that Charles R. Crane was even a tentative choice for campaign treasurer. Josephus Daniels, another member of the Democratic national committee, was also reticent. But it can be said on the authority of a man who knows the gist of the Wilson-McCombs conference that Mr. Crane will have the job if he will accept it. Whether or not he would accept was not known here.

Mr. Crane is president of the R. T. Crane company, elevator manufacturers, of Chicago. He has always been a Democrat until he voted for Mr. Taft in 1908. In 1910 he was appointed United States minister to China, but on the eve of his departure from San Francisco he was recalled. The reasons for the recall have never been officially stated, but it was generally understood that he was thought to have talked indiscreetly as to the purpose of his mission. It has also been said that Japan dropped a hint that another selection would be more acceptable to that nation.

CHILDREN JOIN CUDAHYS

Journey from Pasadena(Cal., to Their Remarried Parents.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 5.—The reunion of the family of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Cudahy was complete, when the four children arrived from Pasadena, Cal., where they had been in the custody of their grandmother, Mrs. Michael Cudahy.

By agreement the children were sent to the home of their grandmother two years ago, during the Cudahy divorce suit.

LESSON OF INTEREST

FIGURES THAT ARE CALCULATED TO STAGGER IMAGINATION.

What Old King Midas Might Have Accumulated Starting With the Modest Saving of Ten Cents a Week.

Why didn't King Midas, the gold lover, try to save ten cents a week! says the Chicago Tribune. He could have given the world a wonderful example of the value of the saving habit. Besides, he would have left money for the members of his family alive today. Midas was one of the kings of Phrygia. As the Phrygian line was wiped out by the Cimmerians about 670 B. C., we may assume he lived about 800 B. C., or at least 2,711 years ago.

If King Midas had started in saving ten cents a week he would have saved a dime, therefore, on each of the 140,870 weeks. This would make him the neat little sum of $14,097.20. Although not a fortune in these days, $14,097.20 is quite a fair sum to save by giving up one cigar a week. But there is more to follow.

In those days of political upheaval and commercial uncertainty, capital was entitled to a bigger return on its investment than it would be today. The risk was much greater. Though we have no actual records of Phrygian rates of usury, it is fair to assume that the Midas' account drew ten per cent. interest compounded annually for at least the first 2,000 years, or until the commercial world had reached a comparatively recent stage of development.

Beginning, therefore, 800 years before Christ, Midas put into his savings ten cents every week. At the end of the first ten weeks he had a dollar. The interest on one dollar for one year is not great, even at ten per cent., but it adds another dime to the ten already saved. At the end of the second year there is something more than two dimes to be added.

At the end of the first hundred years the accumulation on the first dollar, at ten per cent. compounded, would be $13,780.66. Thus Midas, in the year 700 B. C. would have had $13,780.66, resulting from his first ten weeks' savings. The compounding goes on through the next century so that at the end of 200 years, in the year 600 B. C., Midas would have had $189,906,590.04 from his first dollar.

At the end of the next hundred years, or in 500 B. C., the results from those first ten dimes put away would be $2,619,038,149,100.68. Continuing this compounding through the following 2,411 years it is not a complicated mathematical problem to arrive at the sum Midas would have today from his first one dollar saved.

Remember, moreover, this sum, which would be up among the uncountable trillions of dollars, would represent the increment of only one dollar put away by Midas. Midas himself, busily saving dimes, would have started a new series of dollar pyramids every ten weeks. At the end of the first year's saving he would have started five and a half of these stupendous fortunes. To compare any one of these with the $14,097.20 he would have saved if he had received no interest, certainly represents the interest habit in a favorable light.

ANDREE KILLED BY ESKIMOS

Norwegian Explorer Brings Back Story Indicating the Fate of the Pole-Seeker.

Christian Laden, a Norwegian explorer, has returned to this country with what he believes to be the first evidence of the fate of Andree's balloon. Laden was commissioned by the Royal Museum of Berlin, the University of Berlin and the University of Christiania, to explore the unknown region of northwestern Canada and to obtain data about the Indian tribes in the region, some of which have never before been visited by white men.

At a point 200 miles north by west of the point at which it has been generally believed that Andree perished, Laden encountered a tribe of Eskimos, who related a story to the effect that several years ago a large bubble fell from the heavens, containing two creatures supposed to be "devils," and that these creatures were able to hurl forth fire and thunder from strange implements that they carried. The members of the tribe attacked the two creatures and succeeded in killing one of them with arrows, whereupon the other made motions to them signifying that he and his companion were shooting at birds for food and had come in peace.

When the Eskimos realized that they had attacked human beings, who had no unfriendly motive, they fled in dismay, leaving the surviving white man alone. What became of him they do not know.—Scientific American.

Wireless Works Better at Night.

That the long electric waves utilized in aerial telegraphy over great distances travel better during the hours of darkness than of sunlight, and that the natural electric waves occasioned by atmospheric electric discharges, known as "strays" or "X's" to wireless operators, are despatched more satisfactorily during the hours of the night than in the daytime is now a matter of common knowledge.

Tests made in London during the solar eclipse on April 17 last indicate that the darkness of this eclipse had the normal effect of facilitating the propagation of these waves over great distances, but that there are portions of time during the period of deepest darkness at the receiving station when propagation is notably impeded. Whether or not this last phenomenon is to be taken as a mere accident has not yet been clearly ascertained.—America.

Revealed Family Secret.

The other day a teacher in a Boston school, who had just had a present of a very handsome hand-painted fan, took it down to the class room for the edification of the scholars. Very few of them had seen anything other than the palm leaf, or cheap Japanese fan, and did not associate this gorgeous affair even with the five cent paper things of somewhat similar shape.

Selecting perhaps the dullest of the pupils, the teacher held up the fan, and asked what the lovely thing was.

The child did not know.

"What does your mother use to keep her cool in the hot weather?" asked the teacher.

"Beer," was the reply.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

The little village of Clare Mich. boasts of two parks, one of which is described as being very beautiful, the waterworks house and tower occuying one corner of the park, that covers one village square.

It is lighted on the corners like those that are to illuminate Chicago street has cement walks, tables, benches and everything to make it pleasant.

It has two lovely fountains, one of which was designed and constructed by a young man of the town. It is made of pebble stone in the form of an umbrella and when the lights are on it is lighted in red, white and blue, beautiful flower beds are scattered around and for a small town this park is certainly fine. The man who has charge of the waterworks takes great pride in keeping the grass in perfect order.

It is claimed that Hudson is on the boom. Scarcity of accommodations, for workmen resulted in the erection of a tent in a second ward alley and a party are living in it on the anti-tuberculosis plan. Surely Hudson is progressive.

John E Carr of Adrian, a former newspaper reporter and office boy who for the past eighteen years has been in the employ of the Page Fence Co., has been made treasurer of the company. This promotion came as a pleasant surprise to his many friends as it is one of the most important offices in this large organization. Hard work and honest application to business have won him this honor.

And now they call it the "Long Dam Case" in Deerfield because it has become so moss grown and grass covered that attorneys and lawyers have become old, grey and discouraged and they have had to hire young fresh lawyers to keep the case before the courts Even the court has become old and feeble listening to the witnesses and even they have been re-inforced with new witnesses.

The Wabash Station at Adrian is undergoing some much needed renovation. New sanitary toilet rooms are being installed out of each waiting room after, much urging by the local representatives of the company who have realized the necessity for this for a long time. The general public will be glad to hear of improvements at this station as it has been in a bad condition so long.

They call it a "Doggone" time that they are having in Pontiac this month. Extra precautions are being taken against the danger from mad dogs. If a dog is caught without a muzzle the owner has to pay $2 to receive him. For the second offense $5 and then the dog will not be given up unless he is properly muzzled, if not claimed in 48 hours the dog will be killed so it behooves those who keep them muzzled.

THEY CAME FROM SCOTLAND

Phrases "We Uns" and "You Uns" Are Not Provincialisms of Southern States.

Northerners who visit certain parts of the south and southwest are sometimes amused by what they call southern provincialisms. Among these are "we uns" and "you uns." As a matter of fact, the expressions are not strictly southern, but are used by those who live—or used to live—in the Alleghenies. The mountain population seems to be largely homogeneous, as if descended from a common stock.

The mountaineers have mingled little with the people of the lower country, and being isolated, have preserved some of the peculiarities of speech and custom brought from the mother country, which the rest of us have abandoned. "We uns" is not even a true Americanism; it is common even now in Scotland, whence it was doubtless imported to our mountains by the hardy Scotch immigrants.

The phrase is an ancient one. It may be found in Tyndale's New Testament. In Matthew 3:9 can be read:

"And see that ye ons thinke not to saye in yourselves we have Abraham to oure father."

As Tyndale's translation was printed in 1526, nearly 400 years ago, this form of expression has the prestige of age, and belonged to the language of our ancestors.—Youth's Companion.

ONLY SMOKING TWENTY NOW

Scheme of Slave to Weed to Keep Doctor From Cutting Off His Cigars.

Joseph Jefferson, Jr., repeats a yarn that his father used to tell concerning a friend of the elder Jefferson who was an inveterate smoker.

The man was getting along in years and found himself afflicted with some ailment which caused him a great deal of anxiety.

"Why don't you consult a specialist?" Jefferson asked him.

After thinking it over, he decided he would. Several days later Jefferson met him and inquired as to his health, asking if he had seen a doctor.

"Yes, I went to see one," said the old man.

"And what did he say?"

"Well, you see, I'm a great smoker," he answered, "and I knew he would ask me the first thing how much I smoked and tell me to go a little slow. I smoke about 20 cigars a day, and when he asked me how many I consumed I told him on an average of 40. 'That's too many,' he said, 'just cut the number in half.' I am now smoking but 20."

Saving Something.

"This is a dreadful downpour."

"Yes, and my umbrella is far too small to shelter your picture hat!"

"Well, try to hold it over that velvet bow, anyhow."—Washington Herald.

A Movement Long Needed in Railroad Business.

A CAMPAIGN AGAINST DANGER

A plan originally adopted by the B. & O. was followed by the C. H. & D. and became effective on the Toledo—Cincinnati line Thursday. It was the "safety first" campaign for the promotion of safety of the traveling public and railroad employes when on duty. The movement is under the jurisdiction of a general safety committee with headquarters at Baltimore. Employes while serving on the safety committee or making investigations are exempt from other duties with full pay.

CAT PARTY

First Annual Cat Show Under the Management of Junior Meade

Junior Meade invited a party of 15 friends to his cat show Monday morning, calculating to parade his treasures on the business thoroughfares, The cats busted up the parade however by throwing a few fits so the youngsters went on with the parade just the same, with Pulver's ice cream counter their objective point. The party were kept in line by Mrs. E. Roy Meade and Mrs. Frank Turner, of Flint, so only the cats got away.

The cats were on exhibition at Mrs. Fisher's at 5 cents per, with Miss Esther Brewer judge. The first prize was given to Titabawassee, owned by Nerissa Fitzsimmons; second to Mischief, owned by Muriel Halladay; third, to Buster, Gertrude and Margaret Turner.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Myrna, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest VanVleet, was eight years old Friday and Mrs. VanVleet gave a little party in her honor. The afternoon was spent in games and at the close a dainty supper was served by Mrs. VanVleet assisted by Mrs. Floyd Freeman. A large number of presents were in evidence. The following enjoyed the party: Ella Mathias, Irene Crane, Malcolm and Archie Waring, Bernice Austin, Dorothy Clark, Arlene and Geraldine Gillespie, Thomas Meade, Alberta, Helen and John Deming, Bertram Klappic, Eugene Judson, Florence and Meredith Jones and George VanGuilder.

MADE HIM EARN CHERRY PIE

Resourceful and Independent Daughter Gave Old Eph Just the Lesson He Needed.

Eph Wasson did not believe in the sweetness of bread earned by the sweat of the brow—at least, not by the sweat of his own brow. So Mandy, his wife, like many another industrious colored woman, not only took in washing to pay for the groceries, but chopped her own wood, built the fires, and waited on Eph besides.

But there was a change when their daughter Clarissa came home. "Clar," who was an expert cook, had gone to school and become a teacher, and had acquired an independent spirit. She quickly took in the domestic situation.

Now all the spring Eph had watched the cherry tree in his back yard with a watering mouth. If there was one thing that Eph liked more than another it was cherry pie; and Clar was famous for her cherry pie. As good luck would have it, she had come home just as the cherries were ripe.

"Clar, honey," said Eph, in a wheedling tone, the morning after her arrival, "won't you cook yo' ole daddy a cherry pie?"

"Very well," said Clar, and Eph shuffled off happily to his usual loafing place.

"Law, honey," said Mandy, when Clar started to make the pie, "dar ain't enough wood. Yo' mammy'll have to get some."

"Not a stick!" ordered Clar, emphatically.

Moreover, there was no sugar, and only a half-cup of flour. However, that did not disturb Clar. She picked a pint of cherries, put them in a pan, and poured over them the pint of flour stirred in water. This mixture she put in the oven and lighted the only two sticks of wood in the house.

At noon Eph came in with eager anticipation, and sitting down at the table, called for his pie. Clar set it before him. He rolled his eyes at the mess in astonishment. It was a queer-looking pie; still Clar was always learning something new. He cut into it and took a big mouthful.

"Why," he exclaimed, "you done forgot to put the sugar in!"

"No," said the daughter. "You forgot to get it."

"'Tain't half done!" he grumbled, with the sour, clammy mixture sticking to his teeth.

"It cooked as long as the wood lasted," said Clar, unconcernedly.

"And I ain't had a cherry pie for more'n two years," Eph said, pushing the plate back and shaking his head mournfully.

"When you get something to make it with and something to cook it with, I'll bake you a cherry pie," said Clar.

"Huh!" grumbled Eph, in disgust. "If I's got to work for a cherry pie, I'd ruther have greens."

"All right," said Clar. "The greens are out in the pasture; go eat 'em."

But the next day there were wood and flour and sugar in the house in time for a cherry pie. After missing three regular meals, Eph had concluded that victuals of any sort were worth working for—if he could not get them in any other way.—Youth's Companion.

What "Gold-Filled" Means.

There is a notion largely held by purchasers of "gold-filled" watches that the cases are, in some mysterious fashion, impregnated with gold. As a matter of fact, the term is very misleading. Gold filling consists in the employment of two sheets of gold between which is placed a section of solder-coated base metal.

This metallic sandwich is heated and pressed so that the three parts are welded, with the gold outside.—Harper's Weekly.

A SHOWER

On Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Charles Benedict entertained a party of relatives in honor of their son Leon and bride fo Detroit. The affair took the form of a shower, many fine presents being in evidence, showing the love these people bear this young man and wife. Light refreshments were served and the guests had a jolly time. Among those from away were Mr. and Mrs. James Cole of Salida, Cal., Miss McVeigh of Hubbardston, Albert Boyce of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Raynor Benedict, of Britton and Lloyd Hanford, Macon.

ELECT OFFICERS

Annual Meeting of the Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. Church met at the Parsonage Thursday afternoon and elected officers for the ensuing year as follows:

President—Mrs. E. M. Lewis
Vice Pres.—Mrs. Fred Rosacrans
Secretary—Mrs. G. W. Jackson
Treasurer—Mrs. Wm. Witherell.

A picnic supper was served at the close of the meeting.

AMUSEMENTS

Next week Thursday, August 15, is the date set for the Opera Pinafore to be given at the Opera House.

There will be about 50 people on the stage and the director, Mr. Percival, declares that the enthusiastic chorus he has here will give this fine old opera a splendid rendition.

BASE BALL

A good crowd witnessed the ball game Saturday when the Jackson Cuttings played the Tecumseh team at Athletic Park. The score stood 16 to 15 in favor of the visitors. our battery were Leonardson. Bramble and Chas. Hanna, pitchers, and Harris catcher. The crowd had a lot of fun probably more than if it had been a more serious game. The boys promise better ball next time.

This team was advertised as the fastest independent team in that city. We really would like to see one of their slow ones.

Do Unto Others.

He who would pass the declining years of his life with honor and comfort should, when young, consider that he may one day become old, and remember, when he is old, that he has once been young.—Addison.

A HAPPY OUTLOOK

In Detroit they tell of a young man who, although he made a great deal of money, was always in debt because of his extravagance. Not long ago, however, he wooed and won a young woman of greath wealth, and immediately things took on a roseate hue.

During the honeymoon the bride ventured to ask hubby whether the fact that she had money made any difference to him.

"To be sure it does, my love," was the unexpected response.

Whereupon wifey was a bit alarmed, "What difference?" she asked,

"Why, darling," continued the husband, "it is such a comfort to know that if I should die you'd be provided for."

"And if I should die?" added the bride.

"Then, darling," was the reply, "I'd be provided for."

—August Lippincott.

Republicans Naturally Progressive

The reason why the Progressive party must of necessity be developed principally out of the Republican party becomes apparent after a little thought. In the first place, the evolution has already been accomplished in a number of States. In the second place, the Democratic party is a wholly different kind of entity from its chief opponent. The Republican party has always been homogeneous. The present split in the party is temporary and transitional. Fundamentally the Republican party has always been Progressive, but in order to keep alive it is compelled from time to time to accept new views of what progress means and to adapt itself to new conditions. It is now in the process of a healthful transformation from within. Precisely as it threw off machine domination in Pennsylvania a few weeks ago, so it has been struggling to emancipate itself in many other States. Whether it keeps the name Republican, or not, the Progressive movement will be made up of men who, like Roosevelt, have been the leaders in the more radical wing of the Republican party.

The Democratic party has some elements of unity, but in the main it is a coalition of groups. Its largest factor is the solid South. Its second factor in permanence is Tammany Hall. Its third is the old-line Democracy represented by men like Governor Harmon, of Ohio, and its fourth is the radical Democracy represented by men like Bryan and Hearst. The Democratic party finds its opportunity not so much in its own shining virtues as in the faults and failures of the Republican party. The immense Democratic wave that struck the country in 1910 was due to the weakness and failure of the Taft administration and the action of a Republican Congress in passing the Payne-Aldrich tariff. The recent Progressive movement in the Republican party, as led by Roosevelt, was a confession of these mistakes.—From "The Progress of the World," in the American Review of Reviews for August.

GUANACOS OF THE ANDES

Texas Ranchmen Seeking Information With a View to Domesticating the Animals.

The day is not far gone when that historic farmer, on beholding the circus giraffe for the first time, exclaimed, "There ain't no such animal!" And the day also may not be far distant when more animals now seen only in menageries will be introduced into certain parts of America. Ostriches once were a curiosity with the great tent shows. Now there are ostrich farms all over the west. An attempt was once made to introduce the camel in the great American desert places of Arizona and New Mexico. An attempt also was once made to train monkeys to pick prunes, but this latter venture was a chattering farce.

Now comes the Daily Consular Reports with a story to the effect that Texas ranchmen are seeking additional information concerning guanacos, which are found in large numbers in the Andes from central Peru to Cape Horn. These animals are very shy and hunters capture them with difficulty. They may be tamed if taken when young, and Consul Winslow at Valparaiso, Chile, sees no reason why they could not be successfully raised in certain sections of the United States. Guanacos are said "to feed upon the pungent herbage of the Patagonian deserts, as well as upon the bitter grasses of the Pampas, and furnish to the wandering natives their principal flesh food and the only skins useful for clothing or tent making, except those of the rheas. Over a large part of their habitat none but salt water is to be had, which they drink readily."

Guanacos are about a third taller than the average sheep and weigh about the same. There is no fixed price for the animal, as few have been domesticated. They must be picked up wherever they can be found, at whatever the owner may charge, anywhere from $6 to $20 gold each. Guanaco rugs are prized very highly and cost $16 to $25 gold, according to size, quality of the hair, etc. A rug 6x9 feet is worth $20.

First Thimble.

There is a tradition that a Dutch silversmith pondered over a certain notion which he had cherished long and silently in the slow working senses which he deemed his brain—a notion for a trinket, a fallal, for a dignified lady of Holland. It must be a useful trinket, albeit a costly one, meet for so good a sempstress as Dame Alize Van Rensselaer. When the notion took definite shape the thing was quickly wrought in precious metal by fingers as deft as the brain was slow, and the industrious housewife proudly wore not only her first thimble, but the first thimble possessed by any Dutch frau.—Century Magazine.

FRANK CORNELL

Fell From the Roof and was Badly Hurt.

Yesterday afternoon Frank Cornell was working on the roof of an addition to the Globe Mill, when he slipped off and fell to the ground Levi Hayden has done some fast driving in his day, but the way he made that auto sing getting Dr. Jones to the scene beat all past records. The physician found Mr. Cornell had sprained and fractured his right wrist, broken a finger on his left hand and bruised his hip and face. The patient was removed to his home on East Logan street where the bruises and broken bones were cared for and although badly shaken, hopes to be about in a few days.

WILLIAM J. PRESTON.

William J. Preston died at his home in Raisin Center at 4:30 a. m. Sunday after a long illness. He was born May 12, 1855, in Ireland and leaves a wife, a young son and a married daughter living near Tipton. The funeral was held this morning at 10:30 with burial at Tecumseh.

MRS. HARRIETT STEINHOFF

Word was received Saturday by Dr. B. F. Steinhoff telling of the death of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Harriett Steinhoff, which had occurred at the Methodist home in Chelsea.

Mrs. Steinhoff who was formerly Miss Haerlett Stevens who was born here January 30, 1833. She lived on the corner of Pottawatamie and Pearl streets for 45 years, spending her time caring for an invalid mother who died shortly before she married Mr. Steinhoff, of Simcoe, Canada, in November 1887.. The couple continued to reside at the old home where Mr Steinhoff died in January 1907.

Three years ago the lady went to the beautiful home in Chelsea, where she remained until her Father called her.

The remains arrived here yesterday morning and the funeral was conducted that afternoon from the home of Dr. and Mrs. Steinhoff Rev. Hartzog delivering a splendid address on, "She hath done what she could," dwelling on the beautiful character and pure Christian life of this much loved lady, whose whole life had been spent for others. Only last week the Methodist Foreign Missionary Society received the dues for her membership in the society, which had been her dearest interest since the death of her loved ones.

Mr, and Mrs, Saunders, superintendent and matron of the Chelsea home, accompanied the remains, and Harry Stevens a nephew, was also here for the funeral.

MRS. ANNA YOUNGS

Mrs. Anna Youngs passed away Sunday at 3:30 p m. at the home of her cousins, Lorenzo and Miss Mina Youngs, aged 65 years She had only been ill for a few days, while her cousin, Lorenzo Youngs has been near death's door for months, hence the shock to their friends.

The funeral services services were conducted from the home yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. Hartzog officiating. The remains were taken to Erie, Pa., this morning by the sister of the deceased, Mrs. Lucinda Scott, who had been called here by the lady's illness. A few friends from out of town arrived in time for the funeral, among them being Mr. and Mrs. Tracey of Toledo, Mr. and Mrs. Will Hooten and Mrs John Hooten of Tipton.

WHY MAN DISLIKES SPRING

Its Beauty Marred for Him by House Cleaning and Its Various Accompaniments.

If spring didn't bring nothin' worse than th' primrose by th' brook it wouldn' be so bad. But along with th' turquoise sky an' th' first little patches o' green comes house cleanin', wall paperin', flower beds, stove pipes, candidates an' red-nosed politicians, fresh an' buoyant after a long winter's loaf.

If ther's any work in th' world that a man hain't cut out fer it's house cleanin'. Sufferage er no sufferage it's distinctively a woman's work. What selfrespectin' man wants t' take down th' settin' room stove an' put it on th' back porch an' cover it with rag carpet?

Wher's th' man that ever feels right again after fillin' th' ticks at th' livery stable an' dustin' the chromos? Flower bed makin' is another thing that cheapens a man. What man ever feels like takin' his place again among his peers after puttin' a border o' whitewashed stones around th' tulip bed er teachin' a rose bush t' climb over th' parlor window, an' connect with th' spout? Paintin' a iron bed is somethin' else that's calculated t' destroy what little feelin' o' superiority o'er woman that th' average husband sometimes secretly entertains. You kin paint a iron bed an' look at it ever' day fer a year an' see some new place you missed.

No man in the world can git out good work an' give his business proper attention er give his employer value received durin' th' wall paper season. Next t' th' money trust probe ther' hain't nothin' as pressin' as a good law compellin' a paper hanger t' git on th' job at th' appointed time an' not lay off fer a ball game till t' contract is finished an' he has taken his traps out o' th' parlor.—Indianapolis News.

The Cactus Woman.

They stood on Penn avenue and watched the girls go by, an endless procession.

"They say the clinging type of girl is disappearing."

"I believe it is. Modern woman, with the sharp-pointed buckles and her numerous hatpins, is more like a cactus than a vine."—Pittsburg Post.

Golden Rule.

Whatever I have tried to do at all, I have tried with all my heart to do well. What I have devoted myself to completely, I have devoted myself to completely. Never to put one hand on anything on which I could not throw my whole self, and never to affect depreciation of my work, whatever it was, I find now to have been one of my golden rules.—Charles Dickens.

WHY IT SUCCEEDS

Because It's for One Thing Only, and Tecumseh People Appreciate This.

Nothing can be good for everything. Doing one thing well brings success. Doan's Kidney Pills do one thing only.

They help sick kidneys.

They relieve backache, kidney and bladder trouble.

Here is Tecumseh evidence to prove it.

Mrs. Sarah E. Austin, Pearl St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have had no need of Doan's Kidney Pills or any other kidney medicine since 1908. I can still recommend this preparation highly. I suffered from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint for more than a year and when someone told me that Doan's Kidney Pills were effective in cases of this kind, I obtained a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They help me immediately and I continued their use until I was well."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agent for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

"I'm tired of laying eggs," complained the hen. "And I'm tired of lying about them," chimed in the dealer in the coldstorage product.

Hay fever and asthma make August a month of intense suffering to many people. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound gives prompt ease and relief, and is soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes. Wm. M. Merethew, N. Searsport, Me., says: "A few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound relieved me of a severe attack of asthma and less than a bottle caused a complete cure." Refuse substitutes. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

THE TRIALS OF A TRAVELER

"I am a traveling salesman," writes E. E. Youngs, E. Berkshire, Vt., "and was often troubled with constipation and indigestion till I began to use Dr. Kings New Life Pills, which I have founp an excellent remedy." For all stomach, liver or kidney troubles they are unequaled. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

It is said "most women have five senses. Some have common sense and a sense of humor, how many have you?

Dr. C. H. Ellsworth, Dentist, 16 Baldwin St, Rochester, N. Y., says Foley Kidney Pills gave him immediate relief and strengthened him wonderfully. "I have been bothered with weak kidneys and bladder trouble and suffered much pain. Foley Kidney Pills gave me immediate relief and strengthened me wonderfully. I am pleased to recommend their use." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Robert W. Hetter, Lawrenceville, Mo, who had been bothered with kidney trouble for two years, says. "I tried three different kinds of kidney pills but with no relief. My neighbor told to use Foley Kidney Pills, I took three bottles of them, and got a permanent cure. I recommend them to everybody." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh,

READY TO ARBITRATE

Chicago Street Car Companies Express Willingness.

Unions Vote, 8,939 to 171, in Favor of Strike, but No Immediate Walkout Is Anticipated.

Chicago, Aug. 5. — The street car companies of Chicago will submit to arbitration the demands of their employes for increased wages and certain changes in working conditions. This was authoritatively learned following the taking of a strike vote by the membership of the street car men's union.

The result of twenty-four hours' balloting to determine the attitude of Chicago street car employes toward a general strike on the lines of the Chicago Railways company and the Chicago City Railway company was a vote of 8,939 for suspension of work and 171 against.

The strike vote was not a call for an immediate walkout. It was merely a granting of authority to the officials of the union to order a strike in the event the companies should refuse to arbitrate. A clause pledging the union to submit all controversies to arbitration is included in the expired contract, and arbitration as a means of adjusting difficulties also is favored in the constitution of the organization.

The decision of the companies to submit the issues to arbitration may be assigned to two main reasons. First, they do not relish the possibility of a long and bitter strike. The second and more compelling reason is that a serious labor struggle would interfere with and might end plans now under way for the consolidation of the surface and elevated lines into one big company.

POWER OF THE HUMAN EYE

Distance at Which Recognition of a Person May Be Considered Reliable.

How often we say "I recognized him" sometimes at distances that make us doubtful. Now the German government has made scientific investigations showing the distance at which this recognition may be considered reliable. According to their report, a man with good eyes will recognize a person seen once before at a distance not greatly exceeding 82 feet. An intimate acquaintance may be recognized at from one hundred and sixty to three hundred and twenty feet; and a very dear friend or relative up to five hundred feet.

The rifleman can discern the different parts of his adversary's body, and every decided movement at about three hundred feet, and a movement of the legs or arms up to a little more than twice that distance. At six hundred yards a moving man is a mere creeping blur on the landscape, and at eight hundred yards any movements of the arms or legs are no longer visible.

Of course, there are averages such as the jurist must recognize in weighing the evidence of witnesses, and the military leader in noting the position of his antagonist and the outside limit of effective rifle and pistol fire. Then, there are exceptions to these rules. Hunters, seacoast dwellers, prairie cattlemen and farmers whose sight, unweakened by civilized life and trained by constant exercise of "long sight," will often nearly double the averages given. So, too, the clearer air of the elevated prairies and table lands certainly doubles the power of the human eye.—Joe Chapple's News Letter.

Bunching the Germs.

In an office building whose seventh floor is occupied largely by doctors one elevator displays the sign:

"Take this elevator for doctors' offices."

"Why are doctors' callers restricted to this one car?" asked a passenger.

"Germs," said the operator. "A lot of the tenants in this building are more afraid of a germ than of a loaded gun. Most people who visit a doctor are supposed to have germs of one kind or another, and the regular tenants object to riding in the same elevator with them. They raised a big row when the doctors moved in and threatened to leave, but the trouble was finally settled by making the sick folk stick to one elevator."

MAN AND THE SOIL.

Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, author of the Common Sense Medical Adviser, says "why does not the farmer treat his own body as he treats the land he cultivates. He puts back in phosphate what he takes out in crops, or the land would grow poor. The farmer should put back into his body the vital elements exhausted by labor, or by ill-health induced by some chronic disease." Further, he says, "the great value of my Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is in its vitalizing power. It gives strength to the stomach and purity to the blood. It is like the phosphates which supply nature with the substances that build up the crops. The far-reaching action of is due to its effect on the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. Diseases that begin in the stomach are cured through the stomach. A bilious spell is simply the result of an effort made by the liver to catch up when over-worked and exhausted. I have found the 'Discovery' to be unsurpassed as a liver regulator and rich blood-maker."

MISS LOTTIE KNISELY of Perth, Kansas, says: "I will here add my testimony of the effectiveness of your remedy upon myself. I was troubled with indigestion for two years or more. Doctored with three different doctors besides taking numerous kinds of so-called 'stomach cures' but received no permanent relief. I was run down, could not sleep at night with the pain in my chest, caused by gas on the stomach. Was weak, could eat scarcely anything although I was hungry nearly all the time. About one year and a half ago I began taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and after having taken several bottles am nearly cured of stomach trouble. Can now eat without distress and have gained fifteen pounds in weight.

I thank you for your remedy and wish you all success in your good work."

JOKED IN FACE OF DEATH

Last Words of Titanic's Purser, McElroy, Were Light-Hearted and Cheerful.

Charles Brown, the English comedian, lost a number of friends in the Titanic tragedy. He knew most of the officers on the ill-fated ship, and the purser, McElroy, had been his comrade for years. A recent letter from England brought to the actor the last words of McElroy—an au revoir of life which is notable for its calm British courage.

The fourth officer, Marshals, who went down with the ship and was picked up by a boat, is the man who testifies to McElroy's behavior. A small group of the Titanic staff was waiting for the final plunge. The water was lapping the deck at their very feet, and the end was merely a question of a very few minutes. McElroy turned to his companions with a smile and shook hands with them, saying:

"Well, good-by, fellows; it looks like sand for breakfast tomorrow."

"That was typical of McElroy," says Brown. "He was one of the merriest, bravest men who ever lived. It was like him to have his little joke in the face of death."

American Architecture.

"There is an American architecture," said the traveler, "but not many Americans will believe it until they have taken a course in moving picture shows in foreign countries. That was what convinced me. Owing to ignorance of foreign languages we sought most of our dramatic entertainment in Europe from the cinematograph. No matter where we went one-half the pictures were American. Sometimes they were so labeled, sometimes not, but whether they were or not we soon learned to tell American pictures by the architecture. Skyscrapers, of course, were the chief distinguishing mark, but high-stooped stone houses and frame cottages with two or three wooden steps leading up to a porch were just as unmistakably American. All the way from Inverness to Cairo the minute we set eyes on one of those houses we knew we were looking at something that couldn't be duplicated outside the United States, and all the rest of the audience knew it, too."

Changed His Mind.

Green was paying his first visit to a racecourse. He had heard tales of welshers and ticket-snatchers and lurid stories concerning the pugilistic henchmen of bookmakers, but still such things did not prevent him having a bet on a big race. He backed an outsider, and it won. With a seraphic smile on his face he went up to draw his winnings.

"Well, what d'ye want?" asked the bookmaker, sticking out a mottled underjaw, while the square-faced clerk scowled ferociously.

"Er—nothing," stammered Green. "I've just brought your visiting-card back to you."

Poor Man!

Mrs. Mary Austin in an address on primitive woman in New York, uttered a neat epigram about man.

"Never find fault with a man," she said. "Praise him always."

Then, with a smile, she added:

"Man, you see, always regards flattery as truth, and truth as abuse."

FLOWER MAIDENS

By PHILIP KEAN

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

"Everybody laughs at us," said Violet.

"Well, why shouldn't they?" Lily, who was big, black-haired and red-cheeked, demanded. "Could there possibly be anything more incongruous than our names? The idea of your being Violet when you have boyish tastes and red hair and hate clinging, droopy, feminine things. As for me, I am more like a cabbage than a lily, and Rose is plain and practical and not a bit of a beauty, and Pansy isn't a bit thoughtful—she's like you—she cares more for the out-of-doors and horseback and tennis than for anything housewifely."

"Iris is the only one whose name fits her," said Violet, slowly. "She's so tall and stately, and she dresses to suit her name—she looks so well in her lavenders and purples."

"Yes, she does," said Lily, without enthusiasm, "but she gets them at the expense of all the rest of us, Vi."

Vi nodded. "She has a new mauve chiffon for the Country club dance. It's a lovely thing, with a purple velvet panel and some touches of silver green. She is a perfect reproduction of her name flower in it."

"The rest of us will go in old gowns," said Lily, bitterly. "I don't care for myself—but you are the youngest, Vi, and you haven't had your chance."

"Don't worry about me," said Vi, bravely. "I'll wear my old green silk. And I have mother's pearls."

"Poor mother," said Lily, slowly. "How all of her plans for us have failed! When she married a man named Flower, she made up her mind that if there was ever a girl baby it should be called by a blossom name. And there were five of us, and I was the first and we are all so plain, and her sense of eternal fitness is only satisfied by Iris's beauty—but she loves us—dear mother."

The little woman who came in at this moment had an appealing look in her eyes. "What shall you wear to the dance, Violet?" she asked.

"My green silk," said Vi, "and Lily's going to make over her old white lace."

"I am sure you will look very nice," the mother said. Then with some hesitation: "I was sorry to give Iris the only new gown, but she really needed it, didn't she?"

In the face of that wistful appeal the two girls gasped hastily. "Of course!"

"Poor dear," said Violet as the little woman went wearily on her way. "Iris positively holds her up for new clothes."

"Did you know," said Lily, slowly, "that Bob Taylor will be at the dance?"

Violet whirled around. "He is home from the Philippines? Oh, Lily, who told you?"

"He called up. He wanted to see you. I answered the 'phone and told him you were at Lancaster and wouldn't be back until today. And then Iris said she wanted to talk to him, and he came over Sunday."

"And he's going to take her?" Violet demanded.

"Yes—that's the reason for the new gown."

"I see."

There was silence after that, and presently the sisters kissed and separated. But the kiss was the token of their understanding.

"It's a shame," Lily confided later to Pansy, "Bob has always liked Vi best. But Iris—oh, you know Iris. She makes all the rest of us seem rough and rude by comparison."

"Perhaps we are," said Pansy, cheerfully, "perhaps it wouldn't hurt us to mend our manners, Lil."

"Perhaps not," Lily was absorbed in her argument, "but he likes Vi's breeziness, and now—oh, if Iris breaks this up, I'll feel as if I couldn't forgive her."

"She doesn't understand," said Pansy, gently, "what it means to feel deeply—and perhaps we have all made her selfish, Lil. We just let her have things and she doesn't realize that we go without."

"Well, if she butts in with Bob and Vi," said Lily, slangily, "I shan't forgive her in a minute."

"If Bob lets her break it off," said plain Rose, who was sewing placidly by the window of the little sitting-room, "he won't be worth keeping."

"That's so," said Pansy.

The night of the Country club dance Vi wore her old silk. The cut was somewhat out of date, so that her slender figure looked bulky when compared to the modish silhouettes about her. Iris, graceful and ethereal, was the best dressed woman in the room.

Lily, raging, sat out a dance in the palm room with Bob Taylor.

"I'm going to tell you all about it," she almost sobbed. "Vi had to come in that old dress, because Iris was so selfish. The rest of us always wear old things. Iris has the best."

Bob, being a gentleman, hated family quarrels. Hence he defended Iris. "She makes her gowns, she tells me," he said, "and thus reduces the expense."

"We all make our things," said Lily, indignantly, "except Vi——"

"Vi is not housewifely," Bob said, gently; "she is a dear girl, but—no—she is not housewifely." Then he left her.

Left alone, Lily wept, and then there came to her a man whom she seemed to recognise in spite of the added years which had given him height and strength and beauty.

"Philip Boone," she cried, "when did you come?"

"An hour ago," he said. "I went first to the house—I wanted to see Vi—but your mother sent me here."

"To see Vi——" The words rang in Lily's head. Philip had always loved Vi, since the little girl days when he asked her to marry him—and he was worth ten Bob Taylors. But Philip had been away for years, and Bob had had the field to himself. Before she could stop herself Lily told him of her indignation because Vi must dance in an old gown.

Philip laughed. "Is she as sweet as ever?" he demanded.

"Sweeter," said the enthusiastic Lily.

"I've come back to marry her if I can," said the young man. "I felt I hadn't a right to ask her until I was able to support a wife."

Lily confided the news to Pansy that night, "I believe Vi always liked him best, but she couldn't understand why he didn't write."

The following week there came for Vi a package by express.

It was a wonderful gown, all white and silver, with an underslip of palest green. There was a wreath of white violets for the red-gold hair and a trailing bunch of the same flowers for her corsage. There was no card, no name, but at last they found a slip of paper on which was written in feminine script:

"Ask no questions, sar, but wear,
This pretty gown to make you fair."

"I believe Philip Boone sent it," Lily confided late that night to Pansy, "but I was afraid to say so to mother, for of course Vi couldn't accept it under such circumstances."

"Well, mother thinks it came from Aunt Felicia, and she's going to write and find out; but anyhow Violet can wear it to the charity ball, and Iris won't outshine her this time."

Violet was the belle of the charity ball. Even Iris's delicate beauty could not compete with the youth and rapture which gave her sister such wonderful charm.

"Isn't she a beauty?" Philip Boone said to Lily, ecstatically. "Where in the world did she get that gown, Lil? It suits her down to the ground."

"So he didn't send it," said Lily, when she could get Pansy in a corner, "but who did?"

That night Vi crept into Lily's room. "Oh, Lily, Lily," she said, "I'm so glad that Iris switched Bob Taylor off."

"Why, dearest?"

"Because—I like Philip best. I always did. But when he went away to college and then went into business, and didn't write, I decided that he didn't care any more. And so I tried to get interested in other people. And Bob was so kind—and I wanted to be loved—to be happy—and so I thought I could be content with second best—but I couldn't—and now Philip wants to marry me—and I told him I would—Lily."

A letter from Aunt Felicia came the next morning. "Of course I didn't send the dress," it said, "I haven't money for such frivolities."

"Then, who sent it?" the little mother asked. Suddenly her face hardened. "Do you suppose that some man was impertinent enough to do it? If so, you can't wear it again, Vi. Never—it is preposterous."

"Oh, mother." Vi's eyes were full of tears. "There's the Mercers' dance tomorrow, and I haven't anything else."

"But just the same, you mustn't be seen in it."

Then Iris, who had been looking out of the window, came forward. "Let her wear it, mother," she said gently. "I bought it." At her astonishing declaration the girls gasped, but she went on steadily. "It wasn't until I saw Vi in that frumpy green gown the other night that I realized how selfish I had been. So—I sold the ring Aunt Felicia gave me last year, and bought the gown. I didn't want to be unfair. If—if Bob liked Vi best—I wanted him to have her. But, now that she's engaged to Philip—it won't hurt her if I marry Bob, Vi."

The younger sister flew to her. "You darling," she said, and her head went down on Iris' shoulder.

Journalism Not His Forte.

Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, the millionaire sportsman of Philadelphia, who is equally at home in the drawing room and in the prize ring, told the members of the Chicago Athletic association the other evening of his early experience in journalism.

"As a youth my great ambition was to be a reporter," he said, "so I went to my uncle, George W. Childs Drexel, who was editing the Public Ledger. He gave me a place on the local staff, and the city editor assigned me to a district in which the city morgue was located. On the first day of my assignment the body of a man was found in the Delaware river and brought to the morgue. Scenting a possible murder mystery, and seeing also an opportunity to gain journalistic fame in a single day, I hastened to the office and wrote a thrilling story, which was largely imagination. In concluding, I gave a graphic description of the supposed victim, saying that 'the man was attired in a black mustache and clothes of the same material.'

"My wonderful story filled about ten lines of the next day's paper, and I received a summons to my uncle's office: 'Tony,' he said, 'I can get you a place on this paper, but I cannot keep it for you.'

"My journalistic ambitions ended then and there. Since that time I have confined my activities to banking, with an occasional flyer into amateur pugilism."

DEPENDED ON THE HUSBANDS

Lady Book Agent Found It the Same With Both Wife and Widow.

The Tired Lady Book Agent was having a very poor day. She had rung innumerable door bells and talked till she was hoarse to all kinds of people. She had in every case been invited in, which was a good beginning. She had told her story, gone into details of half-calf, morocco, and plain cloth bindings, but no sale had been made.

Young women and old had given the same excuse for not subscribing then and there.

"Yes, I like it very, very much, but I must consult my husband."

"Surely," the Book Agent thought, "no one can say that women disregard their husband's wishes even in these Votes-for-Women days."

Finally, late in the afternoon the last house was reached.

"Ha!" said the Book Agent, gleefully. "Here's where I get a sale. She's a widow, and she won't have to consult her husband."

So she rang the bell hopefully and was received by the Widow, who listened with great interest to the story of the merits of the books.

Just as the Book Agent was beginning to think she was making a sale the Widow sighed and said:

"No, I can't take it today. If only my dear husband were alive, I wouldn't hesitate a minute."

Demand Sartorial Change.

Men's fashions for the summer in Berlin, will show a marked departure from conventional ideas if the leaders of a new "common sense" clothing crusade have their way. The crusaders insist that men be allowed to wear light clothing during the summer, and the stiff collars be abolished. They declare that while women can discard heavy garments as soon as hot weather begins, and clothe themselves in silks and taffetas, the men have hitherto been forced to wear tweeds and cheviots, and to encumber themselves with unnecessary articles of adornment merely because it has always been the custom. The man now insist that from July 15 to September 1, tweeds and cheviots shall be considered unfashionable by smartly-dressed men, and that lounge and semidress suits made of linen, cambric or silk material, shall be worn throughout the "season."

MEET TO LAUNCH NEW THIRD PARTY

Roosevelt Supporters Open Convention in Chicago.

Delegates to National Progressive Meeting in Introductory Session Choose Albert J. Beveridge Temporary Chairman.

The first national convention, held in Chicago, of the National Progressive party was called to order in the Coliseum at noon by Senator Joseph M. Dixon of Montana, head of the provisional National Progressive committee.

Red bandanna handkerchiefs gave the dash of color to the convention. They draped out of the pockets of the men and were festooned around the arms of the women. Some wore them as hat bands, others had them as rosettes, while a few did duty as neck scarfs.

Prayer was offered by Rev. Dornblager of the German Lutheran church of Chicago. The entreaty was closed with the Lord's prayer in which the convention and galleries joined ardently. The band then struck up "America," and the convention sang a lusty accompaniment.

After this former Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana was chosen temporary chairman, and made the keynote speech.

"We stand for a nobler America. We stand for an undivided nation."

From these challenging opening words down to his closing quotation from the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" Temporary Chairman Beveridge gave to the convention a keynote that was inspiring as a blast from that trumpet "that shall never call retreat."

The first evidence of the "moose call" came when Mr. Beveridge mentioned the name of President Taft in connection with the Payne-Aldrich tariff law. Led by "Bill" Flinn and the Pennsylvania delegation there came a united "moo-o" "moo-o," which spread through all of the state delegations. It was a novel and a noisy method of expressing disapproval.

When the delegates were called to order the question of who is to be Theodore Roosevelt's running mate was almost the only matter of importance not decided upon beforehand.

Colonel Roosevelt has expressed a desire that the second place go to a southern Democrat, with the idea of strengthening the ticket. In case this plan is followed General Luke E. Wright of Memphis, who was secretary of war in Roosevelt's cabinet, is considered a strong probability. Another southern Democrat who was considered is John M. Parker of New Orleans. However, Mr. Parker declared himself out of it and avowed that the chief matter in which he would interest himself in the convention would be to make the new third party a "white man's party" in the south.

Mr. Roosevelt came to the city from New York on the Twentieth Century limited. Nearly all the state delegations had representatives at the station to meet him. The official reception party was made up of Chauncey Dewey, sergeant at arms of the convention; Governor Hiram Johnson of California, James R. Garfield, Frank H. Funk, nominee for governor; Ralph Otis, La Verne W. Noyes, Oscar Hundley, Senator Poindexter, Medill McCormick and Senator J. M. Dixon, Roosevelt's manager.

There were several hundred persons lined along Jackson boulevard and Michigan avenue to whom Roosevelt continually waved his hat as he was driven to the Congress hotel in an automobile.

Roosevelt Addresses Convention.

On the second day of the convention the delegates heard from the lips of its chosen high priest and most prominent exponent, Theodore Roosevelt, the tenets, truths, aims and beliefs of the new party.

And Mr. Roosevelt did not disappoint them. In a long address, which, delivered by almost any other man, would have taxed the patience of his hearers, he placed before them all his hopes and all his plans, all he would accomplish through the organization of a new political party and the inauguration of new alignments of voting strength which may alter the cleavage between Republicans and Democrats to a division between progressives and conservatives, and may, perhaps, mark a new epoch in our country's political history.

The Colonel's utterances struck the second "keynote" for the convention. The first had been sounded the day before by Temporary Chairman Beveridge.

HASTINGS — Local police officers made a raid upon blind pigs and gathered a wagon load of wet goods from three places suspected of furnishing booze in violation of the local option law. Hugh Davis, Claud Clifford and Jake Kneatrick were arrested. Davis and Clifford demanded examinations. Kneatrick and Russ Scheib, a former partner, who was also arrested, waived examination, and were bound over to the circuit court. Other warrants will be served.

ALLEGED BOODLERS

Alderman Glinnan and Clerk Schriter of the Detroit Council.

Charges of graft were made against several of the Detroit aldermen, and arrests followed. The investigation was started by Mayor Thompson, who engaged Burns detectives to gather evidence. It was alleged that the aldermen took bribes of from $200 to $1,000. The dictograph played a part in unearthing the alleged offenders.

DETROIT TO BE PURGED

Board of Commerce to Second Efforts of Reformers in City Politics.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 5.—Graft in Detroit is doomed. Wickedness in high places, corrupting and corroding greed for money among city legislators, and the lust for gold that has led to the besmirchment of the Michigan metropolis, are to be fought to the death, as the result of action on the part of the directors of the board of commerce in guaranteeing to Mayor Thompson and Prosecutor Shepherd their unstinted support.

Detroit is to be purged of its rottenness and washed of its iniquity. Money will be forthcoming at every turn for legitimate use in restoring the city to political purity, with special regard to the common council.

MAN'S BODY FOUND IN CREEK

John Chambers Believed to Have Ended Own Life.

Clio, Mich., Aug 7.—After an all-night search the body of John Chambers, who disappeared from his home here, was found in a creek which runs through the village.

Chambers is said to have been acting queerly of late and the supposition is that he committed suicide in a fit of despondency. He was sixty-one years of age and a well known and respected resident of Clio, having served as ticket agent for the Pere Marquette Railroad company at that place for the last thirty-eight years. He is survived by a widow and a son and daughter. An inquest will be held on Aug. 12.

HOUSING PROBLEM ARISES

Battle Creek Plans to Care for 400 Newcomers.

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 3.—This city has a house famine and it is expected that the 400 people that come here next week with the Castle Lamp company of Amesbury, Mass., will have to live in tents until houses can be built. The situation has become so serious that a meeting of citizens was held to bring out an idea as to how the difficulty can be surmounted.

C. D. Castle of the lamp company is figuring on the purchase of enough tents to house his employes when they arrive next week.

Woman Dies Mysteriously.

Saginaw, Mich., Aug. 5.—Mrs. George Powell, forty, died from the effects of an operation, it is alleged. Dr. Merser M. Carter refused to sign the death certificate and Coroner W. S. Connery started an investigation. Coroner Connery says he is going to probe the case and will lay the facts before Prosecutor Browne.

LANSING—Susan Fisher, who is a resident of Grand Rapids, was named to succeed herself as member of the state board of registration of nurses. Her term expires July 31, 1918. Mary S. Foy of Battle Creek was selected to succeed Jennie Leece as member of the board. Her term expires July 31, 1918.

CUTS DUTY ON COTTON

Fifty Per Cent Reduction Favored by House.

At Washington Friday the Democrats of the house, aided by most of the insurgent Republicans, by a vote of 156 to 72, passed the Underwood cotton bill, making an average reduction of 50 per cent below the duties provided in the Payne-Aldrich bill. The bill offered as a substitute by Representative Hill, Republican, of Connecticut, providing for a specific duty instead of an ad valorem duty, was defeated by a vote of 145 to 87.

Representative Lenroot of Wisconsin led the fight of the Republicans against the cotton downward tariff revision bill. He represented the La Follette idea that there should be carried protection for manufacture of cotton products and said that the Underwood bill did not give to the manufacturer the proper protection and safe guards against importation.

In the vote passing the Democratic bill twenty-two Progressives voted with the Democrats.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

CORUNNA — While George, the little twelve-year-old son of James Ruedesuell, of Corunna, was being terribly battered under the hoofs of a frightened horse, his father clung desperately to the animal's bit in an effort to control it, and several other men who were onlookers seemed stupefied and made no move at resuce. Mrs. Ruedesuell's attention was attracted to her son's predicament while she was in her husband's grocery store, and she ran into the street oblivious of danger, plunged into the gutter and dragging the unconscious and bleeding form of her son from under the kicking and trampling brute, folded it tenderly in her arms.

LANSING—The annual report of Michigan State Treasuere Albert E. Sleeper shows the state finances are in a prosperous condition. The receipts for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, amounted to $14,190,498.57, as compared with $12,244,493 for 1911. When the books were balanced at the end of the last fiscal year there was $1,746,984.61 in the general fund, while the balance in available cash at the close of the present year was $3,722,608.21.

COLDWATER—Three men, Thomas Swabsick, Carlton Hall and Joseph Smith, arrested on the charge of breaking into a house and stealing a quantity of wine, pleaded guilty. The first was fined $50 or thirty days in jail, the second $75 or sixty days and the third $100 or ninety days. Swabsick paid; the other two went to jail.

MUNISING—Miss Belle McRae, who lived in Hart, Mich., came here to become the bride of R. A. Service, a pharmacist. For two months Service had been preparing a home. Instead of a wedding there will be a funeral, Service having dropped dead about the time his fiancee was boarding the train to come to him.

MONROE—A. E. Sharkey, alias A. E. Gibson, who lived at Elyria, O., held here for some time on charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, was released upon settlement with the injured parties. He was at once rearrested on advice from Philadelphia that he was wanted there for a similar offense.

COL. ROOSEVELT HIT IN THE STEEL REPORT

Declares Ex-President Made Rule of Combine Absolute.

United States Steel Corporation Is Flayed As an Enemy of Organized Labor—Stockholders Are Accused.

Bills aimed at trust legislation accompany the report of the Stanley committee which investigated the Steel trust.

The report and bills were presented to the house of representatives. This is the majority report, which differs in many details from that made by the minority or Republican members of the committee.

J. P. Morgan and his associates are held up as being beneficiaries of enormous profits realized from the overcapitalization of the subsidiary companies of the Steel corporation and later of the corporation itself.

E. H. Gary and his dinners to steel manufacturers are credited with a scheme by which prices and territory were controlled by the steel trust after pooling agreements were discarded.

Theodore Roosevelt is indicted for making the control of the steel trust absolute while he was president and is charged with being responsible for the gigantic stature which the trust has attained.

The United States Steel corporation is flayed as an enemy of organized labor, accused of lowering the sociological condition of its employes and of contributing to American industry workmen and work methods un-American and foreign to the best interests of labor.

Principal stockholders of the Steel corporation are accused of exerting a powerful and injurious influence on the business of the United States by means of control exercised through interlocking directorates of railway and industrial organizations.

The activity of the corporation in politics is laid bare and its influence described, and the "steel trust" as a tariff beneficiary and its part in the making of the Payne-Aldrich tariff act are touched upon by the report.

The part that United States Steel the absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Railroad company, President Roosevelt and Wall street financiers played in the panic of 1907 are covered in the report and the insinuation is made that the panic was an artificial one, designed for the benefit of the Steel corporation.

In summing up its conclusions the majority report says:

"The control of corporations by the federal government, as recommended by Mr. Carnegie, E. H. Gary and others, is not approved. Whatever may be the evil results of the elimination of competition from the steel business, it does not justify such a remedy and could not be cured by it.

"The abuses mentioned in this report can in a great measure be remedied by giving to the operations of the United States Steel corporation and other like corporations the widest publicity, and by the strict enforcement of laws specifically inhibiting the employment of cunning devices by which an unfair advantage over competitors is secured."

TRAVERSE CITY—E. J. McMullen, who is a prominent farmer on the peninsula, was struck in the eye with a piece of steel while repairing his mowing machine. He was immediately brought to the city, where the steel was removed. It is hoped to save his sight.

ALPENA — David Boynton, being in poor health, attempted suicide. He fiercely fought the two men who prevented him from jumping off a dock. This was his second attempt.

GOODENOUGH IS HELD FOR KIDNAPING GIRL

Hastings Man Charged with Stealing Daughter.

Girl Had Been Taken from State School by Woman Who Wished Her to Marry Unsuitable Man —Case Is Adjourned.

Hastings, Mich., Aug. 5.—A complicated tale of relationship has been revealed by the arrest of William Goodenough, who is charged with kidnaping his own daughter, formerly an inmate of the state school at Coldwater. When Goodenough's wife left him their children were sent to the state school. Among them was Hazel, a bright girl, now sixteen years old. Some time ago Mrs. Edith Goodenough, William's sister-in-law, and a daughter of Mrs. Triphena Goodenough, an aged woman, residing west of town, succeeded in getting Hazel from the school.

The girl was brought to Mrs. Triphena's home, where she met a young man named Fedewa, whom, the father declares, the woman wanted Hazel to marry. She did not like the man and planned to get away. When Mrs. Triphena went away and left the girl in charge of Fedewa and Dan Goodenough the girl contrived to send word to her father, staying at George Gurnsey's farm in Carlton, that she wanted to leave. Joining forces with Hazel's sister, Mrs. Cassidy, Goodenough and the woman drove to Triphena's home that night.

Both of the young men who had charge of the girl are fond of singing. When Mrs. Cassiday arrived she insisted that they sing for her and the girl. They complied with several selections, and just as they finished the last stanza of a song found that their audience had disappeared. Rumbling of wheels in the distance gave them the clue. They hitched up a horse and started in pursuit. About a mile away they overtook the runaways, but in the darkness the vehicles collided and were damaged, but the father and the two women succeeded in reaching Gurnsey's farm.

Fedewa called up Prosecuting Attorney Potter to help him out of his difficulty, but the officer could do nothing for him. On the following day Mrs. Edith Goodenough came from Battle Creek and went to Gurnsey's farm after the girl, but she alleges that she was so roughly handled by the combined forces of Gurnseys and Goodenoughs that she had to retreat. She then sought the aid of Hastings officers, and the Coldwater school authorities have given her temporary custody of the girl until the courts straighten out matters. The girl's father was arrested for kidnaping, and the case has been adjourned.

HILLERY BEACHEY HAS FALL

Aviator Sustains Fractured Bones and Condition Is Critical.

Battle Creek, Mich., Aug. 6.—Hillery Beachey, noted aviator and brother of Lincoln Beachey, lies in a critical condition at Nichols hospital in this city as the result of injuries received in a fall from his machine. He is suffering from a broken shoulder bone, fractures of his legs and arms, and a long, deep gash in his forehead.

Attending physicians pronounce his condition as serious, and refuse to state whether or not he will recover, although he probably will. Beachey came to Battle Creek under the auspices of the Chamber of Commerce.

NAME ILLINOIS TICKET

Progressives Hold Enthusiastic Convention in Chicago.

The first Illinois state Progressive convention, held in Chicago in Orchestra hall joined thoroughly with the national movement in the terms which had been outlined by the forces which are said to control the National Progressive convention now in progress in the Coliseum.

The following were nominated on the state ticket:

Governor — Frank H. Funk, Bloomington.

Lieutenant Governor — Judge Dean Franklin, Macomb.

Attorney General—Fletcher Dobyns, Chicago.

Treasurer—Philip Decker, Murphysboro.

Auditor—Edwin Winter, Danville.

Secretary of State—Edward G. Peterson, Aurora.

The nominees for trustees of the University of Illinois are B. F. Harris of Champaign, Mrs. Raymond Robins of Chicago, and Frederick L. Hatch of Spring Grove, the present president of the board.

The delegates at large are: Miss Jane Addams of Chicago, Mary J. Wilmarth of Chicago, C. D. Thomas of Champaign, Frank G. Allen of Moline, Frank H. Funk of Bloomington, Medill McCormick of Chicago, La Verne W. Noyes of Chicago, and John F. Bass of Chicago.

The convention also indorsed in unlimited terms the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt for the presidency on the Progressive ticket, absolved all ties which bound former Republicans or Democrats to the old parties, and issued a state platform directed chiefly at the administration of Governor Deneen.

It declared for the short ballot; the initiative, referendum and recall; direct election of United States senators; a public utilities commission; home rule for cities and changes in the primary law so that primary elections shall be held in September instead of April and presidential electors and delegates to national conventions shall be elected by direct vote of the people.

NEW MONROE RULING WINS

Senate Passes the Lodge Resolution by a Vote of 51 to 4.

After a three hour's debate behind closed doors at Washington D. C., the senate by a vote of 51 to 4 adopted the Lodge resolution defining the attitude of the United States in disapproval of the acquisition by foreign interests of any territory on the western hemisphere which might be used as military or naval bases or menace "the approaches" of this country.

The senators voting against the resolution were Cummins and McCumber, Republicans, and Perry and Stone, Democrats.

TAFT OFFICIALLY NOTIFIED

Simple Ceremony Held in East Room of White House.

At Washington Thursday President Taft received the notification committee in the East Room of the White House, instead of on the lawn to the south of the building, as previously arranged.

The notification was devoid of ceremony forms. The notification committee, made up of one representative from each state, met at the executive offices shortly before noon. Headed by Chairman Root, they marched to the East Room, where the president and Mrs. Taft received them.

At Cairo, Ill., W. M. Boyd was arrested here for passing checks on banks in Fulton, Ky., where he has no funds. Boyd was sixty years old.

BUD MARS, AVIATOR, INJURED

Jumps from Aeroplane to Avoid Striking Fence—Machine Wrecked.

Gladstone, Mich., Aug. 2.—Bud Mars, making a flight for the firemen's tournament, after making a successful rise, remaining in the air fifteen minutes, on landing, to avoid a fence, jumped from his machine and suffered injuries, but they are not considered serious.

His machine was badly broken. It overturned after his escape.

LANSING—More rain fell in Michigan and the average temperature was lower last month than any month of July for thirty-three years. The average temperature for the month was 70.8 degrees, being 1.2 degrees below the normal for the past thirty-three years. The total rain fall for the month was 8.30 inches, being 5.09 inches greater than the normal since the establishment of the state board of health.

BATTLE CREEK—Mrs. Sarah Cramer, who is eighty years old, made a misstep in the darkness and fell from a porch six feet to the ground. Both her arms were broken and her face badly bruised, but notwithstanding the injuries and the shock, her recovery is expected. Her home is in Baltimore, Barry county, and she was visiting at the home of her daughter here, where the accident happened.

LANSING—The conscience fund of Michigan's state treasury has been enriched to the extent of $200 when a letter was received from a man in Colorado Springs, Colo., enclosing two new $100 bills with a request that they be deposited in the state's strong box. The writer said that he had frauded the state a number of years ago, but that he was now in a position to square the account.

JACKSON—W. D. Riley, who is a colored trusty prisoner employed as cook at the deputy warden's residence walked away from his place of employment and is still at large. Riley was a lifer and had been a trusty for the past year. He was sentenced from Ingham county in 1895 for life for robbery while armed with a dangerous weapon.

IS SURE SIGN OF SUMMER

Irish Woman Shows Great Solicitude for Lady Bug She Plucked From Longpole's Neck.

The other day Mr. Longpole went over to Brooklyn on business. He boarded a Fulton street car, and scarcely had taken his seat when an amply-proportioned, good-natured looking Irishwoman plumped down next him. A few moments later Mr. Longpole felt that the woman had turned part way round and was regarding him attentively. Presently she raised one fat hand and, with the fingers brought closely together at the tips, cautiously approached it toward his neck, saying at the same time in a loud, cheerful voice:

"Ixcuse me, but you've a lady boog crawlin' on yer neck, an' I'll take it off for ye, careful-like, so as not to frighten the poor baste." With that she advanced her hand still further and gently plucked the insect from Mr. Longpole's neck. "There!" said she triumphantly. "I have it in me two fingers. See!" and she held the bug up for his inspection. Then, contemplating it more closely and cordially including all the passengers in her remark, she said: "Lady boogs do be a sign of summer, I'm tould."—New York Press.

SUICIDE BUREAU A SUCCESS

More Than 4,000 Persons Saved From Self-Destruction In London Since It Started.

Many interesting pages from the great book of life are to be found in the report of the operations of the Salvation Army's anti-suicide bureau.

Since it was started 4,754 persons have called to lay their embarrassments before Colonel Emerson, and have asked him to "show cause"—as the lawyers say—why they should not put an end to their lives. The largest number put down the cause of their trouble to financial reasons; after this come drink or drugs, and melancholia.

The applicants come from almost every class except the workers. There are clergymen, missionaries, military officers, doctors, solicitors, schoolmasters, clerks and company promoters. They have all been dealt with according to their needs, and such help has been given them as their cases seemed to demand.

Legal and medical advice has been afforded; creditors have been reasoned with, reconciliations have been brought about with relatives. And the work, according to General Booth, has been successful beyond highest expectation.—London Chronicle.

HE HAS NOTHING DELIVERED

Solicitor General Lehman Thinks Americans Are Too Keen for Convenience for Their Good.

Frederick W. Lehmann, solicitor general of the United States, was walking briskly toward his home one evening with four or five cumbersome packages tucked under each arm. A breeze struck him, and as one large package served as an impromptu sail, it was all Lehmann could do to make headway.

A friend met him as he was tacking desperately against the wind. "Why don't you have the stuff delivered?" asked the friend, noticing that the bundles contained the name of a store that keeps a squadron of auto delivery vans.

"Because I never have things delivered," replied Lehmann. "That's one trouble with the people of this country. They're too keen for convenience. A young woman thinks nothing of buying a spool of thread or a yard of silk and having it delivered. Somebody has to pay for that delivery. So, just as a matter of principle, when I buy anything I carry it home with me."

ADVICE FOR MEN TRAVELERS

Two Should Not Share Same Room In Foreign Lands as They Can Here.

"If you boys go abroad this summer," said one broker to two others, "don't for goodness sake, share the same room, as you do when traveling over here. Foreigners don't go in for that sort of thing.

"Jack and I shared the same room last year in London. We never noticed that the help was smiling at us till one morning when the chambermaid brought in Jack's shoes with the hot water. I had forgotten to put my own shoes out, and the maid said to us, with a mischievous smile:

"'Do you wear the same shoes, too, gentlemen?'

"You see, she thought it as absurd for us to occupy the same room as it would have been for us to wear the same shoes.

"And it is absurd—come to think of it—for two men to occupy the same room. It robs them of their freedom. They must go to sleep simultaneously. They must get up simultaneously.

"They'd be much happier in adjoining rooms. And they'd escape tons of ridicule.

"For this habit of two men sharing a room is exclusively American, and abroad, when two Americans demand a double room for themselves, a smile of contemptuous amusement always flits over the face of the hotel clerk.

"That smile is hard for a free-born American to stand."

Discount for Rent.

When the bachelor maid wrote a check for her rent she looked thoughtful. "What is the matter?" asked her mother. "I am wondering why tenants do not get a discount for cash in ten days. Merchants do. The usual rule in business is a discount of 5 per cent for cash in ten days. New York tenants, on the contrary, are asked to pay their rent thirty days in advance of the time it really is due and such a thing as a discount never has been heard of, so far as I know. Merchants do not pay for goods until they receive them, but we tenants are expected to pay for something we have not had and may never have, if, for instance, the premises should burn. I am not much of a political economist. I wonder if some of the presidential candidates could explain the situation to me—I mean an explanation that would really explain.

Individuality.

"Nature never rhymes her children, nor makes two men alike." So says Emerson, and the mothers of young families might do no worse than take this saying as a nursery motto.

It is curious how few parents, comparatively realize the wisdom of this, and consequently how many homes are marred and rendered unproductive by being made "forcing" instead of "temperate" houses for the young lives they contain.

The creeds, ideas, thoughts and caprices of the parents are forced on the child; he is molded or "patterned" by the parent, according to that parent's standards. He is taught to be like this person, or that, to take such a one for his example and object of imitation.

He either becomes a nonentity, or, when he finds that his shape is unfitted for the parental mold, he rebels, and then parent and child become antagonistic one to the other.

Believes in Work.

Anne Morgan, daughter of the financier, who does much work among poor girls and others who earn considerable money through their own efforts, advises the girls constantly to save something. Her advice to them always is: "In times of prosperity, prepare for adversity." Miss Morgan, in fact, is a firm believer that every wealthy girl should be equipped to earn her own living should anything occur to take her fortune away.

Obituary

MRS. ANNA McCAUGHEY

Last Friday morning occurred the death of Mrs. Robert McCaughey of Britton, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Chester Pilbeam.

The deceased has long been a sufferer of anemia, and a few weeks ago was taken to the home of her daughters. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband, Mr. Robert McCaughey, two sons, Thomas and Robert, and one daughter, Mrs. Chester Pilbeam and five grandchildren, three brothers and two sisters. She was a devoted church worker being a member of the Despelder church, was a kind and loving wife and mother devoting most of her life to her family.

Deceased was born in Ireland 61 years ago the fifteenth of June and came to America 29 years ago.

The funeral was held Sunday p. m. at the residence of her daughter, services conducted by Rev. G. W. Scarlett of Ridgeway, burial at Tecumseh.

ANSWERED LAST ROLL CALL

Death entered a happy home and removed a Christian spirit therefrom Mrs. Anna M. Youngs passed away Sunday, August 4, 1912, at the hour 3:15 p. m. at her late residence Tecumseh, Mich., at the age of 66 years, 5 months, 12 days. She was born in Harmony, N. Y., February 21, 1846.

Funeral services were held at the late residence and the remains were taken to Erie, Penn., for burial. She leaves two sisters, Lucinda Scott of Erie, Penn., and Mrs. Emeline Newkirk of Chicago, Ill., and numerous friends and relatives to mourn her loss. She was a good Christian woman and beloved by all who knew her, and her loss will be deeply felt by her friends and neighbors and we trust our loss will be her eternal gain.

T'is hard to break the tender cords
When love has bound the hearts,
T'is hard so hard to say the words
"We must forever part,"
Dearest loved one we have loved thee
In the peaceful grave's embrace,
But thy memory will be cherished
Till we see thy heavenly face.

MRS. TAYLOR WIGGINS.

CARDS OF THANKS

We desire to extend our heartfelt thanks to the kind neighbors and friends who assisted in caring for our cousin, Mrs. Ann Youngs during her late sickness, and for words of comfort at the the time of her death, to the minister' undertaker and wife, and for the beautiful floral offerings our thanks are also due.

MRS TAYLOR WIGGINS,
MISS MINA YOUNGS

The moon and stars are beaming
Upon a quiet grave,
There sleepeth without dreaming
The loved we could not save.

All is gloom within our dwelling,
Lonely are our hearts today,
For the one we loved so dearly
Has forever passed away,

A bitter grief, a shock severe,
To part with one we loved so dear,
Our loss is great—We'll not complain,
But trust in God to meet again

Gone but not forgotten by her husband and children.

O. J. Avery, supervisor of the third ward of Adrian for 16 years and well known about the county, died Wednesday morning after a short illness. He was was a veteran of the Civil War engaging in the hardware business when he returned.

Mr. Avery had been a prominent croquet player for 40 years, never playing for money but frequently winning trophies. For 10 years he has lived with his daughter, Mrs. Forrest Gussenbauer,

WORLD'S TOUR ON HIS TIPS

Manuel Alvarez, a Waldorf-Astoria Waiter, Has Saved His Money for Travel.

Waiter No. 303 at the Hotel Astor, Manuel Alvarez, has saved his tips and is about to make a tour of the world on the proceeds of that saving. He will visit every country, he says, and take eight years to do it.

"Life is nothing without knowledge," is his motto.

Alvarez mentioned the trip to guests at dinner recently.

"Why are you taking this trip?" he was asked.

"What for?" Alvarez replied. "Why, I want to see how these other fellows live. I want to see the Trans-Siberian railway. I want to see how they mine diamonds in Africa and what the German emperor looks like. I want to see the Japanese and Chinese, and how they live and what they eat, and the Turks I must see—such a funny people. I am a Spaniard. Besides Spanish, I speak French and English. That is enough to take me anywhere. Spanish and English are spoken in most parts of the world and French is the international language. But when I get to Germany I am going to stop awhile and learn German well."

"Won't all that cost a lot?" ventured a listener.

"What's the matter with you?" Alvarez demanded. "I have been a waiter here, and I got money. If my money ever gets low, why I can stop awhile and work and get more to go on with. But I got plenty, don't you fear."—New York World.

Wants His Back Pay.

K. of P. PICNIC.

Everybody Had a Good Time.

100 TECUMSEHITES

And Many From Addison, Tipton and Hudson Had a Big Day.

Thursday morning did not look very good for picnics but it was a happy bunch who boarded the K. of P. excursion train for their Devil's Lake outing. The crowd numbered 189 before they reached the lake and those who were frightened off by the weather missed a dandy time.

When they arrived at Allen's landing, fun began with the sports and other stunts planned.

First came the ladies' race in which Mrs. Chas. Evans won first and Mrs. Hiram Leonard second.

Three-legged race—Howard Evans and Robert Linton, 1st; Charles Edwards and Clifford Hardy 2nd, 100 yd. race—Ollie Hanna, 1st.; Howard Evans, 2nd.

Ladies' ball throw—Mrs. Hiram Leonard, 1st; Mrs. George Zelhr, 2nd.

By this time Dolph Heesen, Guy Belding and Al. Gamble were pretty hungry so those big heavy dinner baskets were opened in the grove and the way they did fly in was a caution. To settle this big dinner everybody went to the hall and enjoyed dancing to music by Percy Heidenreich and Miss Hazel Fisk.

The crowd was called to order by Chas. Tyson, of the Tipton lodge, who introduced Rev. Blake of Tipton, and his hearers were treated to a fine address,

Next came the ball game without which Floyd Heesen's day would not be complete, Tipton crossed bats with our local K. of P., their battery being the Woerner brothers while Floyd Heesen and Eugene Rosacrans were in the box for Tecumseh. The score stood 3 to 2 for Tipton. The game was first class for, joking aside, those K. of P. boys can play ball.

After the game those fellows were hungry again and after supper the crowd boarded the train for home. Had the morning not been so lowery, twice the crowd would have turned out, but as it was it was a big one and the day proved ideal. All credit is due John Nyland, Floyd Heesen, Lynn Butrick and John McIntyre, the committee appointed from the local lodge for their good management of the affair.

I. O. O. F. PICNIC, AUGUST 14.

The Odd Fellows will hold their 23rd annual basket picnic next Wednesday at the Odd Fellows home in Jackson. They are planning for all kinds of stunts, even a doughnut eating contest, which we understand Henry McClure has entered. The fat men and women will race and the ladies have a hoop race. There will be a ball game and tug of war also, A good many Odd Fellows and families expect to go from here.

WE HAD TWO THERE.

Frank J. Temple and Dr. E. E. Heudershot returned yesterday morning from their Chicago trip, more enthusiastic Progressives than ever. Mr. Temple was made assistant sergeant at arms which badge admitted him to any part of the hall although his especial charges were the delegations from West Virginia and Colorado.

They report a wide awake convention which was one of the biggest political gatherings ever held. One scene they will never forget was when Roosevelt started to speak and the delegates began to cheer, jumping on their chairs and throwing up their hats In the midst of the bedlam the women of the equal suffrage delegation began a march about the big hall and were joined by the different states until all were marching.

Another thrilling moment was when the big United States flag was unfurled, this being the first one with the 48 stars. Immediately afterward the large banner bearing in immense letters the legend of "Roosevelt and Johnson" was unfurled from the rafters of the Coliseum building,

LYNN ROBERTS

A Former Tipton Boy Badly Hurt.

While at work about his engine in the Lake Shore yards at Wagon Works near Toledo, Tuesday, Lynn Roberts was hit by a part of the air pump flying out and now lies at a hospital in Toledo with a fractured skull. He was unconscious until noon yesterday and now is in a serious condition.

Mr. Roberts was formerly from Tipton and well known about Tecumseh, being a nephew of H. B, Roberts. His wife's mother lives in Adrian while her brother, Willis Smith lives near this village.

STRANDED IN NEW YORK

We have watched with interest the triumphs of Byrd, Adrian's discuss thrower, in the Olympic games at Stockholm, Now he arrives in New York dead broke. It seems the fund collected to send the American team over was not large encugh. But fortunately Byrd ran onto a man wearing his fraternity pin to whom he made his plight known, The other fellow hustled around and soon the smile appeared again on Byrd's face for in his hand was placed a ticket back to dear old Adrian. He did not wait for the banquet which the reception committee from New York will give the returned Atheletes August 24.

Large Finds of Pure Metal Unlikely.

Men have found a mass of native copper weighing 420 tons and they have discovered a chunk of pure silver weighing one and one-half tons, but the largest nugget of gold that has yet been seen weighed only 190 pounds. And gold seekers are informed that larger finds in the future are unlikely.

BULL MUSINGS

IT LOOKS LIKE A MULE, IT ACTS LIKE A MULE, BUT IT WA'NT NO MULE.

The exact hour of the birth of the Progressive babe was 12:45 o'clock Monday morning at that hour United States Senator Joseph M. Dixon of Montana, rapped for order and began his opening speech.

The prayer by Dr. Dornblaser quoted the prayer of King David as most appropriate saying "Thou God of Infinite Resources give us another Joshua, a man who can lead us to speedy and ultimate victory."

While the band played Onward Christian Soldiers and the audience tried to keep up the unusual tune, Jane Addams climbed over the benches and landed by Teddy's side on the platform. He greeted her with the Roosevelt grin.

Cheers lasted 55 minutes in the convention hall when Roosevelt began his speech, christening the National Progressive party, the first time the name had been spoken.

It was Col. Roosevelt's day, the proudest day of his life. The audience was as proud of Roosevelt as he was of the audience.

Teddy reminds one of a circus performer jumping through the ring and landing square on the bull moose's back. To be sure the bull moose kicked the platform in pieces at first, With his usual versatility he rebuilt it to suit himself.

The bull moose grows the most rapidly of any American wild animal. During September and October they become the most courageous and ready for battle. The Chicago animal is showing the family traits.

All the world loves a fighter and it was fully demonstrated by 1000 delegates turning out for this convention.

The men delegates are standing by the women just abont as usual, letting them do the work, by appointing them as their secretaries. The women are now happy, thinking they are being allowed to do something politically.

On the last day of the session, Immediately following the prayer, the band struck up the "Battle Hymn of the Republic"

Mr. Taft was not connected with long distance telephone with the Bull Moose convention but no doubt he heard a rumbling noise.

Whether he wins or loses, We may be certain that Roosevelt will make a most interesting fight.

Immediately following the nomination of Roosevelt and Johnson a great banner was loosened from the girders of the Coliseum building, bearing this legend:

ROOSEVELT and JOHNSON,
New York and California.
Hands Across the Continent.
For there is neither east or west,
Border nor breed, nor birth,
When two strong men stand face to face,
Though they came from the ends of the earth.

SPALDING REUNION

The Spalding family held their tenth family reunion at the home of Mr. and Mr. and Mrs. L. Mangus in Tecumseh, August 3rd.

After a short season of general hand shaking and visiting, the children, grand children and great grandchildren, numbering thirty-two, along with the aged father who in his ninety-first year, made their way to the dining room where a sumptuous dinner was served, made more palatable "If that were possible" by the beautiful music that was rendered throughout the noon hour.

In the afternoon we were called to order by the president, Ed Spalding, minutes of the last meeting were read. It was then voted to except Mr. and Mrs Willis Smith's invitation to hold the reunion at their home August 2, 1913. The old officers were re-elected:

Pres—Ed Spalding
Vice Pres.—Hoyt Whelan
Sec. and Treas.—Fern DePuy
Chairman of refreshment committee—Mrs. Ralph Cummings
Chairman of program of committee—W. E. Spalding
Corresponding Sec.—Mrs, Lynn Butrick.

The following program was then rendered:

Recitation—Master Fay Whelan
Music—Mrs. Clyde Mangus
Select reading—W. E. Spalding
Recitation—Alice Whelan
Select reading—Fern DePuy
Recitation—Mrs. Lynn Butrick

The aged father was then called upon for remarks, He said, "some show their wisdom by keeping still." So that completed the program, after which all dispersed for their several homes feeling that the day had been well spent.

LUNNY—STEPHENSON.

Friends are receiving announcements of the marriage of Miss Jennie Stephenson to Mr. Richard Lunny, of AnnArbor, which took place July 30th, 1912, at AnnArbor. Rev Arthur Stalker, of the M. E. church, pronounced the ceremony. They will be at home to their many friends after September 1st at 1027 E. Catherine street, AnnArbor

Mrs. Lunny has many friends here, having spent last winter with her brother, Robt Stephenson, and family. These friends extend their best wishes for a happy journey through life.

FRED ROSACRANS & SONS' IMPROVEMENTS

The store of Fred Rosacrans & Sons' is being fixed up pretty fine. The old cloak room is now turned into a department for hosiery, corsets and underwear while one third of the store space is being made into a cloak and suit department, the floor carpeted and mirrors placed about. Three cabinets with extension trolleys have been built, one 21 ft. long, another 12 ft. and a third a double decker for children's ready made stock. Since the organization of this firm, they have so increased their stock that this change has become necessary, all of which speaks well for their popularity in the town.

AMUSEMENTS

When the opera Pinafore is given at the Opera House next Tuesday evening, the leading roles will be in the hands of some of Tecumseh's leading talent. In addition Mr. Frank E. Percival will play the part of that redoubtable character "Dick Deadeye." This opera is just as popular today as it was 30 years ago. It is being revived all over the country and is now being played in New York City by an all star cast with DeWolfe Hopper playing "Deadeye."

Besides a big chorus of nearly 50 voices the cast is as follows. "Sir Joseph Porter", Mr. Lynn Rogers, "Captain", Roger Waring, "Ralph Backstraw", Fred Dickinson, "Dick Deadeye", Frank E. Percival, "Boatswain", "Josephine", Miss Ronnie Brown, "Little Buttercup", Miss Metta McKinney and "Hebe", Miss Mary Kreidler.

The opera is under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. church.

NOTICE

All the people that have a coupon for one dozen photos at the Sunbeam Studio, will have to be in by August 20 1912. No tickets good after. The 1911 and 1912 tickets are good until the same date.

AUCTION.

Having decided, on account of my age, to go to my daughter's, I will sell at Public Auction, to the highest bidder, on the premises, in the Village of Holloway on the afternoon of Tuesday, Aug. 13 1912, at one o'clock sharp, my home, consisting of 14 lots with house and barn and small Chicken house. The house contains ten rooms, 7 closets, conservatory and wash room. Light, airy attic over all and good cellar. It is now arranged for two families, but by removing one temporary partition, can be made into original plan. I will also sell adjoining lot, with Bee House holding 48 swarms (10 swarms now in it) a large Chicken House and another small house now used for storing and extracting honey, Fruit On Both Places, Also a Few Articles of Furniture.

WHY IT SUCCEEDS

Because It's for One Thing Only, and Tecumseh People Appreciate This.

Nothing can be good for everything. Doing one thing well brings success. Doan's Kidney Pills do one thing only.

They help sick kidneys.

They relieve backache, kidney and bladder trouble.

Here is Tecumseh evidence to prove it

Mrs. Sarah E. Austin, Pearl St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have had no need of Doan's Kidney Pills or any other kidney medicine since 1908. I can still recommend this preparation highly. I suffered from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint for more than a year and when someone told me that Doan's Kidney Pills were effective in cases of this kind, I obtained a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They help me immediately and I continued their use until I was well."

For sale by all dealers Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agent for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

"I'm tired of laying eggs," complained the hen. "And I'm tired of lying about them," chimed in the dealer in the coldstorage product

Hay fever and asthma make August a month of intense suffering to many people. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound gives prompt ease and relief, and is soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes. Wm. M. Merethew, N. Searsport, Me., says: "A few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound relieved me of a severe attack of asthma and less than a bottle caused a complete cure." Refuse substitutes. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

So old is earth, could she

To deck her birthday cake.

THE TRIALS OF A TRAVELER

"I am a traveling salesman," writes E. E. Youngs, E. Berkshire, Vt., "and was often troubled with constipation and indigestion till I began to use Dr. Kings New Life Pills, which I have found an excellent remedy." For all stomach, liver or kidney troubles they are unequaled. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

It is said "most women have five senses. Some have common sense and a sense of humor, how many have you?

Dr. C. H. Ellsworth, Dentist, 16 Baldwin St., Rochester, N. Y., says Foley Kidney Pills gave him immediate relief and strengthened him wonderfully. "I have been bothered with weak kidneys and bladder trouble and suffered much pain. Foley Kidney Pills gave me immediate relief and strengthened me wonderfully. I am pleased to recommend their use." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Robert W. Herter, Lawrenceville, Mo., who had been bothered with kidney trouble for two years, says. "I tried three different kinds of kidney pills but with no relief. My neighbor told to use Foley Kidney Pills, I took three bottles of them, and got a permanent cure. I recommend them to everybody." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh,

FIFTY YEARS IN PRISONS

Old Englishman Who Had Spent Three-Fourths of His Life Behind the Bars.

An extraordinary spectacle was presented in the dock at the London sessions, the other day—a gray haired, bearded man, 68 years of age, who had spent three parts of his life—half a century—in prison for thefts which today would call forth a comparatively trifling sentence. He was a laborer, named George Lawrence, and was found "guilty" of being an habitual criminal. He also pleaded guilty to having stolen a coat and other articles from an office in Chelsea. The judge, commenting on some of the man's sentences—five years for stealing coats and three terms of ten years for stealing forks, a box, and an overcoat respectively—said that for any one of those offenses he would nowadays probably only receive three months' imprisonment. It was an echo of the brutal system of years ago. "In all I have served nearly 50 years in prison," said the old convict, "and I don't suppose the things I stole were worth £20 altogether. I have never had a chance in my life." The judge at first passed sentence of three years' penal servitude for the theft and five years' preventive detention, saying it was the minimum the law allowed in such a case, but later he decided that the offense was one in which he could, having regard to the past treatment of the prisoner, pass a sentence of 12 months' hard labor, thus avoiding the sentence of preventive detention. When he heard the altered sentence, the old man, bringing his hand up to a military salute, exclaimed, in tones of gratitude: "I will endeavor to make it my very last, sir."

Antiquity of Rheumatism.

It may not greatly console modern people, but a paper read at the Paris Academy of Science last week established the fact that rheumatism "was as common among our ancestors of the polished stone age as it is at the present time." Researches made by Dr. Marcel Badouin of a neolithic burial place at Vendrest left no doubt that thirty backbones among one hundred skeletons showed the effects of this disease. The skeletons of the women showed that the left side was the more often affected, while the men seem to show the effects on the right side. Dr. Badouin's paper concluded that the affection which nowadays is called osteoarthritis difformans is the oldest known disease. It has been found in the cave of a bear at Ariege, the oldest quaternary stratum, and also among the most ancient Egyptians and prehistoric Nubians.

"TWENTY YEARS."

Makes a great difference in most women. They are troubled with "nerves"—they suffer from backache, headache, sleeplessness, a sensation of irritability or twitching, hot flashes, dizzy spells, or many other symptoms of female weakness. The local disorder and inflammation should be treated with Dr. Pierce's Lotion Tablets and the irregularity and weakness of the female system corrected and strengthened with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The strain upon the young woman or the woman of middle age—upon the nerve and blood forming structures—may be too great for her strength. This is the time to take this restorative tonic and strength-giving nervine and regulator. For over forty years sold by druggists for woman's peculiar weaknesses and distressing ailments. The one remedy so perfect in composition and so good in curative effects as to warrant its makers in printing its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. The one remedy which absolutely contains neither alcohol nor injurious or habit-forming drugs.

Following letter selected at random from a large number of similar ones and cited merely to illustrate these remarks:

"In the winter of 1908, I became greatly run down and irregular," writes MRS. HENRY SCOTT, of Swan Creek, Mich., Route 1, Box 48. "I slowly but surely grew worse, and, at last, resolved to apply to the doctors for help. The doctor said I had inflammation, enlargement and laceration. I was in bed eleven weeks and got no better. The doctor said I would have to have an operation, but to that I would not listen. My husband purchased two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. When I started to take this remedy I could not walk across the floor, but after I had taken three bottles I could feel myself gaining, so I dropped the doctor and took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Only for it I think I would have been dead—I really believe it saved my life. I feel better now than in twenty years."

OLDEST SOLDIER IN BRITAIN

Recently Celebrated the Fifty-Second Anniversary of His Appointment as Royal Gunner.

The oldest soldier in the British army is said to be Samuel Parsons, the king's gunner at Windsor castle, who lately celebrated the fifty-second anniversary of his appointment as the royal gunner in the round tower of Windsor castle. Although nearly 87 years of age, he is still on the active list, and has drawn full military pay for sixty-five years. Parsons still retains all his faculties, his sight being very good, and enjoys good health. He was born at Morval, East Loo, Cornwall, in 1825, and at the age of 19 years joined the Royal artillery at Devonport. He was at Quebec with his regiment for six years, and after three years' home service was dispatched to the Crimea. After being laid up for a time with fever Parsons returned to the seat of war the day before the charge of Balaklava, although he did not take part in that memorable charge, but was present at the battle of Inkermann. After the Crimea he went to Woolwich and was appointed royal gunner at Windsor castle Oct. 17, 1859.

Parsons possesses six medals, including the Crimean medal, with bars for Sebastopol, Inkermann and Balaklava; the Turkish medal, the long service medal, Queen Victoria's jubilee medal, with a bar for the diamond jubilee; King Edward's coronation medal and King George's coronation medal. During the fifty-two years Parsons has been at the round tower there has never been an accident, relates the London Standard.

Snakes That Bother Fishermen.

Poisonous snakes, driven to higher land by the high water in Lake Pontchartrain, have been playing havoc with fishermen, two of whom were bitten so severely the other day that they had to be sent to the Charity hospital.

James Nary, nineteen years old, a resident of Bucktown, occupies a cot in Ward 66 as a result of being bitten on the great toe by a "lemontail" snake he encountered near West End shortly before daybreak while hunting bullfrogs. John Gallaty of Milneburg, the other snake victim, is not so seriously affected, although bitten in the same place by a "cottonmouth" snake.

"The 'cottonmouth' and the 'lemontail' are the only two snakes fishermen fear," said Nary at the hospital. "Moccasins and the other poisonous snakes amount to nothing. I catch moccasins in my hand and twist their heads off. It is the 'cottonmouths' and the 'lemontails' that bother us."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Big Celebration

By DAVID C. GALE

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

It was a sweltering day when the letter came, one of the days that makes you wonder why cities are built. The streets were parched and glaring, and the offices—everyone knows how they are in midsummer. Marshall Kenton leaned back in his chair with his eyes half closed. A bit of paper had set him to dreaming of the distant hillside where he had first become acquainted with green fields and shade trees.

"If you could arrange it so as to be at home the first week in August," the letter ran, "there's going to be a big celebration. Town is a hundred years old. Most likely you would see some people you know."

So the sleepy old town had decided to mark the advent of its second century with a birthday party. What a record of uneventful years! He could remember when, as a boy, he had climbed the hill out beyond the meadow and counted every house in the village. And the last time he was at home he had found it surprisingly easy to point out those same houses.

"That was when Alice was married," he mused. "Five years—no—can it be as long ago as that? I wouldn't have believed it."

All that afternoon he was living amid old-time surroundings. Once more he set out on the path that leads up past the trout-brook to the spring in the edge of the woods. He threw himself down beside it as of old, and watched the bubbles zigzag their way to the surface. He could almost hear the call of the south wind in the maples over his head.

When he reached home at night, his eye was still vibrant with boyish enthusiasm.

"You must have had a good day," was his wife's greeting.

"I got a letter from home," came the smiling reply.

"Then I'm sure there must be something nice in it—you are so lighthearted. You ran up the walk like a boy."

"I am a boy," he cried, as he handed her the letter. "I've been a boy all the afternoon. Don't ask for a reason; it's impossible to explain it. No one can tell why this letter of all the others should have given me such a backward turn—unless it's the hundred years idea. Anyway, I've squandered my time in dreaming."

"And have you decided to go?"

"We must. It would be a crime to put it off any longer, business or no business. I hadn't realised until today that it's been five years since we paid the old folks a visit. No wonder they keep asking when we are coming home."

"I'll tell you what you ought to do," she exclaimed. "Get the whole family home."

"Ours?"

"No—theirs."

"The old house wouldn't begin to hold us," protested Marshall.

"I mean their sons and daughters. Of course I would love to go myself and take the children," she hastened to add, "but that can come later. Just for this once, I'd like to have you all go back alone. In no other way could you give your father and mother so much real pleasure; it would seem like old times to them. Think of what it would mean to you, too."

"I don't believe it can be arranged. The rest of the family might not be able to get away."

"Oh, yes it can," she persisted. "I'll write to them tonight."

Thus it came about that, on the first Monday in August, the grown-up Kenton children were on their way to the big celebration. They met at a little town six miles from their destination. They met there because the train could carry them no nearer—beyond that point the stage was their only choice. It was the same stage which had carried them to and fro when they were children in reality.

Had Uncle Jerry, the driver, been in charge of things that afternoon, he would never have set out with any such collection of baggage and express—he would have left a part of it until the following day. But the boy was sanguine, and thought he could take it all. He was about ready to start when the Kentons came in sight.

"Wait a minute!" wheezed Marshall, who had run on ahead to make arrangements. "Where's Uncle Jerry?"

"He's sick, I'm driving today."

"Can you make room for us?"

"Guess so—if you don't mind being crowded. Get in anywhere you can."

At any other time they would have resented such accommodations, but on this particular day it seemed like another touch of realism. Often, in years gone by, had they started for home after spending the day in town, only to be confronted by similar conditions. So they climbed in among the strawberry crates and mail pouches without a word of protest—even the boy was surprised at their cheerfulness.

"It's a shame the way we've been neglecting the old people," exclaimed Alice, as the stage toiled along over the country road. "I don't believe they've seen any of us since the day I was married."

"We might take turns in going home," advanced James. "Each one of us to make the trip every five years. In that way they would have at least one visit a year, and as Alice says, we ought to get into line in [illegible]"

"It looks as if we wouldn't any of us reach home this year," predicted Daniel. "There's Harrington Hill, and it's all the horses can do to pull their load on level ground."

"You'll have to get out and push—some of you," shouted the boy. "Twould make Uncle Jerry sicker than ever if we got hung up."

Casting aside whatever portion of dignity may have remained, the Kenton boys jumped out and sought to relieve the overworked horses.

With an easier load and additional power behind him, the boy again took up the reins. He glanced confidently up the hill as he started the horses. For fully fifteen minutes he struggled to fill Uncle Jerry's place; then came the surrender.

"It's no use," he groaned. "We're [illegible]"

"This is a pretty note!" exclaimed Marshall. "What are we going to do?"

The Kentons were slow to adjust themselves to the situation. They had almost forgotten that at best country roads are very uncertain.

"You wait here," volunteered Daniel, "and I'll go to the village for a team."

"No," cried Alice, "let's all walk. It isn't far up over the hill. Our baggage will come—sometime." And she led the way out across the freshly-cut hayfield.

There was a fence to be scaled, and then they were in the midst of innumerable woodland voices and the richly-blended fragrance of the forest. Clambering up the steep, uneven roadway, they came to the sugarhouse in the clearing. Yet another climb, and the end was in sight.

"There she is—just the same as ever, bless her!" shouted Marshall, nodding his head in silent approval.

"Not much change, is there?" breathed Ellen.

"Father must be setting the pace," observed James. "Our house is the only one that's decorated."

"I'll race you down the hill, Alice," challenged Daniel.

With a shout of acceptance she darted away, and the others followed as best they could. They were all troubled with a shortness of breath; that was another thing which the years had brought. On arriving at the orchard not one of them could speak intelligibly.

"Let me go and find them," panted Ellen.

She stole around the corner of the house, only to reappear again straightaway.

"They're on the front porch waiting for the stage," she whispered. "Come on. We'll go in through the house—all together."

Quietly, they picked their way about the familiar rooms—but not quietly enough. Mrs. Kenton heard the muffled click of a latch, and turned to look. Five smiling faces were peering at her from the doorway.

"Why—why—" she mumbled.

Then the storm of their greeting burst forth.

"Where did you come from?" questioned Mr. Kenton, wonderingly, as soon as he could make himself heard.

"Up through the woods—stage is stranded over at Harrington Hill," babbled Alice. "How's the celebration?"

"There, father, you see," moaned Mrs. Kenton. "I told you how it would be. Here they've all come, and we've got to tell them. Oh, why did we make up that story about the celebration?"

"You see, your mother has been trying to get some of you home this good while," interceded Mr. Kenton, "and we finally took a rather questionable way to bring it about. Yet there was no lie in it. We said in the letter that there was going to be a big celebration if you decided to come home—it wasn't necessary to add that there wouldn't be any if you didn't come."

"You poor, dear, old mother, you!" exclaimed Ellen. "I didn't care a rap about the celebration."

"Nor I!" shouted the others in unison.

Somehow, they got the old people together and formed a ring about them. Nor did they separate until everyone in the ring had thrown out a reassuring word.

"You won't have to go to all that trouble next time," asserted James.

"You'll have a visit from one of us every year after this," stated Ellen.

"It's all arranged," declared Daniel. "We talked it over on the way."

"That is what should have been done before," interposed Alice.

"And now," cried Marshall, "we are all going to have just the biggest kind of a celebration."

Transvaal Gold.

The value of the gold output of the Transvaal for the year 1911 has been reckoned at $170,000,000. This was an increase in value over the previous year of more than $140,000,000. It is estimated that the gold output of the Transvaal for the year mentioned constitutes almost, if not quite, 38 per cent. of the output of the whole world for the same year. In 1910 the proportion was 33 per cent.; so it will be seen that the South African gold mines are steadily improving. The dividend distributed from the 1911 output reached the princely sum of $37,779,057.

Her Favorite.

Young Sportleigh took Belle Gingham to see a boxing contest.

"Keep your eye on Billy the Bean Bumper," he cautioned, "because he is sure to put it all over that lanky boy from Showhegan."

Belle demurred.

"But why?" she inquired; "I'm sure the other gentleman has the best gestures."

The Oriental Dancer.

Charles Frohman, at a dinner at the Metropolitan club in New York, condemned a certain outrageously immodest Oriental dancer.

"She must have a nasty mind," Mr. Frohman said, "to dance like that."

"Oh, don't be too hard on her," said a playwright. "She may not understand, you know. Consider how young she is."

"I deny," said Mr. Frohman, "that she's as young as you imply; but I'm bound to admit that, even though not young, she's certainly a stripling."

Paderewski Disgusted.

Paderewski, the famous pianist, who recently made a tour of South Africa, complained bitterly of the treatment he received from South Africans. When he was coming down the coast from Durban, he told an interviewer that he was playing very softly on the ship's piano when a man came up to him and said: "Here, you stop that noise!" "I stopped playing at once," said M. Paderewski, "and then the man went into the smoking room to his friends, and they roared with laughter when he told them he had stopped me playing. He was not content with insulting me, but he must also go up on deck, where my secretary was painting, and throw biscuit crumbs all over the picture. What a country! How could one be happy in a country where there is no understanding of real art? They have no idea of art, no sentiment for it, and no desire for it."

Sticking Up for Socrates.

It was the occasion of the British association's gathering, in the vicinity of St. David's. Bishop Thirlwall had invited all the leading men, save one, to an entertainment at the palace. The exception was Dr. Forchammer, who, feeling that he was the victim of an oversight, mentioned the matter to Monckton Milnes. "Oh, it is a mere incident," said the poet. "I will speak to the Bishop and put that right." He did speak to the Bishop. "By some mischance Dr. Forchammer has not been invited to the palace; of course, you mean him to go?" he said. "No, indeed, I don't," said the Bishop. "Nothing would induce me to ask under my roof a man who has defended the execution of Socrates!"—Dundee Advertiser.

FLYING MEN FALL

victims to stomach, liver and kidney troubles just like other people, with like results in loss of appetite, backache, nervousness, headache, and tired listless, run-down feeling, But there's no need to feel like that as T. D. Peebles, Henry, Tenn., proved. "Six bottles of Electric Britters" he writes "did more to give me new strength, and good appetite than all other stomach remedies I used," So they help everybody. Its folly to suffer when this great remedy will help you from the first dose. Try it. Only 50 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

The Tecumseh News made an inexcusable mistake in last Friday's issue when it gave notice of the 23rd annual Odd Fellows basket picnic to be held at Jackson Odd Fellows' Home Grove tomorrow, AUGUST 14TH, 1912. The News carelessly read 23rd annual picnic, which had nothing to do with the date of this year's picnic, stating 23rd was the date. Owing to the lateness of the date, it is rather difficult to make a correction in the local papers, but the date of the picnic at Jackson Odd Fellows' Home Grove is tomorrow, AUGUST 14, 1912.

EVERYONE is invited to spend the day, whether a member of the order or not, and see what the Grand Order is doing for its orphans, widows and old members. Regular train north 9:09 in the morning. Train leaves Jackson this way at 8:10 in the evening. Street car from depot to the grounds every 15 minutes. Fill up a basket with the good things you know so well how to make and go for a day. A fine program will be carried out at the grounds. Good music. Rebekah at the well to furnish you all the cold water you want. Dinner can be had on the grounds for those who can't cook (poor souls) at a reasonable price. YOU ARE INVITED.

J. J. DELCHER,
Member of the Order.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

We have been worried over the reports of a poor potato crop but word comes of a Grand Rapids woman being buried under three tons of the tubers and having to be dug out by her husband, although it took him two hours to do the job.

The Lenawee County Fair Association are putting on some good crowd drawers to help along business at the fair next month. A $50 gold sickle will be given to the Grange having the largest number of members present, and a gold watch will be given to one boy and a girl guessing closest to the number of school children on the grounds on Wednesday.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Aug. 8.—An eight-pound boy, her twenty-eighth child, was born yesterday to Mrs. Philip E. Webster. Mrs. Webster is is forty four years old, was married when she was sixteen, and of her children there were three pairs of twins and two sets of triplets. Eight of the twenty eight are still alive.

Jim Helme is said to scorn the idea of resigning his position as a state deputy food commissioner in order that he may better pose as a lieutenant governor. Jim evidently proposes to hang onto a sure thing.

A telephone office in a neighboring town has a sign, "Excuse backs of girls." A traveling man who happened to be in when the chief operator was reading the riot act to some one on the line, looked at the sign and remarked if her jaw work was an index to her countenance a back view would certainly be pleasant.

For a little while now, during the campaign now in progress, the congregation of churches in cities and larger towns will be boosted a little. The politician would just as soon grab a vote under the shadow of the pulpit as in front of the bar.—Petersburg Sun.

Contractor James Collettes, of Brighton, is in Blissfield to push the work of erecting the new Catholic church on Pearl street. The building will be 39x77 feet in dimension and seventeen fest from the foundation, It will be built of buff press brick, boulder stone being used for the foundation, at an approximate cost of $8,000. The building will have a tower 68 feet high and will be an addition to the church edifices of the village of which it may be proud. It is expected that the church will be completed by December.—Blissfield Advance.

Work has been progressing rapidly on the interurban line, there now being only a little over a mile to finish between here and the Terminal Belt line at Toledo —Petersburg Sun

Ann Arbor—Edith Brown, a 12-year-old colored girl, was taken into custody by the police Sunday and placed in the detention room at the court house pending an investigation. The girl climed to have been badly lashed with a razor strop for a minor disobedience, by Miss Alice Brown, also colored, with whom she was living in Ann Arbor.

The Peerless Fence Company has offered to lay water mains in the east end of the city of Adrian so that the factory district may be better protected.

A scrap is on over at Deerfield relative to the high grade to be given some walks which are to be laid on Elm Street. One council man remarked to a kicker, "you folks wanted a level walk and we gave you a survey for that purpose, now you want a roller coaster walk."

Tecumseh and Clinton people would like the Lake Shore company to hold the Hillsdale—Detroit train here a few moments so the Toledo—Grand Rapids train from the south at 9:35 would connect with it. In that way they could get into Detroit easier than by going way around by Monroe. A good many now go to Adrian and take the Wabash.

Two dogs were seen at the farm of John Poucher, of Medina, on Sunday, and were driven away. On Monday they returned and entered the hog yard, lacerating two mother hogs. When found were in the pen where they had chased several shoats, had injured one quite badly. One of the dogs was shot, while the other was chased two or more miles before it was killed. Foam was coming from their mouths. There was much excitement over the affair as some are afraid they were mad dogs. Hudson Post.

Earl Murphy left this morning on a two months trip through the Saskatchewan district in western Canada, he will be accompanied by his friend Will Graham of Adrian.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Stitt of New Orleans and the formers father, M Stitt of Ypsilanti are spending a few days with friends in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Peters entertained his brother, F. J. Peters and wife of Eckford, Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. Fred Teachout and daughter Miss Harriett were Jackson passenger today where they will attend the races.

Mrs. Kendricks went to Britton last night where she will cater for the wedding of Miss Floy Underwood which occurs tomorrow.

PINAFORE

Thursday evening at the Opera House is the evening for Pinafore, the the opera to be given under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. church, and the big chorus is ready to thrill the audience with the whirling and tuneful music of this grand old opera. What is nicer than an opera with its pretty costumes and scenery and bright eyed maidens Pinafore has never failed to please. Those who will add to the gaiety of occasion are Norma Moody, Ella Murphy, Mrs. B. J. Pulver, Lucille E. Kelly, Gertrude Hazlet, Lillian Kennedy, Blanche Snyder, Mrs. Robt. Moore, Geraldine Orr, Josephine Hayden, Marion Rosacrans, Camilla Hayden, Vera Swartz, Lydia Babcock, Bonnie Brown Genevieve Halladay, Ethel Deming, Stella Brush, Eunice Orr, Clara Critchett, Gladys Bowen, Winnifred Hall, Agnes McIntyre, Metta McKinney, Mary Kreidler, Florence Linton, Mrs. Chas Ruthruff, Glen Tansley, W. C. Allen, Chas. Wright, F. C. Dickinson, W. S. Dickinson, H. E. Wells, Chas. Ruthruff, LeRoy Bramble, Seymour Orr, Harold McClure, Lyman Root, Roger Waring, Fred Hendershot, Lynn Rogers, Kenneth Snedicor, and Nellie D. Mingay.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Omar Garwood of Denver, who is campaigning in Kansas for the equal suffrage amendment, recently spoke at a Topeka meeting arranged by the Men's League. He is quoted as saying: Equal suffrage is right both in principle and in practice. In Colorado most women vote wisely, honestly and conscientiously. The women of Kansas should be accorded this right this fall. The men should not put all the burden of the suffrage campaign upon the women. That is not the American way. Don't make the women beg for it. Give some time, some money to the cause. Talk it in the barber shops, the grocery stores, on the streets, Give to the women a square deal."

Governor McGovern of Wisconsin has appointed Mrs. Ada F. Howie of Elm Grove a member of the Board of Agriculture. Mrs. Howie is the first woman member of the Board.

In Zanesville, Ohio, the other day a young woman went into a drug store and, merely as a polite greeting to the proprietor, said "How are you?" He replied quickly, "O, I'm for it." Seeing her somewhat puzzled look he hastened to explain that he supposed of course she was enquiring how he stood on the twenty-third (or equal suffrage) amendment. Votes for Women seems to be "in the air" in Ohio.

Frank Langton was home from Toledo over Sunday, visiting his parents.

The Dignified Dozen ladies returned Saturday from their outing at Devils Lake. Some one said they did not have a fish while there but they wish the story denied as they did have fish three times, twice codfish and once salmon. Some unkind man remarks that a woman can not fish for they must talk.

CLINTON MATINEE

The lovers of horse flesh were treated to some fine racing Saturday afternoon when the Clintonites put on a matinee. While in Tecumseh it poured and the roads were a mush, up in our sister burg, the sun shown and the track was in fine condition, so a large crowd turned out. Fred Teachout as starter gave everyone a fair show.

EMERSON SULKY PLOWS.

We were the first dealer in Michigan to introduce this plow. Our first shipment came late last spring as soon as it was set up farmers wanted to try it out under various conditions, some in black sticky soil, some in hilley, stoney fields, others in ground so hard no other plow tried would stay in.

We met every test offered and made a sale in every trial, all of the farmers beleiving and saying

Best Offered Yet.

We want you to try one of these plows, pick out some hard difficult field, step to the phone right now and name a day you will be ready and we will be there with the plow and show you what it will do.

"New Way" Air Cooled Gasoline Engines

When you buy a gasoline engine you want power, simplicity, finish durability. We give you all these points in good measure in the "New Way." Our engines are underrated for power, a six year old boy can run them, they are better finished than any other engine sold and are made of material that will last for years. The air-cooled feature is worth the purchase price as you have no water to carry or draw-off and you can never freeze a cylinder in winter. Our gears are all enclosed and run in oil and do not cut out by dust and dirt We have them in 1½, 2½, 3½, 4, 5, 6, 8, and 12 H. P. Come in and see sample engine and give your order for the Best.

WHY IT SUCCEEDS

Because It's for One Thing Only, and Tecumseh People Appreciate This.

Nothing can be good for everything. Doing one thing well brings success. Doan's Kidney Pills do one thing only.

They help sick kidneys.

They relieve backache, kidney and bladder trouble.

Here is Tecumseh evidence to prove it.

Mrs. Sarah E Austin, Pearl St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have had no need of Doan's Kidney Pills or any other kidney medicine since 1908. I can still recommend this preparation highly. I suffered from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint for more than a year and when someone told me that Doan's Kidney Pills were effective in cases of this kind, I obtained a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They help me immediately and I continued their use until I was well."

For sale by all dealers Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agent for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

"I'm tired of laying eggs," complained the hen. "And I'm tired of lying about them," chimed in the dealer in the coldstorage product.

Hay fever and asthma make August a month of intense suffering to many people. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound gives prompt ease and relief, and is soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes, Wm. M. Merethew, N. Searsport, Me., says: "A few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound relieved me of a severe attack of asthma and less than a bottle caused a complete cure." Refuse suqstitutes. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

So old is earth, could she
A celebration make,
'Twould take night's candles all
To deck her birthday cake.

THE TRIALS OF A TRAVELER

"I am a travelling salesman," writes E. E. Youngs, E, Berkshire. Vt., "and was often troubled with constipation and indigestion till I began to use Dr. Kings New Life Pills, which I have founp an excellent remedy." For all stomach, liver or kidney troubles they are unequaled. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

It is said "most women have five senses. Some have common sense and a sense of humor, how many have you?

Dr. C. H. Ellsworth, Dentist, 16 Baldwin St., Rochester, N. Y., says Foley Kidney Pills gave him immediate relief and strengthened him wonderfully. "I have been bothered with weak kidneys and bladder trouble and suffered much pain. Foley Kidney Pills gave me immediate relief and strengthened me wonderfully. I am pleased to recommend their use." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Robert W. Hetter, Lawrenceville, Mo., who had been bothered with kidney trouble for two years, says. "I tried three different kinds of kidney pills but with no relief. My neighbor told to use Foley Kidney Pills, I took three bottles of them, and got a permanent cure. I recommend them to everybody." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh,

WHERE LIFE IS VERY CHEAP

Danger of Getting in Front of the Guns During Russian War Maneuvers.

Forty-two soldiers were shot during the recent maneuvers of the Russian army. The announcement is stolidly made by the minister of war. He adds, "These men were in advance of the guns."

As guns do not ordinarily shoot backward, the minister's cryptic explanation may be considered superfluous. The incident is, perhaps, interesting chiefly because of the light it throws on Russia's official attitude toward the value of human life. It fits in aptly with the reports of executions, imprisonments and exiles which, coming from all parts of the czar's domains, keep the world informed of the progress of heartless oppression.

It is not surprising that the empire is rocked with discontent, that observers believe the government faces another costly revolution. A nation cannot place so low a value on the lives of its subjects without ultimately reaping its reward in blood and terror.

Accidents in military maneuvers are not uncommon. They have occurred in the United States, and, doubtless, will continue to occur from time to time as long as military training is held a necessary part of every nation's list of obligations. It has remained for Russia, however, to send soldiers "in advance of the guns" to be shot, and for a minister of the czar's government to announce the blunder to the world with as much unconcern, apparently, as he might announce the departure of a detachment for patrol duty on the Persian frontier.

VISIT WAS MOST OPPORTUNE

Artist Calls to Exhibit Work at Moment When Its Desirability Was Being Discussed.

Some years ago a publishing house was preparing to issue a new edition of the writings of Thoreau, writes Charles S. Olcott in Art and Progress. The head of the house and a member of his staff were in consultation about the method of illustration. It was agreed that the pictures must be true to nature; but how to get them was the problem. Artists who do book illustrating could not be expected to go into the woods and make pictures which would in any way assist the text to reveal nature as Thoreau saw it. Photographs would be admirable, but where was the professional photographer to be found who would undertake to go into Thoreau's country in sunshine and rain, in summer and winter, to catch all the phases of nature which Thoreau recorded in his "Journal"? While the two men pondered, a caller sat in the outer office with a large portfolio under his arm. Five years before he had read Thoreau's "Journal," and had taken up his residence in Concord that he might visit the scenes there described. In all seasons and all kinds of weather he had wandered through the woods and over the fields with his camera; passionately fond of nature, he was no less devoted to art. To him, photography was a pastime—it was not his profession. For the pure love of nature and of art, and with no thought of pecuniary gain, he had accomplished the very feat which the two business men had thought so difficult, and by a curious coincidence he appeared at the office to exhibit the result of his work at the precise moment when its desirability was being discussed.

Church Music.

Music has long been notoriously a provoker of discord. Once in my news-hunting days I suffered the ignominy of a scoop on a choir rumpus, and I thereupon formed the habit of lending an anxious ear to rumors of trouble in choir lofts. The average ladder-like Te Deum, built up for the display of the soprano's vocal prowess, has always struck me as an unholy thing. I even believe that the horrors of highly embellished offertories have done much to tighten pursestrings and deaden generous impulses. The presence behind the pulpit of a languid quartette praising God on behalf of the bored sinners in the pews has always seemed to me the profanest of anomalies. Nor has long contemplation of vested choirs in Episcopal churches shaken my belief that choir music should be an affair of the congregation.—Meredith Nicholson, in the Atlantic.

TWENTY YEARS

Makes a great difference in most women. They are troubled with "nerves"—, they suffer from backache, headache, sleeplessness, a sensation of irritability or twitching, hot flashes, dizzy spells, or many other symptoms of female weakness. The local disorder and inflammation should be treated with Dr. Pierce's Lotion Tablets and the irregularity and weakness of the female system corrected and strengthened with Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The strain upon the young woman or the woman of middle age—upon the nerve and blood forming structures—may be too great for her strength. This is the time to take this restorative tonic and strength-giving nervine and regulator. For over forty years sold by druggists for woman's peculiar weaknesses and distressing ailments. The one remedy so perfect in composition and so good in curative effects as to warrant its makers in printing its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. The one remedy which absolutely contains neither alcohol nor injurious or habit-forming drugs.

Following letter selected at random from a large number of similar ones and cited merely to illustrate these remarks:

"In the winter of 1908, I became greatly run down and irregular," writes MRS. HENRY SCOTT, of Swan Creek, Mich., Route 1, Box 43. "I slowly but surely grew worse, and, at last, resolved to apply to the doctors for help. The doctor said I had inflammation, enlargement and laceration. I was in bed eleven weeks and got no better. The doctor said I would have to have an operation, but to that I would not listen. My husband purchased two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. When I started to take this remedy I could not walk across the floor, but after I had taken three bottles I could feel myself gaining, so I dropped the doctor and took Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Only for it I think I would have been dead—I really believe it saved my life. I feel better now than in twenty years."

RENOWNED POOL OF SIVA

Wonderful Waters Credited by People of India With All Sorts of Magnetic Attributes.

A remarkable Indian ceremony is the Kumbakonam Mahamakam festival. This feast takes place once a year, but the Hindu gods are supposed to visit the sacred tank on each twelfth anniversary. It is said that the god Brahma once requested Siva to collect the essence of all the waters in the world. It is understood that Siva succeeded in doing this, placing the fluid in a pot, which he hid away on the top of a mountain. During the flood this pot floated away from its position, and when the waters subsided it rested at a spot some distance away, now known as Kumbakonam. Siva, who happened to be hunting in the vicinity, saw the pot and, drawing his bow and arrow, shot at it with disastrous results. The water, rushing out, filled a hollow, and this at the present time is the renowned tank. This tank is now a place of pilgrimage, where, during the festival, untold thousands of the faithful dip themselves in the wonderful water, which is credited with all sorts of magical attributes.—Wide World Magazine.

Sunlight on Her Shoes

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

From her perch in the old apple tree Lila Moore looked down the orchard's dappled vistas. It was very quiet and sleepy there in the summer afternoon and the lids drooped over her dark blue eyes and the book half slipped from her fingers. Her bright hair against the sober brown of the tree trunk made a flash of golden color.

When she opened her eyes again it was to gaze incredulously and then with growing indignation at a hatless young man, sitting before an easel and undoubtedly painting her picture.

Lila coughed.

The painter looked up and slightly frowned. "If you could hold that position another instant!" he pleaded.

"You have no right to paint me without permission," protested Lila indignantly.

"I could not ask permission without awaking you," he said mildly.

"I was not really asleep.

"But it would have spoiled the picture if you had stirred—the light on those leaves is perfect." He gazed at the heavy branch beyond her where the sunlight struck warmly through the pale green leaves.

Miss Moore's instinct was to descend from the tree at once, but on second thought she decided not to spoil a perfectly good picture by changing her attitude.

She wished that she knew more about art so that she could talk to the painter, who was strangely absorbed in his work. He was a slenderly built youth with a dark, keen face and bright black eyes. Lila was not surprised that his clothes were shabby, and she had no doubt that he was poor. Perhaps this picture would bring him fame and fortune.

"I wonder what he will call it," she soliloquized. "Perhaps—'Girl in the Apple Tree' or something like that."

"It's very good of you to favor me in this manner," said the artist at last as he gathered his pencils and clattered them into the box beside him. "The instant I saw the sunlight on your shoes I said to myself: 'Here's what you're looking for, Wilbur.'"

"The sunlight on my shoes!" shrieked Lila.

He nodded.

"Would you like to see the thing?"

"Of course," said Lila rather crisply, "one cannot help but feel a little curiosity concerning one's own picture."

The youth looked rather disconcerted at this remark, but he stepped forward to give the fair model a helping hand. But Lila needed no assistance. She sprang lightly to the turf and hastened to the easel.

She swept one glance at the strong pencil drawing and stared for one incredulous instant at the artist, then with haughtily lifted nose she flashed about and disappeared among the trees.

The artist gazed ruefully at his drawing of the apple trees, with the girl sitting in an attitude of careless repose. He had produced a wonderful effect of light and shadow with his pencil, and the little buckled shoes braced against the tree trunk seemed fairly to scintillate with brilliancy.

But he had left Lila's lovely face out of the picture! Her hair was there and her softly curved throat and everything save her features.

While he stood there she came back again, her white linen skirt swishing the long grass as she hurried toward him. Her cheeks were bright with color and her blue eyes sparkled dangerously.

"Pardon my curiosity, but will you be good enough to tell me why you left my face out of the picture?"

"It's for an advertisement, you see," he said, coloring, "and I could not take the liberty of having your face scattered broadcast over the country."

"Oh! And what will you do for a face?" asked Lila, in an absurdly relieved tone.

"I shall find a professional model to sit for that in town. The whole attitude was so charming—it would have made a great picture in oils," he said, with enthusiasm.

"Why didn't you paint it in oils, then?" she asked.

His face clouded. "Can't afford to spend the time now. I'm in the advertising line and I've got to stick to it for a while. Some day, when I've got enough saved up, I'm going to cut this stuff!" He nodded savagely at the drawing.

"It's splendid—as it is," said Lila. "Do tell me what it is going to advertise?"

Again he colored with embarrassment. "Closefit Shoes," he said, grimly.

"And that was why you was so particular about my shoes?"

"Yes. You see, it will make a stunning advertisement for the shoes on vacation trip—understand?"

Lila nodded. "I think this is splendid—just think of all the people who will see that picture and how many shoes it will sell—eh!"

He shot a gratefully admiring glance at her. "Most people wag their heads and tell me I have no temperament to waste my time over this stuff; they babble about 'art for art's sake' and all that, but one can't eat paint and drink turpentine—not for long, anyway!"

"I should say not! Anyway, I'd rather be a successful advertisement artist than a failure as a portrait painter, or as landscape artist," cried Lila a little breathlessly.

"It's mighty nice of you to say that!"

"I mean it—I don't believe Velasques or any of those old masters could produce a good advertisement," went on Lila recklessly.

He laughed outright at her last remark and was about to put the drawing away, when she held out a restraining hand.

"Please don't think me conceited, but—if you could use me as a model now, perhaps you could finish the drawing at once and not wait until you returned to the city." She was blushingly warmly when she ended.

"Ah, that's more than kind of you," he cried, "but I would rather not—if you please."

"Not even with my permission," she asked a little coldly.

"No—some time I may be able to tell you," he said gently. "I can never express to you how grateful I am for your generous offer; you have already been more than kind to a complete stranger."

They shook hands and the artist went on his way, looking back once or twice at the picture Lila made, for she had resumed her seat in the apple tree.

The sun slanted lower until long, level rays pierced the branches, and still she had not moved. From the big summer boarding house where she was stopping came the warning note of the supper bell.

At the table Lila found herself acknowledging an introduction to the artist of the orchard. His name was Wilbur—Barnes Wilbur. He seemed glad to meet her again.

The next morning they met in the front piazza. "I'm going to hunt for a motif for another sordid advertisement," he laughed. "Will you come with me?"

"I'd love to!" cried Lila Moore. "What is the advertisement to be?"

"Tryem's Baked Beans!"

"Good. Let us go to the kitchen garden and put the growing bean vines into the picture. Shall I borrow a sunbonnet and pick some in a basket?"

Whatever Lila Moore did she attacked with enthusiasm and accomplished with complete success. Never had Barnes Wilbur's drawings been so good or in such demand. It became a matter of course that Lila should accompany the young artist on his tramps around the countryside, and what one pair of eyes did not discern another did.

At last the summer drew to a close. Barnes Wilbur prepared to return to New York. Lila Moore's aunt announced that they, too, must return to town.

"Dear," said Barnes to Lila on the last evening as they stood beneath their apple tree, "would you trust your future happiness to me—would you dare marry such a poor beggar as I am? I shall never be great—but I love you."

"If you were great you'd be in love with yourself or your art," laughed Lila, "please tell me why you would never use my face in your drawings?"

"I've wanted it for myself from the first," he whispered. "Will you trust yourself to me, dearest?"

"Yes," she whispered, and later:

"And we can take the wedding trip on Budlong's Matchless Griddle, Barnes, can't we?"

"Yes, and furnish our house on the Farmer's Breakfast Oats and Purity Soap checks, darling," he added seriously.

Gorging Oneself With Sight-Seeing.

A blunt old doctor told a patient who was starting out on a long foreign tour: "Madam, take it easy." Would you eat up everything on your table just because it might be wasted? It is just as gluttonous to gorge yourself with sight-seeing.

Many things cause this injudicious traveling. Women love to get the most for their money. If they are traveling with a conducted tour they feel as if they should have a rebate if they miss one item on the itinerary.

The ordinary tourist is so anxious to improve her mind that she feels bound to take in every notable sight she may have heard mentioned in an extensive reading. It takes courage to be a discriminating traveler, but it is really the only way to travel—but the dread of missing something has caused many a nervous breakdown and an unsatisfactory vacation.

It could so easily have been avoided by common sense and a less greedy mind. As only a certain amount of impressions can be retained, why not pick and choose.

Submarines to Fight Porpoises.

A new use has been found for the submarine by the French ministry of marine. The artificial porpoises are to fight and kill the natural porpoises. It has been found that hungry porpoises on the French coast have almost ruined the sardine industry, which mints millions for the people of the coast towns and the Channel isles. To remedy this state of affairs torpedo boats and the submarines are being sent under "sealed" orders to search the waters of the Channel and make things so hot under water for the blunt-nosed acrobats of the waves that those who survive will take either to the Irish Sea, the North Sea or the Bay of Biscay.

Feminine Triumph in England.

A cable just received from England says: "The greatest success ever achieved at an English election by women was at Birmingham, March 18, where of twelve women nominated for members of the Board of Poor Law Guardians, eleven were elected."

Habit That Pleased.

"So you have thought it over carefully and decided that young Moneyblower is the man you must marry?" said her father gravely.

"Yes, father," the young woman replied.

"Are you sure that his habits are such as will make for a happy married life?"

"Yes, indeed. He buys a new motor car every year, and that's just the sort of habit I want my husband to have."

Dogs' Black List.

A dogs' black list has been established by the National Cyclists' Union to deal with ill-natured animals who interfere with cyclists. In bringing an action against the owner of a dog it is not sufficient to prove that the dog caused the accident and that the defendant is the owner. To succeed it must be proved that he was aware of its dangerous tendency. It may come out in evidence that the same dog had caused accidents before, but it must be proved also that the owner knew this. The National Cyclists' Union asks cyclists who know of one of these dangerous dogs to send on the name and address of the owner and description of the dog. As soon as the information comes to hand a registered letter is sent to the dog owner drawing his attention to his dog's dangerous propensities and notifying him that if an accident occurs a copy of the letter will be produced in evidence should the matter come into court.—London Globe.

End of His Masquerade.

A wedding is about to take place in the German capital between a nursing sister and a young man who has been living the life of a beautiful and accomplished "lady" assistant in a leading wholesale coal firm. The assistant, who was given power of attorney by "her" employers as a reward for "her" several years of faithful service, recently had to go to the hospital on account of an accident. The physicians were astonished to discover that their patient was a man instead of a woman. It was only a day or two before he fell violently in love with the nurse who was attending him, and a marriage was arranged. A few days ago, the office assistant resumed "her" duties but clad in a fashionable morning coat and trousers instead of a tight skirt and blouse.

Mirage Easy to Be Seen.

The celebrated Fata Morgana, a presentation of natural "moving pictures" on an immense scale which is occassionally seen in the Straits of Messina, is explained by a scientific writer as being a mirage, such as frequently occurs in various parts of the world; "in fact," he says, "one may see a mirage any day by looking through the stratum of air overlying a hot stove, or adjacent to the side of a wall heated in the sunshine." Young scientists will be interested in verifying this statement.

Kaw Indian Chief Remembered.

Henry Bluejacket, a celebrated Kaw Indian chief, visited central Missouri in 1833. He spoke English well, was gentlemanly and agreeable in his deportment. He was physically large and handsome. His dress was a loose sack hunting jacket of blue cloth with fringed buckskin leggins and moccasins and a foxskin cap. Contrary to the usual custom among Indians, the Kaws usually were caps on their heads made of fox, coon or wildcat skin.

SCHOOL FOR 100 BOYS

Winners of State Fair Scholarships Are Announced.

Routine of Daily Proceedings for Lads Who Are Fortunate Enough to Be Selected to Attend.

Detroit, Aug. 12. — Over 100 boys will attend the Boys' State Fair School and over eighty of the county school commissioners of the state have reported on the results of the examinations held all over the state, giving the name of the winning boys. The other boys will come from county fair schools and will be sent through private subscriptions. Many boys came so near the mark and showed such excellence in their examinations that friends have found ways to send them also.

At Detroit Sept. 16 they will be met at the stations and taken to the fair grounds, where they will find a large tent flying a banner labeled, "Boys' State Fair School." After reporting they will be assigned to their quarters and placed in charge of squad masters.

At 5 o'clock they will arise each morning and spend an hour straightening up their camp after which they will have breakfast, then devote a couple of hours to cleaning up their plot of ground. At 10 o'clock each morning the squad master will take them in charge and they will visit the exhibits and be present with the judges of each department in the rings, where they will be shown every courtesy. During the evenings they will be given tickets to the night horse show, the fireworks and other evening entertainments. One evening they will attend a theater party, another evening a banquet will be given, at which the governor of the state and the mayor of Detroit with others of prominence will address them. Saturday afternoon they will be taken to their respective trains and embark for home.

During the fair each will make notes in a book supplied for the purpose and on their return they will write essays which will be judged before awarding the many prizes offered for the best essays covering subjects studied at the fair and what they saw there. As these prizes are very valuable it was thought best to have the boys prepare their essays at home.

BULL MOOSE BARBEQUE

Michigan Progressives to Have One at Lakeside Next Saturday.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 12.—The first real bull moose barbeque held in the United States, at least since the animal became the mascot of the Progressive party, is sheduled to occur at Lakeside Aug. 17, the day of the Progressive county convention. A number of candidates for important state offices are expected to speak and suffragist leaders of Michigan will probably be heard.

It is planned to have the convention convene in the morning and to take a recess early in the afternoon to allow the delegates to feast on the roasted emblem of their party.

USE BENZIE WATER POWER

Company Is Formed to Develop County's Possibilities.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 10.—A group of Benzie county capitalists appeared before the state railroad commission for permission to organize a power company in that county. It is the expectation of the promoters, headed by D.G. F. Warner, to develop all of the power possibilities in that section.

The railroad commission granted the necessary permission and the secretary of state authorized the incorporation. The company is capitalized at $75,000.

WILSON IS NOTIFIED

Hears of His Nomination for President of the United States.

The "little white house" at Sea Girt, N. J., and all the surrounding colony were in gala dress for the notification ceremony. Early in the afternoon Woodrow Wilson was formally notified of his nomination for president of the United States on the Democratic ticket.

Senator Ollie James of Kentucky headed the delegation and delivered the notification speech. Governor Wilson replied in a speech of acceptance, his first formal speech of the campaign. He outlined his stand on the big issues of the coming fight.

LANSING—Secretary of State Martindale has finally completed the verified list of all candidates filing for the primary on the six tickets existent in Michigan. The list shows that all six parties have full tickets for state offices and there are many more candidates for the senatorial, congressional and legislative offices than formerly. The six parties filing state tickets are Republican, Democrat, Socialist, Socialist Labor, Prohibition and Progressive.

ARREST 19 IN A GRAFT SCANDAL

Detroit Net to Be Hauled In with Twenty Aldermen.

FINDS FRESH BRIBE TRAILS

Prosecutor Says He Has Unearthed Deals in Addition to That Involving the Wabash Right of Way.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 10.—Sensational developments in the local aldermanic graft scandal occurred when Prosecuting Attorney Shepard caused the arrest of a number of aldermen on charges of conspiracy to defraud the city in connection with their official positions.

Eight of the aldermen also face the original bribery charges, as follows: Andrew J. Walsh, Louis Brozo, Louis E. Tossy, Frank J. Mason, Thomas E. Glinnan, Martin J. Ostrowski, David Rosenthal and Joseph L. Theisen.

List of the Prisoners.

The new arrests were William H. C. Hindle, William Koenig, George H. Ellis, Thomas Lynch, Patrick O'Brien, Joseph Merritt, William Zoeller, H. M. Watson and S. Skrzycki.

A. A. Diemel, alderman, is still being sought.

Several of the officials were released on bonds soon after their arrests. The newly arrested were required to furnish $5,000 bonds and those formerly taken into custody were released upon furnishing surety to the amount of $3,000.

Based on New Evidence.

It is said the warrants issued are based on entirely different evidence from that procured by William J. Burns and his operatives a few weeks ago, which led to the arrest of the nine aldermen and the secretary of the common council committees, who were given their liberty on bail facing charges of receiving and conspiring to receive bribe money for giving the Wabash railroad certain city property for building purposes and right of way.

The latest charges are alleged to be based on evidence obtained by the prosecutor covering the city administration for years back.

Follows Trail of "Deals."

The prosecutor said he has uncovered many new instances of graft, but he refused to say whether the evidence was obtained, as it has been rumored, from confessions made by aldermen previously arrested. He declared that several of the aldermen would be arrested on more than two charges.

The superintendent of police early in the day sent out nearly every detective on the force to arrest the aldermen, and the prisoners, as they were taken, were at once locked in cells at police headquarters.

"They're coming in so fast I'm afraid we'll have to put three in each cell pretty soon," said the doorman at one stage of the proceedings.

It was admitted that Prosecuting Attorney Hugh Shepherd has in his possession the confessions of three of the city officials. Two of the confessions are said to have been made by aldermen and the third is credited to Edward Schreiter, secretary of common council committees and also national secretary of the American League of Municipalities.

Schreiter was not included in the sixteen arrests but was arrested a few weeks ago on evidence obtained by Burns, charging him with conspiracy to get bribe money for the city officials in granting the Wabash Railroad company certain street property. Schreiter's confession is said to have been in detail, and the most comprehensive of the three.

400 HAITIENS KILLED

Palace at Port au Prince Destroyed by Explosion and Fire.

At Port Au Prince, Haiti, in an explosion and fire which destroyed the palace there 400 persons were killed or injured. General Cincinnatus Leconte, president of the republic, who, with his family, was sleeping in the palace at the time, is among those who perished. His family escaped.

The fire was caused by an explosion of the powder magazine, attached to the building.

The explosion occurred at 3:15 a. m. from an unexplained cause, and the shock shattered the palace. Fire followed quickly and the building, a wooden structure, was consumed within half an hour.

EATON RAPIDS—The handsome home of Alva Bayagids, one of the most prominent farmers in this section of the state, was entered by thieves while the family was attending camp meeting in this city, and robbed of $235 in money, a gold watch and a number of articles of silverware, all to the value of more than $350.

ALDERMEN ARRAIGNED

Eighteen Appear in Detroit Court on Bribery Charges.

Authorities Declare Marked Money Was Found on the Men After Their Arrest.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 14.—Maledictions mingled with threats and counter-charges were heaped upon Edward Schreiter, deposed clerk of common council committees by the accused officials, when Schreiter appeared in police court with eighteen aldermen for rearraignment on bribery charges preferred in conection with the Wabash street closing deal.

Schreiter's confession involving himself and the aldermen now under arrest was the principal topic of conversation around the courtroom.

"You dirty dog," said Alderman Skrzycki, one of the accused, when he noticed Schreiter in the entrance to the courtroom.

It is alleged that nine of the aldermen actually received bribes, not, however, from a railroad official, but from a detective, who posed as such. The nine others, it is charged, agreed to accept certain sums, but failed to "collect" at an appointed time. Prosecuting Attorney Shepherd and the detective claim that marked bills were found on several of the aldermen.

HOUSE UNSEATS CATLIN

Patrick F. Gill Will Succeed Ousted Missouri Representative.

Theron E. Catlin, of Missouri, Republican, was unseated as a member of the house of representatives and his Democratic opponent, who contested the election, Patrick F. Gill, was seated. The vote to unseat Catlin was 121 to 71.

The charge against Mr. Catlin was that he and his family had spent $10,200 to elect him to congress, when the Missouri law prohibited an expenditure by candidates of more than $662. Charges of fraud were made, of all of which Mr. Catlin denied knowledge. He also denied he knew at the time of any expenditures made by his father and brother.

WOOL BILL VETOED

President Returns Measure with Message of Disapproval.

For the second time, President Taft vetoed a bill to revise the wool tariff—schedule K of the Payne-Aldrich law.

With a message of disapproval, the president returned to congress the bill evolved as a compromise between the house and senate, holding that its low rates would bring disaster to home industries. He appealed to congress, however, not to adjourn until it had enacted a measure to "substantially reduce unnecessary existing duties," without destroying protection for the wool industry of the United States.

CROSWELL—After being charged with taking indecent liberties with Elizabeth Hart, a nine-year-old Coldwater state school girl over whom he was guardian, George Knapp pleaded not guilty and was held to the circuit court for trial, bail being fixed at $1,000. He was unable to furnish security, and will be compelled to remain in jail until court convenes, Oct. 25 next.

GRAND RAPIDS—After her burial under three tons of potatoes and dragged nearly a quarter of a mile Mrs. Harry Koman was dug out alive from the mountain of tubers with a compound fracture of her right leg. Mrs. Koman is the wife of a farmer west of here and with her husband was riding to early market at midnight. The horses became frightened and ran away. She was caught under the overturned wagon. Her husband dug for over two hours before he released her.

ONE THOUSAND KILLED BY QUAKE IN TURKEY

Several Towns Are Razed by Giant Trembler.

Fire Following Shock Adds to Damage Among Wreckage of Several Towns—Thousands of Persons Homeless.

Hundreds of persons have been killed, thousands are homeless and outbreaks of fire have occurred in many towns and villages as a result of the earthquake. Great destruction was caused by the upheaval.

Report 1,000 Killed.

Latest reports indicate that the earthquake, which was felt through a large part of Turkey, was accompanied by much heavier loss of life than at first stated. The newspapers estimate the number of victims at 1,000 killed while the injured are said to number from 5,000 to 6,000.

The entire district between Constantinople and Adrianople felt the shock severely. Fugutives from Myriophito report 300 killed and 600 injured. The town was still burning when they left. Ganos-Hora has been destroyed, eight persons being killed and thirty wounded. The wrecked buildings took fire and most of them were burned to the ground. Shar-Koi was demolished and two nearby villages were engulfed. Adrianople suffered little damage, but Tchorlu was partly wrecked by the earthquake and fire.

Dardanelles the Center.

The center of the disturbance appears to have been in the region of the Dardanelles. Eye-witnesses from that section give harrowing accounts of the havoc wrought.

The majority of the houses in Gallipoli are in ruins and the people are camping in the fields. Tchanak-Kalessi is in an equally bad plight, but the loss of life in these towns is small, although the injured are many.

Warships anchored in the Dardanelles felt the shock severely. It was first attributed to Italian torpedo boats. The captain of the American steamer Virginia reports that the lighthouse at Ganos-Hora, in the Sea of Marmora, has disappeared, and that the villages in the surrounding country are in flames. He was unable to anchor and render assistance owing to the violent movement of the sea.

Radius of the Quake.

The earthquake shocks were felt in the territory between Constantinople and Adrianople, a distance of almost 140 miles in a northwesterly direction, and from the Turkish capital southwest to Gallipoli, at the mouth of the Dardanelles, a distance of about 120 miles.

SHIP STRIKES ICEBERG

Allen Liner Meets with an Accident but Is Reported Safe.

A Marconigram received in Halifax, N. S., from the Straits of Belle Isle, states that the Allan Line steamer Corsican, bound from Montreal for Liverpool, struck an iceberg in latitude 52.24, north, longitude 52.15 west. The Lake Champlain, also bound from Montreal to Liverpool, is going to her assistance. The government steamer Lady Laurier is also in the vicinity of Sydney and C. Harvey, agent of the marine department, is trying to get in touch with her to see if she can render assistance.

The Corsican has between 400 and 500 passengers. Her gross tonnage is 11,419. She was built in 1907.

The Corsican's bow was considerably crushed by coming in contact with the iceberg. After a thorough examination, temporary repairs were made, and the vessel proceeded on her way to Liverpool without assistance. None of the passengers or crew were injured.

200 DEAD ARE LEFT LYING IN STREETS

Massacre by Zapatistas in the Town of Ixtapa, Mex.

Another Band of Rebels Holds Up a Train and Kills Thirty-Six Mexican Soldiers and Twenty Passengers.

Two hundred dead were lying in the streets of Ixtapa, Mex., after a band of Zapatistas halted on its march to Toluca, the capital of the state of Mexico, only fifteen miles north. The town was garrisoned by 100 rurales.

Fighting occurred around Tenancino earlier in the day and the 600 federals quartered there defeated the rebels.

The latter then concentrated their efforts on the smaller garrison of rurales at Ixtapa. At the end of the fight all the rurales were dead and the total of 200 included many of the townspeople.

Toluca now is garrisoned by more than 500 federals, but the passengers from there said that the residents were almost panic-stricken, believing a battle imminent.

Attack Train, Then Massacre.

Thirty-six soldiers and more than twenty passengers were slaughtered by Zapatistas in a canyon near Ticuman, 110 miles southeast of Mexico City, when a passenger train south bound from this city was attacked from ambush.

The first news of the assault was sent to Mexico City by the conductor and Marine Collector Domingues, who although wounded, managed to make their way to Yautepec, twelve miles away.

After a murderous rifle fire had ceased the rebels swarmed down the hillside and set fire to three cars composing the train. A few of the wounded had crawled out onto the right of way, thus escaping the fate of those unable to leave the cars, who were burned.

Acts of Brutality.

According to reports the leader of the rebels made no effort to restrain his men from acts of brutality greater than any has yet marked the campaign in the south.

The wounded, pleading for their lives, were struck down without pity, and even looting was held in abeyance until the slaughter was complete.

Not satisfied with robbing their victims in an ordinary manner, the fingers of men and women were chopped off with machetes, that rings they wore might be more quickly obtained. Ornaments were torn from ears of women and their bodies were otherwise mutilated.

650 MINERS BURIED

Big Force of Workers Entombed in German Mine.

Six hundred miners were imprisoned in the Lorraine pit of the coal field, of which the center is the village of Gerthe, about four miles from Bochum, Germany.

Many of the men were rescued, some badly injured, but at a late hour it was feared that more than 100 had been killed.

Twenty-five bodies had been recovered and the rescue parties were unable to enter the gallery in which the firedamp explosion occurred, where it was believed from fifty to 100 men were still entombed and had almost certainly perished.

Physician Blinded with Acid.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 13.—An unidentified assailant, pretending that he had a telegram for his victim, hurled acid in the face of Dr. J. J. Howard on the latter's porch. It is believed the attack will cost the physician his sight.

ROOSEVELT AND JOHNSON

Nominated As Standard Bearers of the Progressive Party.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt was nominated at Chicago for president by the convention of his new Progressive party after one of the wildest demonstrations ever prepared for a candidate for the White House in the history of the nation.

Governor Johnson of California was nominated for vice president.

Colonel Roosevelt, arm in arm with Governor Johnson, appeared before the convention, and they were greeted with the wildest plaudits, a very bedlam of a demonstration, and formally accepted the nominations. The great audience of 15,000 souls sang the doxology to the accompaniment of a band, the fife and drum corps, a quartette of trombones and cornets, with the minute gun machine banging away up in the organ loft, and with the benediction the convention adjourned.

COAL WILL BE SCARCE

Outlook for Winter in Northwest Is Serious.

The great northwest is facing one of the worst coal famines since 1902, the year of the big strike.

At the head of the lakes, the supply of hard coal is less than 20 per cent of the amount usually on hand at this time of the year. The shortage is attributed to the severe weather of last winter. The coal stored by the mines as reserved was exhausted. Two months of idleness, coupled with heavy consumption of coal in the east, also affected the situation.

George H. Cushing, editor of the Black Diamond, a coal trade publication, says that the country produced 95,000,000 less tons of coal from Jan. 1 to July 1, 1912, than during the same period of 1911, and during this time the country used 6,000,000 tons more than during the corresponding months of the previous year.

SEVEN PUT TO DEATH

Murderers Die in the Electric Chair In Sing Sing Prison.

Seven slayers were taken from cells in Sing Sing prison and put to death in the electric chair. This is the largest number of criminals to suffer the death penalty by electricity on any day since the electric chair was adopted as a method of capital punishment. The six Italians and one negro went to their deaths quietly and the executions were accomplished within an hour and sixteen minutes.

The condemned were put to death in the following order: John W. Collins, Lorenzo L. Call, Salvatore De Marco, Filepo De Marco, Angelo Giusto, Vincenzo Cona and Joseph Ferrone.

BATTLE CREEK—The dead body of Edwin F. Shively, who was a Philadelphia lawyer, was found in one of the Sanitarium cottages on Barbour street, where he has been living alone while being treated. When he did not appear at his physician's office for several days, an investigation was started and the finding of his body lying face downward on a bed, his features smeared with blood, followed. The cause of death has not been determined as yet.

Township Clerk.

DRAIN NOTICE

A meeting of the township board of Macon township will be held at Granville Mills, Friday, August 23rd, at 2:30 p. m. for the purpose of considering application for the locating and establishing a drain known as the "Ward Brook"

Commencing at a point about 40 rods south of the section line between 3 and 10, and running in a northerly direction through lands of Elmer Camburn, Granville Mills, O. S. Donat, Albert Gunder, and Geo. Collins, to Washtenaw County line at a point on north side of Section 3 of Twp. of Macon. The said drain to be known as the "Ward Brook,"

Walter Morden,
Twp. Clerk.

London Fogs Costly.

It is said the London taxpayer is put to an extra expense of $600,000 annually by reason of the prevalence of fog. One gas company alone furnishes gas to the value of $15,000 over and above the normal figure on a single day of fog. The suspension of traffic is another serious item.

ANIMALS' EYES ARE MIRRORS

Reflected Light Is What Causes Them to Glow In Dark, Not Occult Agencies.

It is well known that the eyes of animals glow like coals in the dark. The reason for this is commonly believed to be because there is phosphorescent matter in the eyeballs. There are many, too, who attribute it to some weird occult agencies.

But it is all perfectly natural. The light does not come directly from the eyes of the animals, but indirectly. That is, it is a reflected light. Let an animal come out of the forest and approach a camp fire. His eyes glow like two balls of fire. This is because his eyes are mirrors and reflect the light while the rest of him is in darkness, making the spectacle all the more wonderful.

If you go in a dark room with a light the animal will look directly at the light. Then his eyes will reflect that light.

The case is somewhat similar to the way the moon borrows light. The moon itself is an opaque body without any inherent luminosity, and consequently it has no power of emitting light of its own. But when the shafts of light from the sun fall upon the surface of the moon they are reflected back, and it is the sun's light that brightens up the surface of our celestial nightly attendant and makes it visible to us.

WHALE BOAT CATCHES SHARK

Marine Monster, Weighing Approximately Eight Tons, Harpooned Off Vancouver Coast.

While scouring the ocean for whales one of the little steamers working from the Kyuquot station landed a thirty foot shark.

The "wolf of the sea" is claimed to be one of the largest ever seen in northern waters and weighed approximately eight tons.

The whaling steamer had been searching vainly for whales for several days and the lookout had grown tired of scanning the surface of the ocean. He was suddenly aroused to action by observing the dorsal fin of a monster shark cutting the water about 200 yards on the port bow. As the big sharks yield considerable oil, the ship's officers decided to try for this one in view of the lack of whales.

Running to within thirty yards of the shark with the boat, the gunner fired the harpoon from the gun and struck the monster at the first shot. After a terrific fight to hold the struggling sea animal it was hauled aboard and cut up, the steamer resuming her search for the larger mammals.

Officers of the Tees declare that the shark was the largest they had ever seen. It was of the species common to the Pacific coast, but not quite so far north.—Vancouver Sun.

Caught a Real Goldfish.

Fish stories are rife now, and under the seductive influence of this balmy time new versions come to light of the same old stories we have heard since boyhood days. Representative Plumley of Vermont, of portentously serious mien, asserted to a smiling group of colleagues that a couple of seasons ago he lost his watch and a $20 gold piece overboard while waiting by a placid pool for a bite. The next day, he declared under oath, he caught a fish in that self same pool—a "gold fish," of course—and he found within the finny armor of that Vermont bass his watch, the $20 gold piece, and 30 cents accrued interest.—Joe Mitchell Chapple in Joe Chapple's News Letter.

Her Vicarious Babies.

A young New York woman just past girlhood, who has an ample income, wished to assume the guardianship of some child without taking it into her own home, which, under the circumstances, was impossible. After some looking about the association hit upon a struggling mother who was so very poor that she had practically made up her mind to yield to an institution her two children, a girl and a boy. These children, who were very promising, were shown to the fairy godmother, who undertook to pay for their support and education.

By this miraculous means the mother is able to keep her children with her and they themselves, now that they are properly cared for and encouraged, are blossoming into unexpected charms.—Harper's Bazar.

EAGLE PICNIC

The Eagles are planning for one big scream for August 25. On that day the local lodge will have their annual picnic at Devils Lake They will have a car on the Sunday morning lake train with the Tecumseh band along. Upon their arrival at the Club, they will enjoy a band concert until dinner when they have planned for H. E. Hand to serve them with one of their blue gill dinners.

The crowd then takes the launches to the other end of the lake, where a ball team of the Tecumsehites will cross bats with a Jackson team. After a ride back a spring chicken supper will be served by the Hands, and another band concert enjoyed until the return train comes along. Go and enjoy the little outing. The boys are not at all clannish and will make you heartily welcome,

TEACHOUT AT JACKSON RACES,

Many people here follow Fred Teachout when he is out on a race trip with his horses with intense interest. In fact all will be interested to know that he came out luckily in a mix up in which he and two other drivers got tangled up Tuesday, In the third heat with the horses bunched from the wire to the turn into the stretch on the first lap, Lady Brino stepped into the wheel of Teachouts bike while he was driving Michigan Queen, and leading the bunch. This caused one of the worst spills ever seen on the Short Ship circuit, with Drivers Hal Irwin, Thos Porter and Teachout all in a heap. They were badly shaken, Irwin being thrown 20 feet and striking his head against a post He sustained a painful scalp wound which was cared for by physicians and was in his sulky within 20 minutes after the mix up. Teachout with Michigan Queen went right on with the race coming in third Michigan King raced Wednesday with 11 horses winning first in at 2:20 pace time 2:18 Alva Spayde, Albert Deming, Chas. Snell, Wade Jones, and Leland Heidenrich were up for the races Wednesday.

On Wednesday Teachout got in another spill but not so serious.

PINAFORE

Was Given at the Opera House Last Evening to a Large House.

CHORUSES FINE.

Characters Well Taken.

The performance of Pinafore as given at the New Bradley by local talent last evening was splendid This pretty little opera was put on under the management of Frank E. Percival, of the Toledo musical college, for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church. The different characters were taken the best of any amateur show given here in recent years and there was not a single hitch or a line forgotten in the whole thing.

Miss Bonnie Brown made a dainty Josephine, Miss Metta McKinney a vivacious Little Buttercup, Miss Mary Kriedler a stately Hebe, Roger Waring a stern Capt. Corcoran. Fred Dickinson played the part of the love making Ralph Rackstraw so well that it proved he had given it much thought and practice.

Just as Lynn Rogers, as the Rt. Hon. Sir Joseph Porter was pompously giving one of his "official utterances," one of the opera house bats struck him in the nose, bringing on applause in the wrong place, naturally. Lynn was exceptionally good, taking his part like an old actor. Not a character was over-acted as is often the case with professionals and Miss Brown's sweet voice filled the house much better than many concert singers who have been before us. The chorus and solo work cannot be sufficiently praised. We have some fine local talent and all did their work beautifully for the Methodist ladies.

Great credit is due Mr. Percival for drilling this company so well in so short a time. Mrs. Hodges also is to be thanked for playing for the rehearsals and Mrs. Frank E. Percival as accompanist at the performance, was the life of the chorus.

The receipts were $177.55.

AMUSEMENTS

The Pilbeam Amusement Co. have engaged the Ball park for all of next week. They have 152 people with them, including a band of 16 pieces. They have a merry go round ferris wheel, ocean wave and Grant, the high wire man gives a free exhibition each evening at 8:30. Six tented exhibitions will be along comprising of Blake's Boulevard girls, giant snake show, Aneta, the wild girl, Winnie the fat girl, and Perry the frog boy.

These people bring first class recommendations from other places where they have showed as a clean, reliable bunch of people.

SMITH NABS ANOTHER PEDDLER

Thursday Marshal Smith caught a fellow selling dress patterns and linens without a license. He took him before Justice Hosmer where he gave his name as Metcan Labanico. The Justice after hearing Smith's story and the peddler pleading guilty, fined him $10 and costs or 15 days in jail. The fellow took the time, preferring to keep his money. Sheriff Knowles was notified, but by the time he arrived their prisoner was ready to pay the fine and costs. But that wouldn't go down with the sheriff, who had rented an auto to come over. The judge told Labanico to fork over $18.75 and he might have his liberty. Upon his refusal they started, but while yet on the stairs the fellow produced from his stocking a roll of $10 gold certificates that made Smith's eyes bulge some, and paid up.

After a heavy meal, take a couple of Doan's Regulets, and give your stomach, liver and bowels the help they will need. Regulets bring easy, regular passage of the bowels.

Makes Unique Home.

In Zaratanto, Spain, a case has occurred which is probably unique of its kind. A child has just been born while his father, grandfather, great-grandfather and great-great-grandfather are all living. His name is Urriticoechea, and the family are Basque farm laborers. The great-grandfather and the great-great-grandfather have acted as godfathers to the latest arrival. The united family constitutes nearly a whole village.

WHY IT SUCCEEDS

Because It's for One Thing Only, and Tecumseh People Appreciate This.

Nothing can be good for everything.

Doing one thing well brings success.

Doan's Kidney Pills do one thing only.

They help sick kidneys.

They relieve backache, kidney and bladder trouble.

Here is Tecumseh evidence to prove it.

Mrs. Sarah E. Austin, Pearl St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have had no need of Doan's Kidney Pills or any other kidney medicine since 1908. I can still recommend this preparation highly. I suffered from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint for more than a year and when someone told me that Doan's Kidney Pills were effective in cases of this kind, I obtained a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They help me immediately and I continued their use until I was well."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agent for the United States.

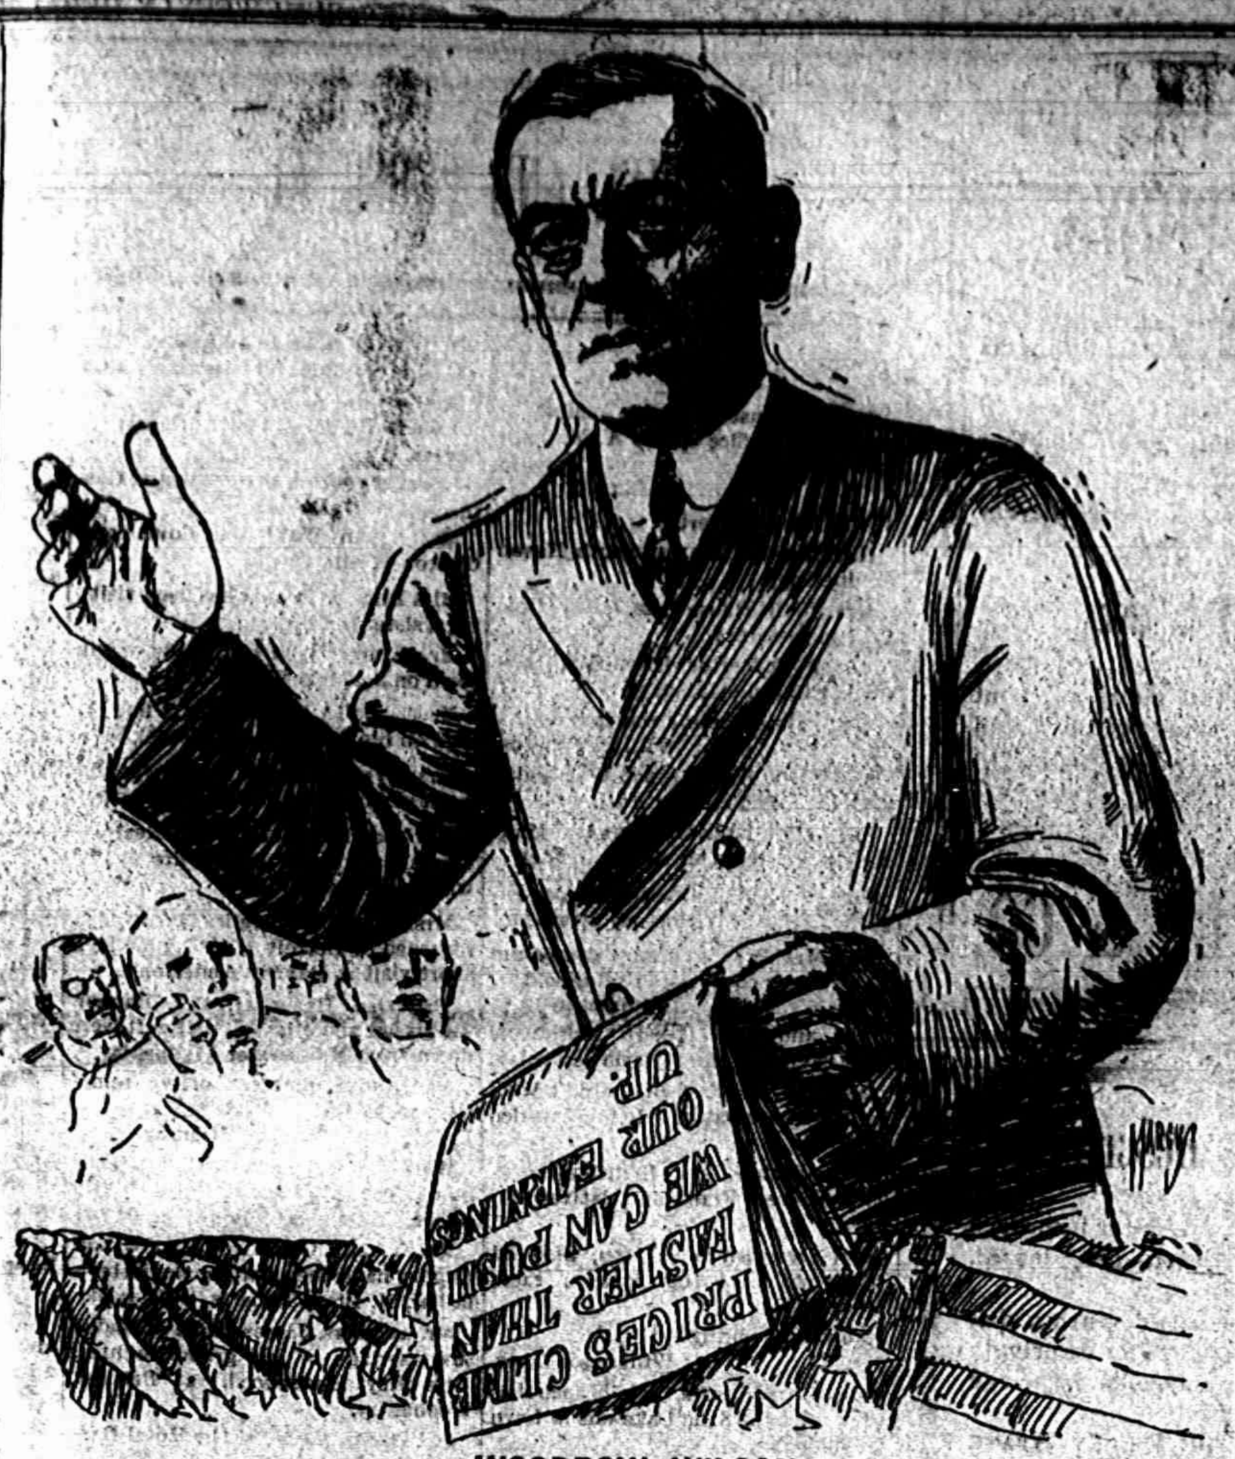
RELICS OF THE BRONZE AGE

Remarkable Find of Prehistoric Weapons and Ornaments Made in Karst Mountains.

A remarkable find of prehistoric weapons and ornaments has been made in a cavern at St. Kanzion, in the Karst mountains, not far from Abbazia. The cavern, which is known as the "Cave of Flies," from the number of insects which, apparently breeding there, issue forth at certain times of the year, is a subterranean chamber with a perpendicular depth of one hundred and fifty feet, the only entrance to which is by a hole in the roof. It was recently explored by some climbers with the help of a long rope ladder. A Roman helmet, dating from the beginning of the Christian era, which the owner had apparently dropped down the hole, was first found. Encouraged by this the imperial museum sent men to dig into the earth and stones which have fallen from the roof and sides and form the floor of the cavern, and at a depth of three feet they discovered over a thousand articles of bronze, including two hundred lance heads, a number of swords, axes, clasps and vessels. The last named had all been burned through by fire. The date of the articles is estimated at about 1000 B. C. Since it appears impossible that men in the bronze age should have lived at the bottom of such a deep and inaccessible cavern archaeologists believe the weapons and vessels must have been thrown down the hole as a sacrifice to some subteranean deity.—Vienna Correspondence London Standard.



WOODROW WILSON

Scholar and Statesman, Democratic Candidate for President.

HON. WILLIAM J. BRYAN:

"Governor Wilson's speech of acceptance is admirable. It is original in its treatment of the issues of the campaign. I am sure the address will impress the country favorably."

JOHN W. KERN, SENATOR, INDIANA:

"Governor Wilson's speech of acceptance is a masterpiece, setting forth with great clearness his conception of the work to be accomplished by the Democratic party under his leadership. It is in complete harmony with the progressive sentiment of the country, but also appeals strongly to every legitimate business interest."

GOV. WILLIAM H. MANN OF VIRGINIA:

"I think it was an admirable speech. It was wise, conservative, comprehensive, prophetic not only of Democratic success but of Democratic supremacy, for years to come."

GOV. FREDERICK W. PLAISTED OF MAINE:

"It is a splendid presentation of the issues for the American people. It rings true in every sentence and in every word. It represents the spirit of the Democracy of today. It is the address of a statesman."

GOV. EUGENE FOSS, MASSACHUSETTS:

"It was an admirable presentation of the real issues upon which the campaign will be fought this fall. I think that it is bound to strengthen Governor Wilson among the thinking people of the country."

GOV. GEO. W. DONAGHEY, ARKANSAS:

"It was a great speech. It will ring through the country. It is just what he should have said. The people have never felt more confident of success since the first nomination of Grover Cleveland."

JUDGE MARTIN J. WADE, IOWA:

"For the first time since the state was admitted to the Union, Iowa will this year give its electoral vote to the Democratic nominee for president."

THOMAS MOTT OSBORNE, AUBURN, N. Y.

"Governor Wilson's speech fits the occasion and the man; progressive but not wild; sane, strong and unmistakably Democratic. It makes an inspiring opening of the campaign, indicating clearly and nobly the spirit in which the leaders of our regenerated Democratic party must work; not one of mere 'partisan' makebelieve, but of honesty and justice toward all men."

NEW YORK "SUN":

"Governor Wilson's speech of acceptance has good luck as well as merit. It comes just in time to contrast sharply with the interminable Bedlamite rant of Th. Dentatus Africanus Ferox. And, if without contempt of campus it may be said, though written by a college president, very recently retired, it is in the English language, not anaemic and seldom with suspicion of priggishness or donnishness, though it has an air, a certain academic distinction of its own. What will please everybody who has a living to make is Governor Wilson's equable and moderate tone. Governor Wilson is for repair, not for destruction."

NEW YORK "TIMES":

"It is applicable. The dominant thought, the very soul of his discourse, is the common interest of all the people, their partnership in our activities and our prosperity. The partnership idea comes from his mind, not as a sublimated political theory, but as a practical, immediate remedy."

NEW YORK "WORLD":

"Governor Wilson's speech of acceptance is the ablest, clearest, sanest statement of high public purpose this country has known in a generation.

"Without passion, without invective, without abuse, without partisan bitterness, without denunciation, without egotism, without demagogy, he has driven straight to the heart of the supreme issue of American institutions—the partnership between government and privilege."

JOHN E. LAMB, EX-REPRESENTATIVE FROM INDIANA:

"Speech is discreet, able, safe and sane. Governor Wilson believes in the efficacy of the scalpel rather than the big stick. His dissection of trust and tariff evils is unique and convincing. His suggestions of reform in methods of government and reduction of tariff schedules will meet with approval of legitimate business and the laboring masses as well."

CHAMP CLARK, SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES:

"Considered from a literary standpoint Governor Wilson's speech of acceptance will take high rank in the political output of the year. It will make pleasant reading, and, therefore, will prove a fetching campaign document. He discusses the issues of the day philosophically, clearly and forcibly. Its courteous tone will allay opposition and win him friends. It is an admirable pronouncement."

JOHN A. DIX, GOVERNOR OF NEW YORK.

"Governor Wilson's speech of acceptance is marked with broad vision and clear thought, expressed in language every American can understand. As a business man and manufacturer, I am especially pleased with his positive and statesmanlike position on the paramount issue of tariff reform, and his demand for an immediate downward revision. In sincerity, precise statement and comprehensive grasp of great principles and their application of the fundamental needs of the country, the speech is Jeffersonian to the core. It contains no appeal to passion and excites no prejudice. Governor Wilson has presented to his party and to the nation, clear conception of the truth that the real struggle in the pending campaign is between the concentrated powers of privilege and the aspiration of the American people to realize, in their government, and their economic, industrial and social relations, the full measures of the principles of freedom, justice and progress upon which the republic was founded. To all the issues and every national need, Governor Wilson applies the 'Rule of right and common advantage.' The reforms he advocates are far reaching, but they are necessary, sound and practical. The speech will awaken and stir the national conscience and lead to a triumph that will restore to the people the control of their government and inaugurate a new and happier epoch in the land and development of the republic."

HOKE SMITH, SENATOR FROM GEORGIA:

"I am delighted with Governor Wilson's speech of acceptance. It is a superb statement of the present purpose of the Democracy and points the way for justice to all through real progress by law, under the Constitution. With his election assured, it should give confidence to honest business and new courage to those who need a square deal."

JOHN F. FITZGERALD, MAYOR OF BOSTON:

"Governor Wilson's acceptance is characteristic of the man. He lays his soul bare to the people and asks them to join with him, irrespective of party, in righting present wrongs without undue clamor or injury to legitimate interests. He lays emphasis on constructive thinking and I believe this epitomizes one of the nation's greatest needs at the present time. It will be President Wilson overwhelmingly in November."

Potted Roses.

There was a time when Englishmen could celebrate St. George's day by feasting on roses as well as wearing them. Old cookery books abound in recipes into which rose leaves enter.

One writer tells how to make potted roses. "I first pound some of the most fragrant roses in a mortar; then I take the brains of birds and pigs well boiled and stripped of every particle of meat. I then add the yolks of some eggs, some oil, a little cordial, some pepper and some wine. After having beaten and mixed it well together, I place it over a slow fire. When this dish is brought to table the most delicious fragrance issues forth, covering the guests with delight." Every good housewife in the seventeenth century made rosewater, which was used for flavoring food.

Old Charcoal Burner.

The charcoal burner may still be found, and that within 30 miles of London. This writer knows a charcoal burner who has carried on his ancient trade for 40 years in Surrey and Sussex. You come suddenly upon the piled dome of fine earth on hearth or in woodland and near it is his neatly constructed hut of withes, fern and heather, with its rough corner posts and little door.

There he lives during the whole period of the calcining process, keeping a sharp lookout to see that inquisitive passersby do not push an injuring stick into the mound which might result in a sudden burst of flame and the ruin of that particular lot of wood. This man is his own master; he knows his markets and he makes a decent living. A curious, solitary life—but he knows all about the birds.—London Chronicle.

Every Indian Had an Umbrella.

One of the incidents of the early days in Great Bend that caused a great deal of merriment among the white residents was the time the Indians bought all the parasols and umbrellas that were for sale in the town.

This happened along in the '70s and was on a rainy day. The Injuns were on their way south and came through the town of Great Bend. They saw a number of men and women on the streets with umbrellas and, being plentifully supplied with money and a desire to own one of the handy contrivances, they got busy. The funny part of it was that they made no distinction between toy parasols, silk ones and the serviceable linen ones. It was not long until the entire visible supply of all the stores had been purchased. Then the fun began.

Some of the toy parasols were made of cloth that was highly colored and as soon as the water hit them the coloring matter began to mix with the water and drip down upon the Indians' clothes. They minded this not in the least and were seen going southward whooping and seemingly in the very best of spirits.—Great Bend Tribune.

Mirage Easy to Be Seen.

The celebrated Fata Morgana, a presentation of natural "moving pictures" on an immense scale which is occasionally seen in the Straits of Messina, is explained by a scientific writer as being a mirage, such as frequently occurs in various parts of the world; "in fact," he says, "one may see a mirage any day by looking through the stratum of air overlying a hot stove, or adjacent to the side of a wall heated in the sunshine." Young scientists will be interested in verifying this statement.

Kaw Indian Chief Remembered.

Henry Bluejacket, a celebrated Kaw Indian chief, visited central Missouri in 1833. He spoke English well, was gentlemanly and agreeable in his deportment. He was physically large and handsome. His dress was a loose sack hunting jacket of blue cloth with fringed buckskin leggins and moccasins and a foxskin cap. Contrary to the usual custom among Indians, the Kaws usually wore caps on their heads made of fox, coon or wildcat skin.

DARROW FACES ANOTHER TRIAL

Second Charge To Be Pressed Against Chicago Attorney.

STATEMENT OF PROSECUTOR

Acquitted Man Deluged with Telegrams from All Parts of the Country and Embraced by the Jury That Gave Him Liberty.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 19.—Clarence S. Darrow, the Chicago lawyer, who was found not guilty on the charge of having bribed a prospective juror in the McNamana case, must stand trial on a second indictment, according to an announcement made by District Attorney Fredericks immediately after the acquittal.

Darrow apparently was unconcerned over the statement of the prosecutor. He was deluged with telegrams from all parts of the country.

The courtroom scene which followed the reading of the verdict was one that has had no parallel in this city.

Jurors embraced the acquitted man and with tears streaming down their cheeks declared it was the happiest day of their lives. Court officials, including Judge Hutton and the half-dozen bailiffs, joined in the congratutions and Mrs. Darrow, to whom the trial was a continuous nervous strain, stood speechlessly happy with one hand in her husband's and the other wringing those of the jurors.

The Court's Charge.

The court eliminated the first count in the indictment, that Darrow had bribed George N. Lockwood, a regularly drawn juror in the case of J. B. McNamara. The evidence, Judge Hutton instructed, did not justify a verdict of guilty on the first count.

The second count charged Darrow with attempting corruptly to influence a man about to be drawn as a juror.

The court also instructed that a verdict of guilty could not be found on the uncorroborated evidence of accomplices.

"If you had no evidence independent of the testimony of accomplices," said the judge, "you must find the defendant not guilty.

"Admissions made to accomplices by the defendant should not be regarded as corroborative. The testimony of a feigned accomplice, however, does not require corroboration."

This instruction applied to Lockwood.

District Attorney Fredericks closed his argument, which had extended through a day and a half, by urging the jurors to convict the Chicago lawyer, to set aside their sympathy for him and by finding him guilty put an end forever to the corruption of juries.

"If by reason of his age," he said, "or for any other reason you think he is entitled to consideration or clemency, let the court extend it.

"Gentlemen, I leave it with you and your God. You can't make any mistake if you find Clarence S. Darrow guilty."

Crimes Charged to Darrow.

In the final summing up of the evidence Mr. Fredericks read a list of twenty-two alleged crimes which he said had been committed by Darrow in his preparation for the McNamara case. These included the telephone warning to several jurors considered hostile to the defense, and the procuring of $10,000 in currency from a San Francisco bank for alleged corrupt purposes.

The chief prosecutor declared that if Darrow was not convicted, jury bribing would be made safe forever. No jury, he said, could ever get a stronger or clearer case than that which had been presented in this instance. Speaking of the manner in which Darrow's closing plea had affected the jury, Mr. Fredericks called upon the jurors to be strong men "in the name of the state and in the name of decency."

"George Washington," he said, "wept when he signed the death warrant of Major Andre. You men must do your sworn duty even though it affects you likewise."

NAT GOODWIN'S CONDITION

Physicians of Opinion the Veteran Actor Will Recover.

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 19. — Nat Goodwin, the veteran actor, who was crushed on the rocks at Santa Monica by the overturning of a rowboat, is not permanently injured, as was believed. A thorough examination of Mr. Goodwin was made by Dr. Herbert, of Los Angeles, and Dr. Anderson, Goodwin's family physician of Santa Monico, and it was found no bones were broken and there were no serious internal injuries.

CAMPAIGN FUNDS FOR BIG PARTIES

McAdoo Urges Banks to Accept Popular Subscriptions.

WILSON INDORSES THE IDEA

Vice Chairman of DemocraticNational Committee Believes Scheme Would Eliminate Evil of Large Sums from Certain Corporations.

New York, Aug. 19. — Every bank and trust company in the United States will get this week from William G. McAdoo, vice chairman of the Democratic national committee, a letter asking its officers to accept campaign contributions, not only for the Democratic party, but for the Republicans and Progressives also. Along with the letter which Mr. McAdoo sent, went a letter from Governor Wilson in which the governor said that, "To bring about the election of a president through a campaign financed by popular subscription would be a distinct and gratifying triumph."

Mr. McAdoo thinks that his idea will go a long way toward eliminating the evil of large campaign contributions from corporations and others who would have favors to ask in case the contribution helps a party into power. It is no new thing, as was pointed out at Democratic national headquarters, for parties to appeal to the voters for contributions, but Mr. McAdoo thinks it will be easier for individual voters to give money in small sums through their banks than to send it in checks or money orders through the mails. He figures that there will be more small contributions than ever before.

NOW UP TO THE MAYOR

Chicago "L" Men Charge Bad Faith on Company's Part.

Chicago, Aug. 19. — Unless Mayor Harrison can bring about a settlement of the street carmen's wage controversy with the traction companies a strike may be called at any moment.

The joint committee of the unions involved declared that all further efforts to make a peaceful agreement with the companies would be useless and appealed to the mayor to use his good offices to avert a strike.

A meeting of the carmen with the mayor will be held to permit the latter to hear their side of the controversy.

This request to the mayor was made after the Chicago Railways company officials had rejected the same ultimatum that the Chicago Railway company refused to accept Saturday. The union committees held a meeting and declared that the traction officials were "playing one committee against the other," and that it would be useless to continue negotiations any further.

COLLEGE MAN IN TROUBLE

Demonstrates Practicability of a Spanker on His Own Son.

Champaign, Ill., Aug. 19.—Because his wife objected to his using a mechanical device, invented by him, at the University of Illinois, for punishing their child, Professor Duff Andrew Abrams, beat her and she had him arrested. He pleaded guilty, waiving a jury and paid a fine amounting to $12.50.

Abrams is associate professor in the experiment station at the University of Illinois in applied and theoretical mechanics. He applied his theoretical mechanics to the erection of a spanking machine for the chastisement of children without the usual manual labor. When he tried to demonstrate the practicability of the device on his little son the mother objected.

WOMEN AND CHILDREN SLAIN

Many Girls Made Captives by the Mohammedans and Carried Off—Second Outbreak Within Two Weeks.

Cettinje, Montenegro, Aug. 19.—Reports gained circulation in the capital of another massacre of Christians by Mohammedans in Albania.

A band of Mohammedan Arnauts, supported by Turkish troops, is said to have attacked a section of the Christian population in the Berana district of Albania, which lies close to the Montenegro frontier.

A fierce fight ensued and women and children were reported to have been murdered by wholesale. Many girls were made captives and carried off by the Mohammedans.

A large number of Christians and their families have fled the territory asd taken refuge in Montenegro.

The government has ordered the minister of war, General Vukotics, to proceed to the frontier and to personally take charge of the situation in an effort to maintain order.

Second Outbreak of Kind.

The reported massacre is the second outbreak of this nature in the Balkans within a fortnight, and may have an important effect upon the already strained relations between the Ottoman empire and its neighbors to the north.

On Aug. 2 last a massacre of Bulgarians by Mussulmans, lasting several hours, followed the explosion of a bomb in the market place of Kotschana in Eurgean Turkey.

The infuriated Turks, who suspected the Bulgarians of perpetrating the bomb outrage, in which eleven persons were killed, are reported to have slain no fewer than 140 Christians besides wounding several hundred others.

Bulgaria Voices a Protest.

Feeling which had been aroused throughout Bulgaria by acute political relations between Bulgaria and Turkey was intensified by the massacre, and the Bulgarian government strongly protested to Turkey.

In reply Turkey informed the Bulgarian minister that a commission had been appointed to inquire into the disturbance, and that the porte profoundly regretted that innocent Bulgarians had been sacrificed.

The Turkish government also announced it was determined to punish the guilty.

GOVERNOR AS A RAIDER

Finds Ten Establishments Violating State Prohibition Law.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Aug. 19.—Governor Lee Cruice, accompanied Chief Law Enforcement Officer Caudill and his men in a series of raids that resulted in the finding of ten establishments where the state prohibition laws, it is said, were being violated.

The amount of liquor confiscated was small, due to a warning passed along the line that the raid was in progress. At several points it was necessary to chop down the doors before entrance could be gained.

TO BE INDICTED FOR EXTORTION

Crooked New York Officials to "Get Theirs" in Few Days.

CONNECTING LINK IS FOUND

Positive Declaration Made to This Effect By One of District Attorney Whitman's Confidential Aides. "Big Man" Located.

New York, Aug. 19.—The district attorney's office has obtained the connecting link betwees the crooked inspectors and the powerful police department official for whom they worked. Within three weeks this uniformed official and two inspectors will be indicted for extortion. This statement was made by one of District Attorney Whitman's confidential aides. The district attorney in Manchester, Vt., learned that his assistants had succeeded in directly linking the man higher up in the police department with the blackmailing operations of the uniformed officials.

The authority for the statement that the district attorney's inquiries has finally netted the police managers of gambling and disorderly house graft is an assistant district attorney who has been working on the graft cases while Mr. Whitman has been busy building up the murder case.

On Saturday night this assistant district attorney discovered who had been collectin ggraft for the influential official of the police department. At the same time he uncovered the collector's bank account, covering the period between December, 1911, and August, 1912. In eight months the collector deposited $75,000. It was the method of transferring cash from the bank account of the collector to the pocket of the police department official that supplied evidence against the big man.

"What would be the likely result of a confession from this man?" was asked.

"It would shake the town," was the immediate reply. "He could tell a story that would make Jack Rose's confession a pale and uninteresting tale. Rose named him as one of the grafters, two inspectors and Becker as the ring for whom Becker worked, but he, himself, could reveal the names of the really big men, the men who were actually higher up."

SAYS IT LOOKS LIKE TAFT

Secretary Knox Has a Little to Say About Politics.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—"I am absolutely sure that President Taft is going back—he will be re-elected," declared Philander C. Knox, secretary of state, who was here, enroute to represent the United States government at the funeral of the late Mikado of Japan. "That is all I have to say about politics," he continued. "No, I am not going to take any part in the political affairs of California on my trip—in fact I am not even going to California. I will sail from Seattle Aug. 22." The secretary left later for Seattle, where he will be met by Admiral Reynolds. J. J. Pershing, commander of the Philippines, will meet Secretary Knox at Yokohama.

Number of Injured in Turkey Will Reach 6,000.

Terrible Scenes of Devastation Reported by Officers of the United States Gunboat Scorpion.

Constantinople, Aug. 19.—An appalling story of suffering and damage caused by the recent earthquake in the region about the Sea of Marmora was told by the members of the expedition dispatched on Aug. 14 to the stricken district on board the United States gunboat Scorpion, guardship at Constantinople, which has just returned.

J. Cornell Tarler, second secretary of the United States embassy, and the special mission of four doctors on board estimated the number of killed in the various towns and villages at 3 000, while the total of those injured reaches 6,000.

It was found impossible to approach several villages on account of the odcrs arising from the human bodies buried among the ruins. Other villages were simply heaps of charred debris.

LIGHTNING KILLS TWO

Phenomenally Heavy Cloudburst Strikes Flint, Mich.

Panama Canal Measure Again Passes the House.

Railroad or Trust Owned Ships Are Excluded from Using the Big Waterway.

Washington, Aug. 19.—The Panama canal bill, as agreed upon by conferees of the senate and house, was passed by the house again by a viva voce vote. As passed, the bill, which provides for the government and administration of the canal, contains provisions for the passage of American coastwise vessels through the canal free of tolls and the admittance of ship building material to the canal zone free of duty.

The bill already has passed the senate and it now goes to the president for his signature.

The exclusion of railroad or trust-owned ships from using the canal, in the opinion of Representative Sims of Tennessee, Democrat, was worth all the labor and time taken to mold the bill. He felt, he said, that a long step forward had been taken in the solution of the trust problem.

President Taft has not decided whether he will approve the canal bill. The president told friends that the free tolls provision of the bill might prove a serious embarrassment to the United States.

GIRL ASKS FOR $50,000

Son of Millionaire Defendant in a Breach of Promise Suit.

Chicago, Aug. 19.—Columbus F. Cuneo, son of Frank Cuneo, Chicago millionaire fruit dealer, is defendant in a breach of promise suit for $50,000, filed by Miss Carlotta Noble, eighteen, 3157 Washington boulevard.

The suit follows the arrest of Cuneo last May at the instigation of Miss Noble, who alleged betrayal. Cuneo is now under a bond of $1,100, and the matter comes to a hearing in January, 1913. The girl's father is dead.

Only the praecipe of the suit has been filed, but Miss Noble in a statement said that dates for her wedding had been arranged twice. The first one was in January, but Mrs. Noble objected to the girl's marriage, owing to the nationality of Cuneo, who is an Italian.

A second date for the marriage was arranged for April 2, but a few days beforehand, according to Miss Noble's statement, she was informed by attorneys, who she says represented John F. Cuneo, a brother of the defendant in the breach of promise suit, that the marriage would not take place.

FARMER TAKES POISON

Financial Troubles Responsible for Indiana Man's Act.

Rensselaer, Ind., Aug. 19. — Horace Gilbert, a farmer living near here, committed suicide by taking poison. Last year Gilbert borrowed $160 here, giving a mortgage on his corn when harvested, and used the money. His horses disappeared and he claimed they had died.

When a constable went to Gilbert's farm to take possession of the cows, Gilbert was at a neighbor's helping thresh. His wife refused to give up the cows and sent for Gilbert. As he reached his home he staggered and fell to the ground and died almost instantly, having taken the contents of a small vial of poison. He leaves a wife and six young children.

Humphrey Found His Heart

By VIRGINIA BLAIR

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Humphrey Dodd was a plain man He had been the eldest son and had assumed heavy responsibilities when his father died. Now that the younger children were wage earners, and his mother had married again, Humphrey was free for the first time in his life.

He intended to get married! His choice lay between two village beauties. As yet he had not paid marked attention to either of them, but as he rammed his hat down on his head one gusty September night and started for a walk, he knew that he must make his decision.

He did not ask himself whether he loved Rose or Mary. They were good girls, and would make good wives. His mother had married his father in her young years of romance, and the marriage had turned out badly. She had impressed it on Humphrey that love was an unstable thing, and that he would be happier without it.

Yet something stirred in Humphrey as he left the village street and came out upon a long stretch of road, which showed white for a little way and was then hidden by the blackness of the grove beyond. Overhead the moon raced through the ragged clouds.

Humphrey brought his mind back sternly to the subject in hand. Which should it be, Rose or Mary? The fair one or the dark, the short one or the tall?

The wind blew strongly, and as Humphrey entered the shadows of the wood a thousand voices seemed to mock him, but above all the tumult came a human note, a little cry, "Oh, please—help!"

Humphrey stopped. "Who is it?" he asked sharply.

A white shape seemed to detach itself from the sable background. "I—I have—lost my way—" quivered a woman's voice, "and—and I am afraid."

Humphrey struck a match. A face appeared within the circle of light—a child's face, except for the maturity of the troubled brow.

Humphrey struck another match. "You are wet," he said, abruptly. "Were you in the storm this afternoon?"

"Yes." The match had gone out and they were again in darkness. "Yes." I walked from the car. I am from the city. I heard they needed girls up here to pick grapes and so—I came."

He could read extreme fatigue in the dragging voice.

"Come," he said, suddenly, "you must go to the village. You need something to eat—a hot drink."

"I can't walk another step." She was crying softly. "I've hurt my foot."

"Are you afraid to stay here?" Humphrey asked. "I'll go back and get my horse."

"I hate to hear the owls," she sobbed, "when they hoot—and the frogs."

In the darkness Humphrey smiled. What a child she was—with a woman's eyes. "They can't hurt you," he said, good naturedly. "I'll be back in a minute."

When he returned to the girl he found her curled up against a fallen log. "I've brought a robe," he said. "Wrap yourself in it."

When she was safe in the seat he began to think where he should take her. There was no hotel and the squalid boarding house where the grape-hands boarded was no place for this little slender thing. His own home was presided over by his married sister, a grim young woman who would look askance at the city stray. As they reached the crossroads, he turned his horse's head away from his own house. "I am going to take you," he said, "to my great aunt's. She's seventy and she lives by herself, and she's as good—as gold."

"But can't I go on to the farm where they want help?" she questioned.

"You can rest at my aunt's tonight," he said, evasively.

When a few minutes later he had made his explanations to Aunt Betsey, and had ushered his little stray into her presence, he was silent for a moment before the revelation of the girl's beauty.

By the light of the match he had seen only her face. But now all the grace and charm of her delicate frame were revealed.

"I've got some cold baked beans," said Aunt Betsey, bustling, "and I'll warm them up, and you shall have a cup of tea."

Humphrey blushed as she spoke of baked beans. He could not have defined his feelings, but this divinity was worthy of—ambrosia.

But as she ate the good food set down before her, daintily but with appetite, she seemed somehow to glorify the act.

Humphrey said "Good night" presently and went home. All along the way that tender face appealed to him, and the trembling lips said, "I am afraid."

The next morning he went at once to Aunt Betsey's. The girl was asleep.

"I'm going to take a tray up to her," said Aunt Betsey. "She's worn out."

Humphrey's stiff lips framed a question. "What do you think of her?"

"She's a dear little thing. Her name is Daphne. Her father was an artist and died a year ago. Her mother died when Daphne was two years old. Since the father's death, Daphne has been trying to work in a department store. But the confinement brought on an illness, and now she has struggled out toward the country to see what the air will do for her! And she ain't fit to work," finished Aunt Betsey, "no mor'n a kitten."

"Can't you keep her here?" Humphrey asked eagerly, "to help you?"

"Gracious—I don't need any help," said Aunt Betsey. "I ain't as feeble as that. But I'd like to have her make me a visit."

Humphrey felt that Aunt Betsey was an angel. "If you will," he promised, "I'll see that you have plenty of things from my farm to make it up to you."

That afternoon he came again. Daphne was on the porch. Humphrey held her hand for a long time, but her eyes met his without self-consciousness. "I'm rested now," she said, "and I want you to take me over to the grape farm."

Humphrey looked at Aunt Betsey. Aunt Betsey shook her head.

"She wants to go to work. She says she can't visit—she feels it wouldn't be right."

"You aren't strong enough to work over there," Humphrey said; "you'd break down—"

Her lips quivered. "But—oh, I can't live on—charity," she sobbed.

"You see?" said Aunt Betsey.

Humphrey felt raging within him a strange sense of determination. Never in his life had he done anything impulsively. He had weighed the charms of Rose and Mary for months, yet here he was ready to reveal the secrets of his heart to a girl he had known less than twenty-four hours.

"I want you to stay," he said tensely, "when I saw you in the woods last night—it seemed as if—I had been sent—to take care of you—and you must let Aunt Betsey do it—for my sake."

In her eyes dawned a wonder. "You want—to take care of me?"

"I want to marry you," said Humphrey, bluntly: "you're the only woman I have ever really wanted to marry. But it's too soon to tell you this—because you haven't had time to learn to care—and maybe you couldn't, anyhow—I'm so sort of rough—and different. I wish you'd try. And maybe if you don't learn to care, you'll be stronger by the time you've found out, and then Aunt Betsey and I will get you some work somewhere—but I hope you won't ever have to work—I hope you'll let me do it." It was a long speech, uttered with many breaks.

Daphne stood very still. "Oh," she whispered, "how good you are—would it make you very happy—if I should?"

To Humphrey it seemed that her words brought a vision of a new heaven and a new earth. "I can't tell you," he said, brokenly, "how happy I should be."

She laid both of her little hands in his. "I'll stay," she said, simply, "with Aunt Betsey—and she must let me help her—and—and do you know what my heart said to me last night when the match first showed me your face? It said, here is a man that a woman might trust—that a woman might trust forever."

IS WOMAN THE WEAKER SEX

Demonstrations Have Given Abundant Proof That Her Tenacity of Life Is Greater Than Man's.

From the earliest recorded time, says the Washington Herald, women have been spoken of as the weaker sex. As frail, delicate creatures. Eminent writers have asserted that aside from their natural constitutional frailty women were invalids one-fifth of the time. Yet the dawn of the twentieth century finds us with abundant proof of woman's physical superiority over man when tested by length of years, the power to endure suffering and resist disease.

In 1890 the United States census showed that there were at that time 3,981 centenarians in the country, of whom 2,583 were women. Out of 89 centenarians who died in England during the year 1883, 79 were women and ten were men, while out of 21 centenarians who died in Scotland in 1895, 16 were women and five were men.

The mystery of this tenacity of life in woman still remains a secret.

At birth boys are slightly larger, both in height and weight; and continue in the lead until twelve; then the girls pass them, both in height and weight for about two years, when the boys again take the lead and complete their growth at about twenty-three or twenty-four, while girls complete their growth at nineteen or twenty. With this brief exception, males excel in height and weight throughout life.

Wines and Pastels Jarred.

The residents of the Rue du Faubourg St. Honore in Paris—among them are the president of the republic, the British ambassador and the minister of the interior—are complaining. A succession of unwieldy autobuses pass up and down this aristocratic street and disturb the comfort of the residents.

Baron Henri de Rothschild is one of the greatest sufferers as he has two collections to which he attaches the utmost importance, his wine and his pastels. The vibration caused by the autobuses is disintegrating his valuable pictures and shaking up and disturbing his ancient wines.

The baron is petitioning that the autobus route shall be changed in consideration for his picture gallery and his wine cellar, or at least that the speed shall be reduced in passing his house.

THEY GET WHAT THEY WANT

Salvation Army Members Always Have Way of Getting Anything They Require.

There are few things that the Salvation Army does not require at some time in its existence, and because it never hesitates to ask for what it wants it usually gets it, says the New York Times. The other night a small band of Army enthusiasts needed umbrellas. Rain pelted down with stinging force, yet they refused to break ranks. A boy with umbrellas to rent perceived their drenched condition and rushed up shouting:

"Here are your umbrellas. Only 5 cents apiece till the meeting breaks up."

None of the Salvationists seemed disposed to gain protection at that price, so their resourceful leader made an appeal in their behalf. Addressing the few bystanders he said:

"If there are any persons in the audience who had contemplated contributing a little money to the cause, will you kindly give it now that we may rent these umbrellas which our young friend has offered us?"

"Well, I'll swear," was the somewhat inappropriate comment of one man on the sidewalk, but he and his companions contributed a quarter with which to rent umbrellas for the five women Salvationists.

Eagles Clearing Away Pests.

The wild boars and foxes of Santa Rosa Island, Cal., are being exterminated rapidly and in a novel manner. The American eagle is doing the work. The eagles that have their habitat in the rocky eminences of the island grow to immense size, the smallest mature bird measuring about four feet from tip to tip and the largest being seven feet or more in sweep with wings extended. They can carry thirty or forty pounds dead weight for miles with apparent ease. The eagle swoops down upon its prey and rises to a height of fifty feet or more with the struggling animal clutched in its talons. If the pig shows too much fight it is dropped, the fall killing the animal. Then the eagle descends and carries off the carcass to the distant aerie. Foxes also are the prey of the eagles.

Township Clerk.

Pitched Battle With Gypsies.

Some gypsies infesting the forests in the neighborhood of Fulda, Prussia, who have been hunted for weeks past, by the inhabitants and the military, have continued their nocturnal incursions into villages and lonely farms, where they lay their hands on anything they can take. A few days ago the population of Hunfeld, led by Baron Schenk, a local landowner, went in hot pursuit of the thieves, and, tracing them to the border of a forest, surprised them whilst feasting on the spoil of the farm yards. A pitched battle ensued between the two parties. One gypsy was wounded by a shot from Baron Schenk's revolver, but some of the band took him on their shoulders and ran into the forest, while the rest covered their flight with a steady fire. [illegible] turning, they fled in their [illegible] and were lost in the forest. The whole countryside is now searching for them.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE

The Civic League of Southern California (formerly the College Equal Suffrage League) has started what is known as the "California movement to boost equal suffrage in the East." The following notice has been sent to the newspapers of Los Angeles: "HOW CALIFORNIA WOMEN MAY AID SUFFRAGE. By going east to help personally in the state campaigns. By contributions of money. By giving time in the preparation of literature to be sent east. If none of these is possible, by writing just one personal letter to a friend in one of the suffrage campaign states."

A Cleveland woman recently greeted the canvassers for Amendment 23 with a half-ashamed, half-amused manner. "I reckon my husband will vote for it all right," she said. "He come home from the factory the other night and said, I don't want to hear you women folks say again it aint right for women to vote. One of the suffragette girls come down to the factory today at noon and climb up on a stool, and maybe she didn't tell us things that made us sit up and take notice and some other women with her passed around these leaflets. Those women know as much about politics as I do; and besides I'll tell you right now it's better for us working people to get all the votes there's coming to us in our families and don't you forget it. So you see, the wife continued, "I guess we're all in for it." Ohio women, who took up house-to-house canvassing as a cross which must be borne up by those unequal to public speaking, are now the most enthusiastic of all campaigners. Artificial and false social barriers are broken down, they say, as soon as women begin to know one another and to work together for the public good. This is the "first and great commandment" which is being learned these August days in Ohio.

PHILADELPHIA SCHOOL FOR NURSES

The Philadelphia School for Nurses is a benevolent institution and has been in successful operation for sixteen years, and is one of the largest, if not the very largest school for nurses in the country. It gives a course in nursing, which leading physicians and experts in nursing education concede to be of superior excellence.

The students and graduates of this School are young women of the highest character and ability. They are regularly employed by over one thousand of the best physicians of Philadelphia, who have testified in writing to their skill and ability.

Graduates of the School are holding positions as superintendents of hospitals, sanitariums, teachers of nursing, leaders in nurse missionary service and other important places of trust.

Free scholarships in the Philadelphia School for Nurses are provided for many young women of all sections of the country who would not otherwise be able to secure this valuable training and excellent means of livelihood

Origin of English Royal Academy.

The yearly "show" of works by living artists which is held at the English Royal academy from the first Monday in May to the first Monday in August owes its existence to a meeting of painters which was held at the Turk's Head, Soho, on November 12, 1759. The knights of the brush and palette resolved that "once a year, on a day in the second week in April, at a place that should be appointed by a committee for carrying the design into execution, to be chosen annually, every painter, sculptor, engraver, chaser, seal-cutter, and medalist may exhibit their several performances." It was also resolved that "the sum of one shilling be taken daily of each person who may come to visit the said performances."—"The Royal Academy," Oscar Frichet, in National Magazine.

Passenger's "Lucky Escape."

A traveler in one of the London tubes attempted to board a train after it had started and the gates were closed. He got his feet under the gate and hung on until the train ran into the tunnel. Here he was knocked off, and but for the prompt action of the engineer he would have had both legs cut off. He wrote a letter of complaint to the company, whereupon they had him "summoned" for breaking one of its regulations, and the court fined him $2.50 and costs, which amounted to $3.10. The item describing the case in the London Times was labeled "A Lucky Escape." Evidently from a heavier fine.—New York Press.

A Good Ascension Made by an Old Tecumseh Boy

ED. BASTINGS

The balloon ascension which had been advertised for Saturday drew a large crowd from the country and village. The ascent was easily made and the balloon was up some 2,000 feet before the 'parashute was cut loose The landing was made in the Cemetery

The ballon was a large one and made the ascent in a fine manner. The drop of the parachute was a perfect one Bert Mominee went to the cemetery for the balloon and the aeronaut, who returned with him on the dray, smoking a cigarette in the most unconcerned manner after his daring flight.

WIT AND WISDOM PICNIC

Monday Afternoon

MR. AND MRS. A. O HOWARD THE HONORED MEMBERS

Monday, August 19 being the 15th anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Albert O. Howard, The Wit and Wisdom Club of which they are members, celebrated the event by their annual picnic which was held at their pleasant home west of town.

There were about thirty present, and being wise and witty, the hours were spent in a most enjoyable manner. A bountiful picnic supper was one of the leading events of the afternoon.

EMPTY CUPBOARD SHOWER

On Friday evening a party of the young friends of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Tansley met at their home in their absence and took possession.

When the Tansleys' returned from the parental home where they had been guests for tea, they came into the darkened rooms and stumbled over some of the guests who were crouching near the door. The affair was planned as an empty cupboard shower for the recently married couple and many things were added to the already well supplied emergency shelf. Ice cream and wafers were served and all had a jolly time, agreeing that the young pair are most hospital to uninvited guests.

BRYAN REUNION

The Bryanites met for their eighth annual reunion August 17 1912, at the home of Mr. and Mrs Wallace Bryan: the weather man was most favorably inclined towards us and the day was beautiful. After a time of greeting old friends and visiting, we were summoned to the tables and a most bountiful pot-luck dinner was served by Florence Bryan, Cline Scofield, Erva and Verner Finch: another social time followed, and then we were called to order by the President. N. L. Bryan. A short business session was held and the following officers elected:

Pres.—Fred Slater, Tipton
Vice Pres.—Wallace Bryan
Sec and Treas.—Mrs. A. C. Bryan
Program Com.—Mrs. Fannie Bryan, Mrs. B. J. Slater

Some time was spent in talking of the geneology of the Bryan family and Verner Finch who has been very much interested in this, was able to give us much valuable information and we hope by another year to have a systemized report of each branch of the family. Mr. and Mrs. Gustine Sisson extended the hospitality of their home for our next meeting and we gladly accepted it. A short program was given:

Rec.—Howard Bryan
Reading—Mrs. Jennie Bryan
Rec.—Sammie Sisson
Remarks—Verner Finch

After partaking of ice cream and cake, the friends gave a miscellaneous shower to Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Scofield, a bride and groom of a few days. We expect a large number of brides and grooms next year to take advantage of our promise of a shower to any and all who will come.

Thanking our host and hostess for the very pleasant day we had enjoyed, we departed for our several homes wishing that we might meet an unbroken family another year.

Mrs. B.

Sydney Smith on Music.

There is a story, which we have not been able to verify, of Sydney Smith's once saying that he never had seen "a more degrading spectacle than that of 500 people fiddling away about the children of Israel." As against this unsubstantiated anecdote it is only right to quote the saying recorded in his "Life" (volume 1, page 442), "If I were to begin life again, I would devote much time to music. All musical people seem to be happy; it is the most engrossing pursuit, almost the only innocent and unpunished passion." This is a noble tribute, though the generalization is perhaps too sweeping when one thinks of the loneliness of Beethoven, the early and tragic ends of Mozart and Schubert, of Schumann and Hugo Wolf.—London Spectator.

Famous Kisses.

The first recorded kiss was the treacherous one given by Jacob to his father Isaac, when the former was masquerading as Esau. It is the first in a series of deceitful kisses recorded in history. There is a famous kiss in the "Beggar's Opera." It was given by Macheath to Jenny Diver, and the unpleasant effect which it produced on him may be judged from the sarcastic remark, "One may know by your kiss that your gin is excellent." Petruchio gave his bride a kiss of enormous caliber. We are told that he "kist her lips with such a clamorous smack that at the parting all the church echoed."

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

The dam which supplied the Blissfield Water Mills with power and which sprung aleak last spring, lowering the river to a point which necessitated the closing of the mill, is about to be rebuilt. The shallow depth to which the river has sunk wrought inconvenience to others as well as the owners of the mill and for some time the village council has been considering the proposition of contributing a sum of money towards replacing the dam, taking in return a deed to a certain interest in the structure The Continetal Sugar Co. must also use large quantities of water during every season's campaign and it is of vital importance to the company that water be plentiful during the rudimentary stages of sugar making. The village needs better fire protection than is the village lighting plant also feels the insufficient water supply.—Blissfield Advance.

A peck of apples from an Ogden farm was sent to the Adrian Times office, and was speedily transferred into the anatomies of the office force. It was rather rich feed for printers, who usually feast on dried apples and then drink plenty of water.—Hudson Post.

Last Monday evening Mr and Mrs. H. H. Halladay, Harold Halladay and A. J. Allen were coming from Tecumseh in the former's Auto, when they saw another large car approaching them. Mr. Halliday slowed down and gave more room for the car pass to than was safe, for his Auto tipped into a ditch and turned over on its side. Fortunately no one was hurt; but the occupants of the large car paid no attention but buzzed on, without noticing the mishap which would not have occurred had they given one half the road.—Clinton Courier.

John McGregor, the young fellow who was arrested here last week for a theft from Mrs. Thomas in her home was brought before Judge O'Mealy Monday morning, on a charge of larceny from a dwelling house. He plead guilty and was sentenced to the State Reformatory at Ionia for a maximum term of five years and recommended a maxmium term of two years.—Clinton Courier.

The second accident since FitzGerald & Co. began work on the waterworks plant occurred Tuesday afternoon while they were digging a trench in front of Dr. Scheurer's street. The earth caved in on W. Australia Would Save Birds.

Strong protest is being made in South Australia against the continual slaughter of such rare birds as the ibis, the egret, cranes and spoonbills to supply the demands of milliners. The slaughter renders South Australia even more prone to plagues of grasshoppers, and is a prime cause of the decline of its fish resources. As the wading birds disappear the crustaceans that destroy fish spawn increase in multitude.

Deering Corn Binder

Why you should buy this machine in preference to all others.

1 It does not elevate the corn, therefore the draft is lighter.
2 Has a tieing range of 21 in., 13 in. more than others.
3 Both wheels are the same height therefore it draws like a cart.
4 Has a bundle carrier like a grain binder, practically no neck weight or side lash, leaves the bundle away from the third horse.
5 Has the correct width so neither wheels run on the stubble,
6 The only binder with both roller and ball bearings,
7 Every binder carries SERVICE INSURANCE which is worth money to you in case of breakages, delivery, quick repairs, etc.

Corn Binder

Do not wait until time to cut your corn before placing your order for a corn binder. We have a limited number of binders always in stock, but at times get short and have to disappoint a customer. We sell the McCormick and Johnson and guarantee them in every respect. If you are going to buy, would appreciate your early order.

Ensilage Cutters

Every man with a 100 acre farm and a gasoline engine should have a Papec Ensilage Cutter. Ensilage should be cut and stored just at the right time. If you have a rig of your own you are independent. The Papec will cut more fodder with less power than any other cutter sold. There is a reason, get our catalogue, see sample cutter and learn why.

WHY IT SUCCEEDS

Because It's for One Thing Only, and Tecumseh People Appreciate This.

Nothing can be good for everything.

Doing one thing well brings success.

Doan's Kidney Pills do one thing only.

They help sick kidneys.

They relieve backache, kidney and bladder trouble.

Here is Tecumseh evidence to prove it.

Mrs. Sarah E. Austin, Pearl St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have had no need of Doan's Kidney Pills or any other kidney medicine since 1908. I can still recommend this preparation highly. I suffered from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint for more than a year and when someone told me that Doan's Kidney Pills were effective in cases of this kind, I obtained a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They help me immediately and I continued their use until I was well."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agent for the United States.

Remmber the name—Doan's—and take no other.

"I'm tired of laying eggs," complained the hen. "And I'm tired of lying about them," chimed in the dealer in the coldstorage product.

Hay fever and asthma make August a month of intense suffering to many people. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound gives prompt ease and relief, and is soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes, Wm. M. Merethew, N. Searsport, Me., says: "A few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound relieved me of a severe attack of asthma and less than a bottle caused a complete cure." Refuse suqstitutes. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

So old is earth, could she

To deck her birthday cake.

THE TRIALS OF A TRAVELER

"I am a traveling salesman," writes E. E. Youngs, E, Berkshire. Vt., "and was often troubled with constipation and indigestion till I began to use Dr. Kings New Life Pills, which I have founp an excellent remedy." For all stomach, liver or kidney troubles they are unequaled. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

It is said "most women have five senses. Some have common sense and a sense of humor, how many have you?

Dr. C. H. Ellsworth, Dentist, 16 Baldwin St., Rochester, N. Y., says Foley Kidney Pills gave him immediate relief and strengthened him wonderfully. "I have been bothered with weak kidneys and bladder trouble and suffered much pain. Foley Kidney Pills gave me immediate relief and strengthened me wonderfully. I am pleased to recommend their use." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Robert W. Herter, Lawrenceville, Mo., who had been bothered with kidney trouble for two years, says. "I tried three different kinds of kidney pills but with no relief. My neighbor told to use Foley Kidney Pills, I took three bottles of them, and got a permanent cure. I recommend them to everybody." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh,

STATE OF MICHIGAN, COUNTY OF LENAWEE, ss.

Probate Court for said County.

At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, on the 29th day of July, in the year one thousand, nine hundred and twelve.

Present, HARRY L. LARWILL, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of BENIAMIN F. DEPUY, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Brunella Fern De Puy, administratrix with the will annexed, upon the estate of said diseased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased, and the expenses of administration thus far incurred, have been fully paid, and praying that her final administration account may be allowed and for such other order and decree as to this Court shall seem proper.

It is Ordered, That Monday the 26th day of August, next at nine o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition.

And it is further Ordered, That a copy of this order be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

COMMISSIONERS' NOTICE

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

In the matter of the Estate of RICHARD CALDWELL, Deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed by the Probate Court of said County, Commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands of all persons against the estate of said deceased, do hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at the Tecumseh State Savings Bank in the Village of Tecumseh Lenawee County Michigan, on the 7th day of September 1912, and on the 5th day of February, 1913 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days.

And that six months from the 5th day of August 1912, are allowed by said Probate Court for the creditors of said estate to present their claims to us for examination and allowance.

Dated August 5th, 1912.

Joseph H. Smith,
Guy E. Nemire.
Commissioners.

"Black and Blue" Bruises Explained.

The color of blood is due chiefly to iron in the little blood cells. When the iron is kept in these little blood cells, which are living and traveling around in the blood vessels, the color is red. Hit the skin hard enough to break some of the little blood vessels beneath the surface and the little red cells escape from the injured blood vessels, wander around for a while in the tissues, and die.

When they die the iron that made them red before then changes to black-and-blue coloring. After a while this iron is taken up by the glands caled the lymphatics and made over again into nice red cells. The iron is taken up very much more quickly by the lymphatics if the black-and-blue spot is rubbed and massaged.

NATURE'S LAWS.

Nature's laws are perfect if only we obey them, but disease follows disobedience. Go straight to Nature for the cure, to the forest; there are mysteries there, some of which we can fathom for you. BRITTON

UNDERWOOD-EXELBY

Wednesday, August 14, at high noon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Underwood, a wedding, beautiful in every detail, was solemnized by Rev. Smith Harper of Adrian, when Miss Floy, became the bride of Leon Exelby. At the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Miss Ima Britton of Adrian, the bride and groom unattended entered the parlor and took their places in front of a hugh bank of ferns, where the ring ceremony was performed.

The bride was charmingly gowned in white embroidered voile with lace trimings, and carried a boquet of red roses. Her traveling suit was tan with hat to match. After congratutions an elegant three course dinner was served by Misses Katheryn Underwood and Aileen Kendrick, Mrs. Kendrick catering. Covers were laid for twenty-two.

Both young people have spent the greater part of their lives near Britton with the exception of a few years while at school. The bride attended school in Tecumseh and Blissfield and has spent a number of successful years as a teacher. The groom is a graduate of our school and attended the M. A. C College at Lansing for four years. The past year he attended college at Laramie, Wyoming and will return there as a teacher the coming year.

They left Wednesday for a short wedding trip, after which they will visit friends here, leaving September 4 for their new home in Laramie.

Both young people have hosts of friends who extend congratulations

LEAP YEAR PARTY

Friday evening, the girls and young married ladies gave a Leap Year Party in the Maccabee hall, which had been prettily decorated for the occasion, each corner being fixed for cozy nooks with rugs, sofa pillows and chairs. The color scheme being carried out in yellow and green. Light refreshments were served. About forty were present and a pleasant memory of the occasion will linger long with each one as a number of the young people leave for their various duties as students, teachers, etc. and the young married ones leaving for their new homes which widely separates the crowd present.

The out of town guests were: Miss Jessie Clement and Ralph T. Lee of Detroit, Miss Ima Britton of Adrian, Miss Caroline Hall of Ridgeway, Richard Drouillard of Holloway, and Miss Ida and Will Gibson of Macon.

Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Dennison of Toledo, were guests of relatives here from Wednesday till Saturday.

Reflection on the Promoters.

Charles P. Abbey, a Chicago attorney, was called upon at a recent banquet given to lawyers and judges. He said: "I was recently trying a case to foreclose a mortgage given by promoters of a new insurance company which had failed. I had as one of my witnesses a man named Kelley who had made a friend of a yellow dog while taking a morning walk. The dog followed him to court, and when the case was adjourned at noon the dog was waiting for Kelley. The attorney of the insurance people asked him if he was trying to steal the dog.

"Kelley thought a moment and then answered blandly: 'Yes, I'm going to steal the dog, and donate him to your clients. They are capable of trying to start an insurance company on a yellow dog.'"

TARIFF HAS NOT HELPED FARMERS

Senator Gardner Gives Reason for Supporting Wilson.

NOW IS TIME FOR REWARD

Too Long Have They Been Fooled by False Gods—Rallying to Democracy's Banners.

The reasons why those engaged in agricultural pursuits should support Governor Woodrow Wilson for president are strongly set forth by Senator Obadiah Gardner of Maine in an address to farmers.

Senator Gardner is a practical farmer, one who farms his own farm, and he is probably in closer touch and sympathy with country life and its environments than any other man in public life.

For twenty-five years Senator Gardner has been actively engaged in the National Grange and for ten years he was the master of the State Grange of Maine. A few years ago he came within a close margin of being elected governor of the Pine Tree State.

A little less than a year ago, when Senator Frye, who had represented Maine in the senate for thirty years, died, Governor Plaisted honored Mr. Gardner, and recognized the agricultural interests of the country by appointing him to the United States senate, where he has made a most creditable record, devoting particular attention to the welfare of the great rural population of the country. He is now a candidate for re-election and will undoubtedly be successful.

In his address, Senator Gardner says:

To the Farmers of the United States, Greeting:

Being one of you and for the greater part of my life having been engaged in the practical every-day duties of my own farm; having been for 25 years past officially at work through boards of agriculture and the National and State Granges; having served four years as second officer of the National Grange and as master of the Maine State Grange ten years, during which time the order in Maine added 35,545 members and attained a power and influence never held before, I feel I am, in a position to speak from the standpoint of one who knows the farmer and his needs, and it is solely because of this that I am prompted to address you.

For years farmers have justly complained of being required to pull at the short end of the yoke because of unfair and unjust discriminations in legislation and transportation, and at the present time the farmers are charged with being the cause of the high cost of living, when, as a matter of fact, taken collectively—the amount invested in their business, the hours devoted to hard labor, and everything connected with the details of agricultural life—they are, as a whole, the poorest paid class of people in this country, while relatively the most important.

Farmers Have Been Deceived.

During all recent years farmers have been told what a great blessing has been theirs through the so-called protective tariff, and yet to find a market for their principal crops they have had to compete in the markets of the world where the price is fixed. But suddenly it is discovered that the farmer is the sole cause for the high cost of living, and what happens? The president (Mr. Taft) with a total disregard for the interests of the farmers, submits a plan to open up to competition with the farmers of the United States the products of Canada while being careful to preserve the tariff, or more correctly speaking, the tax, on all the farmer has to buy, which, as clearly as anything can, exposes the hypocrisy and "humbuggery" of the claim that the tariff is a benefit to agricultural as compared with manufactured products.

Now, the farmers of this country have an opportunity to benefit themselves that has never appeared within my recollection, as the Democratic party has been compelled by the force of public opinion to nominate a man for the presidency who is best equipped for that high office of any that have been nominated or elected since Lincoln. A man that I speak of from a personal acquaintance with and a knowledge of his fitness; a man of great natural ability, splendidly educated, not theoretically but practically, a keenness of intellect remarkable for its grasp of every condition with which he is confronted; an indomitable courage to do right; and above all a great broad tendency with and sympathy for all classes. He will make one of the most accessible presidents ever in the White House, and through whom none will be refused a hearing, however humble, nor fail to receive justice at his hands. He is truly a marvelous man and I wish every person in the United States could know him as I know him, and supplementing all these qualities is the additional one that his home is one of perfect balance.

None can meet the splendid Mrs. Wilson and her three refined, cultured daughters with their perfect naturalness, but must feel that the whole family of Woodrow Wilson was especially prepared to fill a great need in the present crisis in the history of our country, as were Washington, Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln, and I would advise the farmers upon my reputation as a man, if you want to protect your own interests and those of your families; if you want to render the greatest possible good to your country and future generations; if you want to contribute your part to the end that popular government under God shall not perish from the earth, then see that the Hon. Woodrow Wilson is elected president.

O. GARDNER.

THE PEOPLE AND THE CURRENCY.

In dealing with the complicated and difficult question of the reform of our banking and currency laws it is plain that we ought to consult very many persons besides the bankers, not because we distrust the bankers, but because they do not necessarily comprehend the business of the country, notwithstanding they are indispensable servants of it and may do a vast deal to make it hard or easy. No mere bankers' plan will meet the requirements, no matter how honestly conceived. It should be a merchants' and farmers' plan as well, elastic in the hands of those who use it as an indispensable part of their daily business.—From Woodrow Wilson's speech accepting the Democratic nomination.

Tennis in Japan.

The Japanese have displayed a peculiar aptitude for lawn tennis. To many Indianapolis players the sight of an expert Japanese on the park courts is not uncommon. Among the best amateur players in the city are Japanese house servants. What they lack in height they more than make up in agility. They seem to be indefatigable. Tennis, like baseball, is steadily growing in popularity in Japan. The former has become a favorite among Japanese high school and college students. Intercollegiate games have also become popular among the students and their friends. Among the well-known institutions that have a large number of enthusiastic tennis players are the following: Tokio Higher Normal school, Tokio Commercial school (higher), Waseda university, Tokio Kyoto university, Kyoto; Third high school, Kyoto. The foreign communities in the various ports, Yokohama, Kobe and Nagasaki, have tennis clubs. The leading foreign club at Yokohama is known as the Ladies' Lawn Tennis club. Tennis rackets are already being manufactured in Japan, there being six factories in Tokio alone.

WHAT REPUBLICAN PROSPERITY IS.

What has the result been? Prosperity? Yes, if by prosperity you mean vast wealth, no matter how distributed or whether distributed at all or not; if you mean vast enterprises built up to be presently concentrated under the control of comparatively small bodies of men, who can determine almost at pleasure whether there shall be competition or not. The nation as a nation has grown immensely rich. She is justly proud of her industries and of the genius of her men of affairs. They can master anything they set their mind to, and we have been greatly stimulated under their leadership and command. Their laurels are many and very green. We must accord them the great honors that are their due, and we must preserve what they have built up for us. But what of the other side of the picture? It is not easy for us to live as it used to be. Our money will not buy as much. High wages, even when we can get them, yield us no great comfort. We used to be better off with less, because a dollar could buy so much more. The majority of us have been disturbed to find ourselves growing poorer, even though our earnings were slowly increasing. Prices climb faster than we can push our earnings up.—From Woodrow Wilson's speech accepting the Democratic nomination.

LABOR AND THE RULE OF RIGHT.

The working people of America—if they must be distinguished from the minority that constitutes the rest of it—are, of course, the backbone of the nation. No law that safeguards their life, that improves the physical and moral conditions under which they live, that makes their hours of labor rational and tolerable, that gives them freedom to act in their own interest and that protects them where they cannot protect themselves, can properly be regarded as class legislation or as anything but as a measure taken in the interest of the whole people, whose partnership in right action we are trying to establish and make real and practical. It is in this spirit that we shall act if we are genuine spokesmen of the whole country.—From Woodrow Wilson's speech accepting the Democratic nomination.

THE TWO GREAT THINGS TO DO.

There are two great things to do. One is to set up the rule of justice and of right in such matters as the tariff, the regulation of the trusts and the prevention of monopoly, the adaptation of our banking and currency laws to the varied uses to which our people must put them, the treatment of those who do the daily labor in our factories and mines and throughout all our great industrial and commercial undertakings and the political life of the people of the Philippines, for whom we hold governmental power in trust, for their service, not our own. The other, the additional duty, is the great task of protecting our people and our resources and of keeping open to the whole people the doors of opportunity through which they must, generation by generation, pass if they are to make conquest of their fortunes in health, in freedom, in peace and in contentment. In the performance of this second great duty we are face to face with questions of conservation and of development, questions of forests and water power and mines and waterways, of the building of an adequate merchant marine and the opening of every highway and facility and the setting up of every safeguard needed by a great industrious, expanding nation.—From Woodrow Wilson's speech accepting the Democratic nomination.

LOUIS D. BRANDEIS, BOSTON:

"Governor Wilson's speech of acceptance is the utterance of a twentieth century statesman; with keen perception he recognizes the evils from which the people are suffering and the dangers which threaten our welfare; with broad vision he points the way by which these evils may be removed and the dangers averted; he proves his understanding alike of business and of social needs and that he is a Democrat, in fact, as well as in name, and his courage is undoubted. Progressive Americans have in him a worthy leader."

Appropriate Names.

Combine to Fight Pine Beetle

A number of associations have been formed in the south to combat the pine beetle.

The Marseillaise.

There is a certain irony in the fact that the town which produced the "Marseillaise" is now German territory. The song dates from April 24, 1792, when Rouget de Lisle, then quartered at Strasburg as captain of engineers, composed it in response to the mayor of Strasburg's request for a patriotic song.

At Strasburg the song was printed under the title, "Chant de Guerre pour l'Armee du Rhine." It owes its present title to the volunteers from Marseilles, who sang it as they marched on Paris.

WILSON STANDS ON HIS RECORD

Josephus Daniels of Democratic National Committee Wants Voters to Make an Investigation.

WILL WIN LEGION OF FRIENDS

Slander Is Not to Play a Part in Democratic Campaign, Declares Publicity Chairman.

New York, Aug. 8.—Josephus Daniels, chairman of the publicity committee of the Democratic national committee, said today:

"Eight years ago during the presidential campaign of 1904 I came to New York and, being a member of the Democratic national committee, I dropped in at the headquarters of the committee. I found the literary bureau of the committee very actively engaged in perusing the volumes of Theodore Roosevelt. When I saw on every desk 'The Winning of the West,' 'The Life of Thomas H. Benton' and a half dozen others of the works of the then Republican nominee for president, I wondered whether or not I had gotten into the right place.

"I was immediately set aright, however, when I was informed that the literary young men were engaged in culling from those books some of the many denunciations and bitter criticisms and attacks made by Theodore Roosevelt upon public men and measures, and his aspersions upon great representative bodies of our people, such as workingmen and farmers.

"I found them preparing to send forth broadcast all over the land such excerpts from the writings of Theodore Roosevelt as:

"'Cowboys are much better fellows and pleasanter companions than small farmers or agricultural laborers; nor are the mechanics and workmen of a great city to be mentioned in the same breath.'

"'Mr. Bryan and his adherents have appealed to the basest set in the land—the farmers.'

"'They (workingmen who object to government by injunction) are not in sympathy with men of good minds and sound civic morality.'

"They quoted from what he said about the Quakers, that those who would not fight were traitors to their country.

"They said that when the farmers and workmen and the Quakers came to know what Theodore Roosevelt had written about them they would rise up with wrath and indignation and bury Theodore Roosevelt beneath an avalanche of votes. They said that Roosevelt would not answer that exposure of his views, and, of course, he never did. I agreed with them that it was the proper thing to do to herald these utterances through the country.

"As to whether or not that sort of campaigning had any effect, the result of the campaign eight years ago speaks for itself.

"The Republican party is attempting to do today the same sort of thing that the Democrats tried in 1908. The Democrats out-Rodenberged Mr. Rodenberg. They were eight years ahead of him in this sort of thing. It didn't work with us then and it will not work with them now.

Stands on Record.

"The attempt to attack Gov. Wilson because of certain statements which he made in writing history and in commenting upon events of history as they appeared to him as historian, will fall signally. As one great metropolitan newspaper pointed out, Mr. Rodenberg and his kind are simply 'Blowing against the wind.' Governor Wilson is running for president on his record as a public man, and with that record the public is fairly well conversant, and it will continue to learn more as the campaign progresses.

"He is running for president on his record as governor of New Jersey, what he said and did in that capacity, rather than what he wrote as a historian, chronicling events and commenting upon them as they appeared to an impartial observer whose duty it is to write of things as they are rather than as they should be or as he would have them.

"Our Republican brethren are entitled to all the thunder they can make out of Governor Wilson's writings. I hope they will read them carefully and thoroughly. They will be able to gain a great deal of valuable information and when the context is read along with the excerpts which have been taken from his works for the purpose of placing him in a false light, I have no fear as to the results. All that is needed is a thorough understanding.

"Ingersoll sought to disprove Bible truths and to assail Holy Writ by the same methods which the Republicans are seeking to assail Gov. Wilson."

SENATOR GORE OF OKLAHOMA:

"The closing sentence of his speech will become the battle hymn of Democracy in the pending campaign: 'I thank God and take courage.' It is at once a paean of praise and is a summon to patriotic duty."

Fellow Feeling.

An advertising man of Cleveland was going home one night in a street car. It was late and the man who sat next to him began to talk.

"What business are you in?" he asked.

"The advertising business."

"Is that so? I used to be in the advertising business myself. Quit it, though, and went into the rag and old bottle business; got a horse and clean up my sixty every month."

There seemed to be nothing for the advertising man to say, so he said it.

"Yes," continued the talkative man, "I was in the advertising business—was a sandwich man for a clothing store for six months! Say," and he leaned over, confidentially, "ain't it hard work when the wind blows?"—Saturday Evening Post.

Mirage Easy to Be Seen.

The celebrated Fata Morgana, a presentation of natural "moving pictures" on an immense scale which is occassionally seen in the Straits of Messina, is explained by a scientific writer as being a mirage, such as frequently occurs in various parts of the world; "in fact," he says, "one may see a mirage any day by looking through the stratum of air overlying a hot stove, or adjacent to the side of a wall heated in the sunshine." Young scientists will be interested in verifying this statement.

MICHIGAN HIT BY BIG STORM

Berrien County Deluged by a Disastrous Cloudburst.

$1,000,000 DAMAGE WROUGHT

Streams Swollen Beyond Their Banks, Washing Crops Away—Big Plants Put Out of Commission—Lightning Kills.

Niles, Mich., Aug. 20.—Berrien county, which includes St. Joseph and Benton Harbor, was swept by the worst storm in its history. Fourteen inches of rain fell in less than twenty-three hours. Streams swollen beyond their banks overflowed hundreds of acres of growing fields, dams were swept away and bridges torn from their piers. Loss of life is reported. The damage for the whole county is estimated at not less than $1,000,000.

The rain came in blinding floods as if a great reservoir in the skies had suddenly been opened and it was accompanied by a terrifying electrical display.

Two Killed by Lightning.

In this city the loss will total $200,000. Two farmers, Herman Villwack and Otto Feather, living three miles north of here, were in a barn when it was struck by lightning, and were instantly killed.

Traffic on the Michigan Central railroad was stopped. A drainage creek in the company's yards in this city burst its banks, tore out the tracks and turned the right of way into bed of a torrent. In the afternoon the tracks of this railroad for three miles east and west of Niles were crowded with stalled trains.

One thousand feet of track was washed away and an army of 500 section men recruited from points along the Michigan Central for 200 miles in each direction was at work repairing the damage.

Big Plants Damaged.

The plant of the National Leather Manufacturing company, owned by Swift & Co. of Chicago, was badly damaged by water from the Michigan Central drainage creek. The basements were filled and the water rose to a height of eighteen feet above the first floor.

The dam of the Central Flour Milling company was washed out, and the flood, thus let loose, tearing down Dowagiac creek, uprooter the piers of the highway bridge and carried the structure away. The farm of Henry Davis, a big celery grower, was buried four feet deep in sand.

The Niles water dam, owned by the city, was threatened. Part of the Chapin paper mill was washed away. The water in the St. Joseph river was rising at the rate of four feet an hour. Street car service in the city was suspended owing to the destruction of bridges, until late in the afternoon.

Auto Party Struck by Lightning.

Charles W. Hushower, a railroad official from South Bend, was driving near here in an automobile with three expert linemen when the entire party was struck by lightning. Hushower and the three linemen were severely injured and rendered unconscious.

Abraham Harrod of Niles was also struck by lightning and rendered unconscious while he was driving his machine on the highway on the road to South Bend.

Interurban street car service between Niles and St. Joseph and other towns was entirely stopped. Great damage has been done to telephone and telegraph wires.

Big Damage to Crops.

Advices from Benton Harbor and St. Joseph were to the effect that the damage to crops of all sorts had been enormous. The interurban railroad service between Benton Harbor and Dowagiac was suspended.

The peach harvesting season has just begun in Michigan. Berrien county is one of the most prolific in the state in this fruit. It is feared that thousands of dollars' worth of peaches have been destroyed just as they were ready for market.

Receiver Resigns.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 19.—The resignation of Newman Erb of New York as one of the receivers for the Pere Marquette railroad was filed with Judge A. J. Tuttle.

GRAND RAPIDS—The celebrated Powers theater building, the local home of standard drama, is to be torn down and a million dollar building erected on the site. The new building will contain 300 offices and be the home of the western Michigan public service corporations.

IONIA—The little city of Ionia is threatened with a horseshoers' strike, all Ionia journeymen horseshoers having notified their employers that they must have $18 a week and a ten-hour day. They have been getting $14.50. Their demands will probably be granted.

THIRD VETO IS SENT IN BY PRESIDENT

Judicial Appropriation Bill Is Returned Unapproved.

President Not in Favor of Abolishing Commerce Court or Limiting Civil Service Office Holders to Seven Years.

President Taft has returned to the house of representatives with a veto message the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, because of its amendments to abolish the commerce court and limit the tenure of office of civil service employes to seven years. The cabinet read and approved the president's message.

The president's veto is sure to prolong the session of congress. Some members of the house believe the bill can be passed over his veto, as were the wool and steel tariff bills. None of the leaders, however, think that would be possible in the senate.

One effect of Mr. Taft's veto of the bill is to hold up his own pay, that of every member of congress, every federal judge and every employe of the United States courts. Some leaders have proposed a plan of passing a resolution to extend all last year's appropriations to Dec. 2 and adjourn congress without passing the bill.

Flays Taft's Use of Veto Power.

When the reading of the veto was over Representative Stephens of Nebraska, Democrat, introduced a resolution for the passage of any vetoed measure by a majority vote. A two-thirds vote of both houses is required at present.

Mr. Stephens declared Mr. Taft had used the veto power more than it had been used in the first half-century of the nation's history. He added that the president of France had no veto power, and while the king of England enjoyed the privilege he "had not dared to use it" for 220 years.

On motion of Representative Johnson of South Carolina, a member of the appropriations committee, the house took up the bill to pass it over the president's veto. Two hours' debate was arranged and a vote was scheduled to be taken at the end of that time.

Condemns Congress' Action.

Mr. Taft's message was strong in its condemnation of the way congress had attached special legislation to an annual appropriation bill. The president wrote that he approved any system of promoting efficiency in the civil service and favored a civil pension system, but he could not approve any legislation to turn out of office employes who had given their best years to the government

The president defended the commerce court vigorously and wrote that opposition to it came from those who had not been in sympathy with its decisions.

RESENT PRESENCE OF KNOX

Japanese Reported Not Pleased at His Attending Obsequies.

A Japanese who is on a mission in Paris, in reply to a question by the correspondent of the New York Sun as to the truth of the statement that the visit of Mr. Knox, the American secretary of state, to Japan to attend the mikado's funeral was resented in that country, said:

"Mr. Knox's presence in Japan is viewed by the Japanese, the highest and lowest alike, as in gross bad taste. Evidently the Japanese foreign office is unable to say so, as courtesy is a primordial factor in my country. Nevertheless, we Japanase who will welcome him at the mikado's funeral will feel that he is in our country on business, that he is working his dollar doctrine. We regard the mikado with veneration and the presence of any business element at the coming sacred rite is to us an impertinence. He may assure us of America's friendship, but we do not need to be taught what we well know."

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

LANSING—Secretary of State Frederick C. Martindale says that he has received a number of communications from persons interested in the Roosevelt movement who are of the opinion that they can split their ticket at the primary. Secretary Martindale says if a voter who is a member of any of the old political parties desires to vote for a candidate on the Bull Moose ticket he may do so at the primaries by renouncing the old party and enrolling as a member of the new party. This, of course, applies only to the primaries, and inasmuch as there are but few contests in the Bull Moose ranks, it is not expected that the primary vote of the new party will be exceedingly heavy. It is thought that there are some Republicans who will vote at the primary election who may be counted on to support Roosevelt in the election, but it is not thought that a majority of the Roosevelt Republicans will cut away by enrolling as members of the new party.

HIGH OFFICIALS ARE HIT IN LAND PROBE

Florida Everglades Drainage Project Inquiry Ends.

Secretary of Agriculture Wilson's Department Blamed for Vacillation and Waste of Money—Two Reports In.

Investigation of the agricultural department's connection with the Florida Everglades drainage project ended when the house of representatives' committee on expenditures in the department of agriculture submitted to the house its findings in majority and minority reports.

Calls Department Vacillating.

The committee conclusions are:

The majority report called the department vacillating and lacking conception of the vast investment of millions of dollars in undertaking the reclamation of the Everglades, said it constantly subordinated the inquiry to other work in which members of congress were particularly interested and finally abandoned it after an expenditure of $11,107 without definite results. Its accounting system deficient and its discipline lacking. The minority upheld the department.

Secretary Wilson—Falsely credited with authorship of the circular letter to which real estate promoters first objected because of its cautionary nature. Promptly suppressed it and refused publication of revised bulletin excerpts as a report on the Everglades. Minority reported that he did not abuse his legal discretion.

Majority Scores Hays.

Assistant Secretary Hays — Arraigned by majority. Minority called the criticism of Hays unfair and unwarranted; that his interest in the possible sale of North Carolina lake bed to Leigh Hunt and others was due to his well-known public interest in the developments of community country life.

Drainage Engineer Wright—Majority said he "accepted fees and commissions whenever offered." Minority reported that no evidence was established that any financial statement indicating great gains from the Mattamuskeet, N. C., project were exhibited by Wright to Hays. Financial statement reaching committee was "faulty and ridiculous and would have discredited the scheme at once."

Dr. C. G. Elliott, Chief of Drainage, and Assistant Drainage Engineer Moorehouse—Majority report stated that they admitted making an arrangement which was regarded as a violation of the law and of sound public policy and that there was no profit intended in it and the department had disciplined them too severely. The minority agreed as to the over-disciplining, but added that the committee had no oversight of the department's discipline, and that if such oversight were a fixed institution the secretaries of agriculture and their subordinates would become abject slaves to "red tape."

Blames Those Higher Up.

"It is useless," the majority added, "to frame regulations for the government of employes, many of whom work for low salaries, and permit those in high position to despise all restraint. This is particularly true when the offense is to capitalize official position and collect dividends from official opportunity. Your committee has no authority to deal further with this matter. It calls the particular attention of Secretary Wilson to the record."

HOLLAND—Andrew Hayden, who is thirty-seven years of age, was probably fatally injured when he was run over by a heavy log truck. He was driving the truck across the road when he struck a ditch obscured by weeds. The horses gave a lurch, throwing Hayden under the truck. Two wheels passed over his

WOMAN ELECTROCUTED

Negress Dies in the Electric Chair in Virginia.

At Richmond, Va., Friday, Virginia Christian, a negress and the first woman to be put to death in the electric chair in Virginia, was executed early in the day. Governor Mann refused to yield to numerous entreaties for clemency.

Virginia Christian was convicted of a deliberate and atrociously cruel murder. She slew and robbed her employer, Mrs. Ida Virginia Belote, at Hampton, March 18, 1912.

The National Association of Colored Women, in session a few days ago at Hampton, Va., petitioned the governor for clemency.

Hundreds of letters and petitions asking commutation had been received by Governor Mann in the last few weeks. All, the governor said, were sentimental and none contained facts relative to the crime. He refused to commute the sentence.

SPOTTED FEVER KILLS FOE

Passed Assistant Surgeon McClintic Dies of Disease He Fought.

At Washington, D. C., Passed Assistant Surgeon T. B. McClintic of the United States public health and marine hospital service died during the night of Rocky mountain "spotted fever," a martyr to the cause of medical science.

One of the foremost specialists in this deadly malady, which he virtually had eradicated from the Bitter Root valley in Montana, it was the irony of fate that Dr. McClintic should succumb to the disease.

READY TO MARRY LOVER

Shiawassee Girl Forgives His Attempt to Murder Her.

Corunna, Mich., Aug. 17. — Martin Halik, the Bohemian who shot and slightly wounded his sweetheart, Agnesa Ribnikas, near New Lothrop several weeks ago and then shot himself, and who is awaiting trial on a charge of attempted murder, has received several letters of late from the girl.

She says he has proven his love for her and that she will marry him when he regains his liberty.

LAUNCH BURNS; BOYS SWIM

Two Have Thrilling Experience on Macatawa Bay.

Holland, Mich., Aug. 16.—Clarence Colt of Grand Rapids and Willis Feris of Galesburg, Ill., narrowly escaped cremation when their launch, Mary Ellen, caught fire and was burned to the water's edge on Macatawa bay.

The boys remained on the burning craft until they saw no chance of saving it, then jumped and swam ashore. The cause of the fire is unknown.

KALAMAZOO—After being overcome by vertigo while attempting to arise from her bed, Miss Mary Burtt, ninety years old, fell, sustaining injuries which may prove fatal. Her hip and wrist were broken and owing to her advanced age attending physicians have little hope of her recovery.

ITHACA — After making an examination into the mental condition of Miss Linnie Udell, daughter of Albert E. Udell, physicians and the judge of probate have recommended that she be taken to the psycopathic hospital in Ann Arbor for treatment. The case is a sad one. Miss Udell who is a graduate of the Indianapolis Conservatory of Music and has been teaching in that institution, had been appointed a member of the faculty of Alma college, where she expected to take up her duties this year. Her mind has broken down under the strain of mental overwork. Hopes of her ultimate recovery are entertained.

NINETEEN DIE IN MINE

Explosion Occurs in Large Colliery in Alabama.

At Abernant, Ala., nineteen known negro miners were killed by an explosion in the Abernant Coal company's large mine. Forty-six white men and eighteen negroes got safely out of the workings after the blast. Seventeen bodies have been recovered.

The explosion occurred in entry No. 15, 1,200 feet from the surface. The majority of the workmen were engaged on a lower level, which prevented greater loss of life.

It was difficult to get assistance after the explosion, as recent storms have torn down all telegraph and telephone wires. Horsemen rushed to nearby mining camps summoning aid. One horseman got into communication with Birmingham, twenty-five miles away, to get State Mine Inspector C. H. Nesbitt, who arrived here late in the afternoon.

DARROW IS ACQUITTED

Touching Scene in Court as the Chicago Lawyer Is Freed.

At Los Angeles, Cal., Clarence S. Darrow of Chicago was acquitted of the charge of bribing a juror in the trial of James B. McNamara. The jury was out only a few minutes.

The courtroom scene which followed the reading of the verdict was one that has had no parallel in this city.

Jurors embraced the acquitted man and with tears streaming down their cheeks declared it was the happiest day of their lives. Court officials, including Judge Hutton and the half-dozen bailiffs, joined in the congratulations and Mrs. Darrow, to whom the trial was a continuous nervous strain, stood speechlessly happy with one hand in her husband's and the other wringing those of the jurors.

ONE NEW BATTLESHIP

Conferees on Navy Bill Reach Compromise, with $15,000,000 as Limit.

The conferees at Washington on the naval appropriation bill agreed to provide for one battleship at a cost not greater than $15,000,000. An appropriation of $2,535,000 is to be available for the beginning of the work. No agreement was reached as to size, dimensions or armament.

The naval bill in other respects, was adopted as approved by the previous conference, and is now acceptable to house and senate.

President Signs Pension Bill.

President Taft signed the $160,000,000 pension appropriation bill and thousands of veterans and their dependents, who have been virtually without their usual government aid for many weeks, will cash their checks.

Poultry Men Make Plans.

Sullivan, Ind., Aug. 19.—The Sullivan county poultry association, in session here, decided to hold their annual poultry show Jan. 6 to 11. T. M. Campbell of Darlington was selected as judge.

MONROE—Judge Golden has just issued a temporary injunction restraining the paving of Second street as ordered by the council saying that later he would hear the case upon its merits so that an appeal to the supreme court may be taken if either side desires. The street has already been torn up for three-quarters of its length.

MACKINAW CITY—Floyd Stevens, a young man whose home is in La Grange, Ind., and who was here with a show, lost his life while in bathing. The young man was in water only about four feet deep, and it is thought death was due to an attack of heart failure, as it is said he had heart disease.

JACOB G. SCHURMAN

Confirmed by Senate as Minister to Greece.

WASHINGTON—The U. S. senate confirmed the nomination of Jacob Gould Schurman, president of Cornell university, to be minister to Greece.

Favorable action was taken on the nominations of Clarence R. Edwards to be a brigadier general of the line; Frank McIntyre, to be chief of the insular bureau; Colonel George F. Andrews to be adjutant general of the army, and Colonel E. Z. Steever to be brigadier general.

CLASH OVER MILITARY ORDER

Governor Osborn Refuses to Obey Command of General Hoyt.

Ludington, Mich., Aug. 21.—According to a story which gained currency through the camp of the Michigan national guard, Governor Osborn and General Ralph Hoyt of the United States regulars, who is nominally in command of the instruction camp, clashed over the question of who is commander in chief of the state troops.

It was brought about, so the story runs, by the issuance by General Hoyt of an order to Governor Osborn which was in the nature of a command. The governor did not obey Hoyt's order.

DETROIT GRAFT CASES

Council Leader Glinnan First of the Aldermen to Be Heard.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 21.—Thomas E. Glinnan, councilmanic leader, who with seventeen other aldermen is charged with having accepted or having agreed to accept bribe money in return for closing a city street for the benefit of the Wabash railroad, appeared before Justice Christopher Stein for examination in police court

The cases of several of the other accused aldermen are expected to be heard immediately after that of Glinnan, while others of the eighteen cases were put over until Aug. 30.

3 KILLED AT CROSSING

Interurban Car Hits a Farmer's wagon Near Wyandotte, Mich.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 20.—Three men were reported killed when a Detroit-bound interurban car, coming from Toledo, struck a farmer's wagon. A fourth man escaped. The accident occurred near Wyandotte. News of the tragedy was brought to Detroit by one of the passengers on the interurban. The men are believed to have been farmers returning from a dance.

The victims were: Louis Frank, twenty-one; Lewis Hintz, twenty-seven, Wyandotte; August Maurice, thirty-four, Ecorse. The fourth man vanished.

NOTED HYMN WRITER DEAD

William G. Fischer Succumbs After Brief Illness in Philadelphia.

At Philadelphia, Pa., William Gustavus Fischer, known throughout the world wherever the Christian religion is to be found, died at his home, 209 North Thirty-Sixth street, after a brief illness.

The best known of Mr. Fischer's hymns are "I Love to Tell the Story," "Whiter Than Snow" and "A Little Talk With Jesus."

WIPES OUT COMMERCE COURT

Senate Repasses the Measure Vetoed by President Taft.

After a spirited debate the senate repassed the vetoed legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, still carrying a provision to abolish the commerce court. A majority of the appropriations committee reported the bill with provision for the retention of the court, and when this was eliminated Mr. Taft's friends predicted that the bill again would be vetoed.

Senator Overman's substitute containing a provision to abolish the court was adopted, 35 to 23. The Republicans who voted with the Democrats to pass it were: Senator Borah, Bourne, Bristow, Clapp, Crawford, Cummins, Heyburn, LaFollette, Nelson, Poindexter and Works.

SAGINAW—Several hundred families in this vicinity went without their regular milk supply, the result of a destructive fire which wiped out the Riverside dairy, one of the most complete of its kind in Michigan. The fire started shortly after 2 o'clock and with no means of fighting the flames, all the buildings, forty-six cows and ten horses were consumed, entailing a loss of $25,000, which is partly covered by insurance.

PETOSKEY—Seven United States government ships belonging to the great lakes fleet entered Little Traverse and anchored near Harbor Springs. They are the Don Juan de Austria, Essex, Wolverine, Dubuque, Gopher, Dorothea and Yantic, bound from Manitou islands to Chicago. Admiral Andrews of the United States navy, met them here, having come from Washington to inspect the fleet.

A SAFE, SANE, BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION FOR ALL MICHIGAN.
Common Sense, Energy and Integrity—These Are What the People Want.
Good Men Must Be Chosen at the Primaries.

TO THE VOTERS OF MICHIGAN.

I am a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor at the primaries, August 27th.

In my judgment, there can be no better training or experience for efficient service in the Executive Office of the State, than that acquired in active business life and in meeting and solving the problems that come before those who develop and build up the community and State. It is upon such a record rather than upon an officeholding career in Lansing, that my candidacy is based.

My fellow citizens, if you believe in the need of a business administration of the State's affairs, give me your active support on Primary Day, August 27th.

Very respectfully yours,
AMOS S. MUSSELMAN.

Moved and supported that report of the Finance committee be accepted and orders directed drawn for several amonnts.
Motion carried.

Mr. Edward Lowry was present and requested that Lowry & Son be granted permission to install a gasoline tank in the street in front of their store

Moved and supported that the request of Lowry & Son be granted.
Motion carried.

The following resolution was offered:

Resolved, that the Common Council of the Village of Tecumseh does hereby require that a new sidewalk be constructed along that portion of the east line of Maumee street in this village which lies along and adjoining the west line of that parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee County and State of Michigan, and described as follows:

North ½ Lots 22 & 33, Original plat.

Said walk to be 4 feet in width, on the established grade, of Portland cement, sand and gravel.

The trench shall be excavated to a depth of 10 inches at least below the established grade except for driveways and street crossings when the depth shall be at least 12 inches below the established grade.

The foundation shall consist of clean cinders or gravel entirely from clay, thoroughly rammed to a thickness of at least 6 inches, except for driveway and street crossings which shall be at least 8 inches.

On the foundation shall be laid a concrete filling, throroughly rammed to a thickness of 3 inches.

The concrete shall consist of not less than one part cement to six parts of clean, sharp sand or gravel.

On the concrete filling shall be laid a finishing layer one inch thick, consisting of one part cement and two parts of very clean, sharp sand. The said finishing layer shall in all cases be finished with a granular surface with a wooden float.

To secure a true line for the edges of the walk, 2x4 strips shall be solidly staked down parallel to grade and on the true line of the walk, these strips to be removed when the walk is finished for use.

The concrete filling shall be tamped thoroughly till the water comes to the surface, then the finishing layer shall be immediately spread on in thin coats thoroughly rammed into the concrete, each coat being trowled until the water appears on the surface, the top surface being only trowled sufficiently to leave it smooth.

The foundation shall be thoroughly wet while being rammed.

The joints for the blocks shall be made in the concrete and then in the finishing layer directly above those in the concrete.

Only Portland cement shall be used in the construction of walks and shall be in every respect the equal of the best grades of German Portland cement. The concrete filling shall be made from the same cement as the finishing layer.

And the owners and occupants of said lots and premises are hereby required to do the necessary grading therefor and to construct said side walk according to the provisions of this resolution, under the supervision of the street commissioner, said walk to be completed within 10 days from personal service, upon the owner or occupant of said described land, of a copy of this resolution, and in case of any default in the construction and completion of said walk, as herein directed, the street commissioner is hereby ordered to have said walk constructed, and payment therefore shall be required of the owner of said above described land, and the expense thereof assessed and levied upon said land in the same manner as other taxes.

Moved and supported that resolution be accepted and adopted.

Ayes: Service, Elliott, Dalsher.
Nayes: none. Motion carried.

The following resolution was offered:

Resolved, That the Common Council of the Village of Tecumseh does hereby require that a new sidewalk be constructed along that portion of the south line of Logan street in this village which lies along and adjoining the north line of that parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee County and State of Michigan, and described as follows:

Bounded north by Logan street, east by Wood and Garlinghouse lots, South by Barrett lot and west by Bidwell lot.

Said walk to be 4 feet in width, on the established grade, of Portland cement, sand and gravel.

The trench shall be excavated to a depth of 10 inches at least below the established grade except for driveways and street crossings when the depth shall be at least 12 inches below the established grade.

The foundation shall consist of clean cinders or gravel entirely free from clay, thoroughly rammed to a thickness of at least 6 inches, except for driveways and street crossings which shall be at least 8 inches.

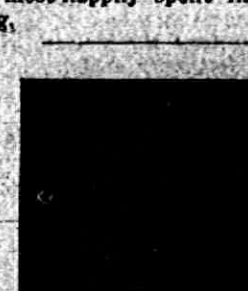
FAMILY REUNION.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Youngs was the scene of a pleasant family reunion Thursday when their children and grand children gathered together, those present from out of town were Mrs. Ben Weigert of Douglas, Mrs. Luce of Tipton, Miss Lettie Young of South Rockford, Mrs. Sarah Linton of Jackson and their children. A fine dinner was served and the day was most happily spent in social visiting,



W. H. HILL, of Detroit
Candidate for Congressman-at-large on the Progressive Ticket.

This office has just been created. Michigan is now represented by 12 congressmen and two senators, of which 12 are lawyers and only two are businessmen. Would it not be well to inject a little more business common sense and less technicalities into our laws?

I have been a manufacturer of furniture and drug specialties in Detroit for 27 years. I stand squarely on the Progressive platform adopted at Chicago.

All my opponents for this nomination are lawyers.

I will appreciate your vote and influence at the primaries of Aug. 27th.

Every elector, irrespective of former party affiliation, and irrespective of whether or not he is enrolled in any political party, who desires to support some candidate on the Progressive ticket, has the right to enroll at the Primaries Aug. 27th as a Progressive, and vote for one or all candidates on that ticket. That will not bar him from voting in the November election for any person he [illegible] whether Progressive or Republican or Democrat.

PRIMARY ELECTION

Notice is hereby given, that a General Primary election will be held in Township of Tecumseh, County of Lenawee, State of Michigan at the Council Building, within said Township on TUESDAY, AUGUST 27 A. D, 1912.

For the purpose of nominating by direct vote candidates by each of the several political parties for the following offices, viz.

NATIONAL—One canditate for United State Senator; one candidate for Representative in Congress at Large; one candidate for Representative in Congress for the Congressional district of which said precinct forms a part.

STATE—One candidate for Govenor, and one candidate for Lieutenant-Governor.

LEGISLATIVE—One candidate for Senator in the State Legislature for the Senatorial District of which voting precinct forms a part; one candidate for Representative in the State Legislature for the Representative district of which said voting precinct forms a part.

COUNTY—One condidate for each of the following County offices, viz.: Judge of Probate, Sheriff, Clerk, Treasurer, Register of Deeds, Prosecuting Attorney, Surveyor, Drain Commissioner; also two candidates for Circuit Court Commissioner. Also two candidates for Coroner.

There shall also be elected as many delegates to the county conventions of the several political parties as said precinct or ward is entitled to under the call of the county committees of said political parties, which number will be indicated by the number of blank lines printed on the official primary ballots used at said election under the heading, "Delegates to County Conventions." The Board of Primary Election Inspectors will furnish delegates with credentials, entitling them to seats in the county conventions, except that where there is more than one precinct in a ward and the county committee require the election of delegates from the ward as a whole, such delegates should be admitted without credentials Above rule also applies to all Towships in this State.

Names of candidates for delegates to county conventions will not appear on the official primary ballot, but will be written or pasted in by the voter, in the place designated on said ballot.

RELATIVE TO ENROLLMENT

The enrollment for this election was held April 1, 1912, but any qualified elector in any election precinct in this State, who failed to have his name enrolled on enrollment day by reason of sickness or unavoidable absence from the election precinct, and who is a qualified elector in said precinct on primary election day, or any person who may have become twenty-one years of age or a qualified elector after enrollment day, may have his name enrolled by the board of primary election inspectors on any primary election day upon making oath as provided in the general election law relative to the registration of electors on election days; or any person who was duly enrolled in the manner provided by law, but who has changed his residence to any election precinct, other than that in which he was enrolled, may be enrolled in the new election precinct and may vote therein: Provided, That he has resided in the election precinct in which he seeks to be enrolled for a period of twenty days and that he obtained from a member of the enrollment board of the election precinct in which he formerly resided, a certificate stating that he was duly enrolled in such precinct, and that he is entitled to enrollment in the new precinct. In the the absence of such certificate, if he can satisfy the said enrollment board of primary election inspectors upon making oath to such facts, according to the provisions of the general election law relative to registration of electors on election day, he shall be entitled to enrollment and premitted to vote following such enrollment,

All qualified electors who enrolled be request and affidavit 60 days or more previous to this Palmary Election will be entitled to vote at said election.

Section 28, Primary Law, provides that any enrolled voter may re-enroll on any primary election day as a member of a NEW POLITICAL PARTY, and all qualified electors not enrolled with any politcal party may be enrolled on any primary election day as a member of a new political party,

The Polls of said Election will be open at 7 o'clock A. M. and will remain open until 5 o'clock P. M. of said day Election, unless the Board of Election Inspectors shall in their discretion adjourn the polls at 12 o'clock noon, for one hour.

Dated this 12th day of August, A. D. 1912.

Guy E. Nemire,
Township Clerk.

Deering Corn Binder

Why you should buy this machine in preference to all others.

1 It does not elev the corn, therefore the draft is lighter.
2 Has a tieing range of 21 in., 13 in. more than others.
3 Both wheels are the same height therefore it draws like a cart.
4 Has a bundle carrier like a grain binder, practically no neck weight or side lash, leaves the bundle away from the third horse.
5 Has the correct width so neither wheels run on the stubble,
6 The only binder with both roller and ball bearings,
7 Every binder carries SERVICE INSURANCE which is worth money to you in case of breakages, delivery, quick repairs, etc.

THE PICNIC SEASON

The M. E Sunday School held their picnic at the Globe mill grove Tuesday. Owing to the doubtful weather there was not a large attendance, but those who did attend had a very pleasant outing. The children especially whom are seldom daunted by weather conditions, enjoyed themselves to the fullest extent.

Research Circle

The ladies of the Research Circle held their annual picnic at Adams park on Wednesday afternoon. A short business meeting to plan for the coming year, was called at 2:30 following this a fine picnic supper was served, and a most delightful social hour was spent until the shades of night warned the merry crowd that they must part.

Presbyterian Sunday School Picnic

The members of the Presbyterian Sunday School held their picnic in Adams park Thursday afternoon with a large attendance. A bountiful picnic dinner was first upon the program every one taking a lively part. Later several stunts were called, among them a bag race, a three legged race, a fat woman's race, and a girl's race. A ball game between the women and men, was called off on account of the shower that put an end to all further festivities, sending the crowd home in haste. The elements contrived with the efforts of Forty Zimmeaman who over flowed the stand pipe, forgot this was a Presbyterian picnic and tried to turn it into a Baptist one.

CIVIC IMPROVEMENT

The Town and Civic Improvement Society met at the home of Mrs. G. S. Tiffany Tuesday afternoon, and several items of business were disposed of. It was decided to place a fountain in Adams park, and to also erect a band stand. An opening meeting is talked of for the near future when a band concert will be one of the leading features

The ladies are doing a good work in beautifying the park, and already the various picnics that have been held there, prove that the public appreciate their efforts.

Death of Col. Saviers

A letter just received by H, W, Stevens from his daughter, Mrs. Geo, Chapman of Muskegon, announces the death of Col. Lemuel C. Saviers, a former resident of Tecumseh, at his home in St. Louis, Mich. The funeral was held Wednesday, August 21.

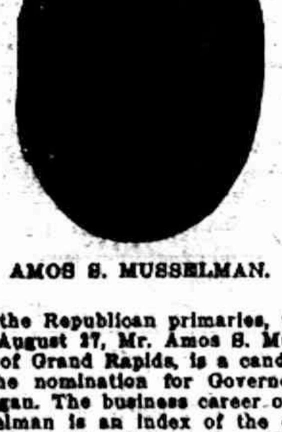
Col. Saviers will be remembered by many of the older residents of Tecumseh. At one time he was a teacher in our high school and later was post master for a number of years. He was a veteran of the Civil War.

His wife was formerly Miss Carrie Bills, a daughter of the Hon. Perley Bills of Tecumseh. No particulars of his death have been received.

PICK GOOD MEN AT PRIMARIES

We Should Have a Sound Business Administration for All Michigan.

An administration conducted along the lines which insure success to any commercial undertaking which has merit of its own, is the only sort of government good for city, state or nation. It is highly important that men of good business ability be selected as our public servants. The approaching primaries are the places in which to pick out such men.



AMOS S. MUSSELMAN.

At the Republican primaries, to be held August 27, Mr. Amos S. Musselman, of Grand Rapids, is a candidate for the nomination for Governor of Michigan. The business career of Mr. Musselman is an index of the qualities he would bring to the office if elected. He is a thorough business man and his training has been such as to eminently fit him to meet and solve the problems of State development and upbuilding.

The business of governing a State differs from that of governing a commercial concern in degree, and not in kind. It is a larger charge. Sound common sense, sound business principles, no favoritism, are what the people want in their Governor.

WHY IT SUCCEEDS

Because It's for One Thing Only and Tecumseh People Appreciate This.

Nothing can be good for everything. Doing one thing well brings success. Doan's Kidney Pills do one thing only,

They help sick kidneys.

They relieve backache, kidney and bladder trouble.

Here is Tecumseh evidence to prove it.

Mrs. Sarah E. Austin, Pearl St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have had no need of Doan's Kidney Pills or any other kidney medicine since 1908. I can still recommend this preparation highly. I suffered from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint for more than a year and when someone told me that Doan's Kidney Pills were effective in cases of this kind, I obtained a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They help me immediately and I continued their use until I was well."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agent for the United States.

Remmber the name—Doan's—and take no other.

"I'm tired of laying eggs," complained the hen. "And I'm tired of lying about them," chimed in the dealer in the coldstorage product.

Hay fever and asthma make August a month of intense suffering to many people. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound gives prompt ease and relief, and is soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes. Wm. M. Merethew, N. Searsport, Me., says: "A few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound relieved me of a severe attack of asthma and less than a bottle caused a complete cure." Refuse suqstitutes. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

So old is earth, could she

'Twould take night's candles all
To deck her birthday cake.

THE TRIALS OF A TRAVELER

"I am a traveling salesman," writes E. E. Youngs, E, Berkshire. Vt, "and was often troubled with constipation and indigestion till I began to use Dr. Kings New Life Pills, which I have founp an excellent remedy." For all stomach, liver or kidney troubles they are unequaled. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

It is said "most women have five senses. Some have common sense and a sense of humor, how many have you?

Dr. C. H. Ellsworth, Dentist, 16 Baldwin St., Rochester, N. Y., says Foley Kidney Pills gave him immediate relief and strengthened him wonderfully. "I have been bothered with weak kidneys and bladder trouble and suffered much pain. Foley Kidney Pills gave me immediate relief and strengthened me wonderfully. I am pleased to recommend their use." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Robert W. Herter, Lawrenceville, Mo, who had been bothered with kidney trouble for two years, says. "I tried three different kinds of kidney pills but with no relief. My neighbor told to use Foley Kidney Pills, I took three bottles of them, and got a permanent cure. I recommend them to everybody." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh,

WILLIAM H. BIDDLE

Leaves have their time to fall,
And flowers to wither at the north
wind's breath,
And stars to set, but all,
Thou hast all seasons for thine, Oh death.

William H. Biddle was born in Northumberland County, Pa., Jan. 24, 1840.

At two years of age, he with his parents came to Michigan settling on a farm in Saline township. In 1875 he was married to Sarah L. Camburn.

To this home three children came, one daughter and two sons all of whom with their mother survive. In early manhood he found the "One Friend" above all others and has since lived a consistent Christian life. His life was a busy one, until the last few years, yet he found time for doing many deeds of kindness.

Six years ago he was stricken with disease, from which he never fully recovered. During that time he showed great patience and fortitude never complaining, but saying "all is right."

His last illness was of short duration lasting a little more than two weeks. He passed to the Heavenly home on Monday night, August 12, 1912. He was a kind and loving husband and father, and will be greatly missed by those among whom he lived.

Suddenly into the brightness,
Out of a shadewod day,
Suddenly into the fadeless dawn
Went this soul away.

A sudden dropping of burdens,
A sudden prayer, and sigh,
A sudden hush of a dear, dear, voice
A sudden song on high.
Standing so close to the portals,
One word, one low sweet come
Suddenly he was absent,
Absent, because at home.

CARD OF THANKS.

The Love Feud

By IZOLA FORRESTER

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Nan tightened the rein slightly, and Gypsy Belle paused. It was almost dark along the old mountain road. Over on the rail fence to the left had come a drawled hail for her to halt, and the click of a trigger pulled back.

"That you, Griff Taller?" called Nan, cheerfully. "What you doing there this time of night stopping folks on their way home?"

A laugh came from the gloom of the railing.

"I'm just squirrel hunting, Sis."

"Don't you call me Sis. You ain't so well acquainted as that. Do you call the schoolma'am down at the Bend Sis?"

"Bill does."

"Talking some, ain't you, Griff?"

"I'm going to do more'n talk tonight."

"If he don't get you first." Tauntingly.

"He won't get me first. He's had a taste by now already."

Nan's voice caught a little in her throat, but she was not afraid.

"I suppose there are Tallers sitting on fence rails all over Mount Scratchum tonight waiting for a shot at Bill Ames. Why don't you come out in the open road and fight like a man? You all up here have got so used to fighting Indians back awhile, you've forgotten how to face a white man, ain't you? You'll sit up there and shoot at Bill if he comes riding by here, and then go down to Potter's store, and boast of how you fought Bill Ames. You can't fight anyone man size. Guess all you can do is lick your little brothers, and give Molly Ann a clip side of her head now and then."

"I'll give you a clip some day, Smarty," said Griff, slowly. "You've got too much red pepper in that tongue of yours."

"You'll give me a clip some day?" Nan leaned back her head and laughed. "Why, you old, stingy, rail fighter, I wouldn't look at your shadow."

"Your pop signed papers for you today, just the same. You ain't of age yet, honey, so we settled it up between us. That's why I ain't going to have Bill Ames riding this road any more. He ain't got straight intentions anyhow. He's just a trifler. He's putting up one evening at the schoolma'am's, and the next up at your place, and boasting of his irresistible attractions down at Potter's Saturday nights."

"Don't believe a word of it." Nan started Gypsy Belle up again. "Don't get a night chill sitting on that rail, Griff."

"Say," called Griff, after her, "if you meet Bill and tell him I'm waiting for him, I'll take it out on your pop, understand. And he signed papers for you to me, honest he did, Nan. And they'll hold too, in law."

But Nan answered not. Straight up the road she went at a canter. The horse knew the way in the dark, and ever since they had left the main road far below in the valley, she had let the reins hang slack, while she sang to keep herself company.

She was not singing now. Not a mile was covered before she heard scrambling and stumbling ahead on the steep rocky road. Nobody lived higher up on Scratchum except her father and herself, and strangers never came that way. Nobody haunted the roads of Scratchum unless he was predestined to live there by landing on the county records before he had a chance to call his life his own.

Checking the mare, she drew to one side of the road. Lumbering down the road came Bill Ames on his white horse, head down, wheezing at every step. Bill stopped and slipped off the saddle with a smothered curse, as the horse crashed down on its shoulder heavily.

"What did you ride him so hard for?" called out Nan. "He'll just give one good wheeze, now, and pass over."

Bill had started back at the sound of a voice so near him, but laughed as he recognized the owner.

"Better loan me Gypsy Belle to go along on, Nan. I certainly need her tonight."

"What for?" Nan's tone was full of innocent inquiry.

The youngster tried to pull his wits together. His brain was full of bursting lights and shooting agony. Somewhere in the muscles around his collar bone lay a Taller bullet. Another had clipped a trail down his back, and his ear stung as if a hornet had landed on it.

"There's sport on Scratchum tonight, Nan," he said, clumsily. "The Tallers are all out 'coon hunting."

"Don't go any further, Bill. Come along home with me."

"Why?" he retorted. "Do you care, Nan? Honest, do you care?"

"Don't touch me, Billie." She shrank back against the warm side of Gypsy Belle. "I can't care for anybody. I'm just old Nate Whippley's girl. Pop's promised me, and given papers on it, too."

"Promised you to who?"

"Griff Taller. Oh, Billie, don't."

His strong arms held her to him closely. Pressing one cheek against her thick braids of fair hair, he forgot all the Taller tribe, and their ways of ambush.

"What do you care for the old man, or any of that lot down in the valley, Nan, honestly?" he whispered. "We don't have to live here on old Scratchum the rest of our natural days. I can get work in any sawmill in the Cumberlands. Come along with me, and—"

Nan's fingers stole tenderly to his curly hair, stroking it back from his face, and then down to his coat, and stopped. There was a withered rose in the buttonhole of the lapel.

"Who gave you that rose, Billie?"

Bill, unused to the ways of the sex, told the simple truth.

"Got it this afternoon down at Rocky Bend."

"Schoolma'am gave it to you, didn't she? Don't you want another one on the other side from me, so you can show them both down at Potter's store Saturday night?"

Her hand came across his ears in a swift box, and Bill stood back.

"Nan, listen—"

"No, I won't listen to none of your lies, Billie. You jest get down that road, and take your medicine. I reckon it's coming to you when you ain't got any better sense than to come to me and talk a sweet streak, with that girl's rose still sticking in your buttonhole."

A voice came clearly out of the laurel thicket above her head.

"I'll try to hit it the first time, Nan."

"I'll try to hit it the first time, Nan."

There was a blinding flare, a puff of smoke, and Bill tried to push the girl behind him. His shoulder was filled with pain like red hot live wires, but he leveled his gun and fired up at the green laurel. Back came the swift answer, but not so surely. Bill wondered why there was the roar of surging waters in his ears like the Upper Bend in a spring freshet, why he could not see to aim, why Nan kept standing there beside him instead of beating to cover.

He fell forward at her feet, and Nan, her face dead white, lips drawn back from her pretty white teeth, seized his rifle, and lifted it to her own shoulder.

"You clear out of that laurel thicket, Griff Taller," she called. "I'm doing it this time, and I'll get you, too."

Bill's gun sang merrily until Griff yelled for quarter. His face showed faintly in the gloom as he peered out at her.

"I called quits, didn't I? Stop your shooting."

"Take back what you said about Billie and the schoolma'am, and give me that paper pop signed," ordered Nan, calmly.

Griff hesitated, looked at her again, and dug for the paper. He tossed it down at her feet as she held him covered.

"Take it. I wouldn't marry you now anyhow, you little wildcat. And it looks like he wouldn't neither. He's dead, ain't he?"

"I don't care whether he's dead or not," Nan cried back, passionately. "I won't be anybody else's, I know that."

She stood motionless as Griff rode away. He was hurt, she guessed rightly, and a great gladness swept down over her. She had fought like one of the pioneer women, shoulder to shoulder with her mate. Now she knelt beside him, and felt for his heart to see if it was beating.

The mare lowered her head and whinnied anxiously.

"It's all right, Gypsy Belle," Nan told her, the quick sobs coming at last thick and fast. "Billie, can't you hear me one bit?" She lifted his head on her shoulder, smoothing back his rough curly hair tenderly, pressing her face to his. "Billie, I've got the paper away from him. He can't hold dad one bit now. And I'll go up into the Cumberland with you, dear. Ah, Billie, can't you hear me?"

Her voice broke in a low sob, and she bowed her face on his breast. Somewhere out of the gray mist her voice reached him, and opened his eyes.

"Hush your crying, honey," he whispered. "I'm just winged a bit. We'll take the Cumberland trail next week, you and me."

"Gypsy Belle, too," Nan insisted.

"Sure. She'll carry the bride," Billie grinned feebly. Then Nan and Gypsy Belle were both silent, the mare nipping at the laurel branches, and Nan with her cheek pressed close to the well shoulder.

Mirage Easy to Be Seen.

The celebrated Fata Morgana, a presentation of natural "moving pictures" on an immense scale which is occasionally seen in the Straits of Messina, is explained by a scientific writer as being a mirage, such as frequently occurs in various parts of the world; "in fact," he says, "one may see a mirage any day by looking through the stratum of air overlying a hot stove, or adjacent to the side of a wall heated in the sunshine." Young scientists will be interested in verifying this statement.

Contrary to the usual custom among Indians, the Kaws usually wore caps on their heads made of fox, coon or wildcat skin.

PROMISES SOME SIZZLING STUFF

Roosevelt Will Write Letter to Campaign Gift Probers.

HE WON'T APPEAR IN PERSON

Will Send to Senator Clapp of the Committee a Full Statement of Some Things to Which He Would Have Testified, He Says.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Instead of appearing in person before the campaign contribution committee of the senate, Colonel Roosevelt will content himself with addressing to that body a long letter replying officially to the accusations made by Senator Penrose and John D. Archbold of the Standard Oil company.

Colonel Roosevelt received no direct answer to the telegram which he sent asking the privilege of testifying on Monday. He had heard, however, that it would be impossible to get the committee together in time to hear the colonel today.

"I feel that the committee ought not to have gone away and let Archbold go to Europe without taking any of his testimony on the really grave charges and then fail to let me appear immediately, knowing, as the committee must know, what my later engagements are," Roosevelt said.

Colonel's Claims.

That such a course had been followed was due, the colonel asserted, to the fact that an investigation had been started which its promoters did not dare to prosecute further.

"They pilloried me and then they got afraid," he said, flushed with anger, "but they will find that they have picked up the wrong end of the poker. I shall, however, at once write Senator Clapp a full statement of some things to which I would have testified."

Will Contain New Matter.

His letter will be begun forthwith, the colonel says. It will cover the ground already gone over in his recent statements and will contain in addition some letters not yet given out, which the ex-president says he has discovered bearing further on the relations which existed between himself and the Standard Oil company during his administration.

It is expected also to shed some light upon the financial question of the present campaign. Upon the last question the colonel was particularly insistent. "If he had gone to Washington, he said, it was his purpose to tell the committee just what his relations were with Ex-Senator William Flinn of Pennsylvania and George W. Perkins, all of which he was ready to explain. He denied he solicited Senator Penrose's support in the recent primaries.

Senator Clapp later sent a telegram to Mr. Roosevelt notifying him of his inability to get the committee together in the immediate future.

KAISER NOT HIMSELF

Suffering from Catarrh and Painful Muscular Rheumatism.

Berlin, Aug. 26.—The Kaiser is suffering from an attack of catarrh and painful muscular rheumatism.

The illness of the emperor, though in no wise alarming, is sufficiently serious to compel him to cancel a majority of his engagements for the coming week. These include the annual "Kaiser maneuvers" from which he has never been absent since his accession to the throne in 1888. Even if he did attend he could not ride a horse owing to his rheumatic pains.

GENERAL REYES INJURED

Former President of Colombia In Automobile Accident.

Tarbes, France, Aug. 26. — General Rafael Reyes, former president of Colombia, was severely injured in an automobile collision near Lourdes. His daughter had an arm broken.

General Reyes left Bogota suddenly in the early part of June, 1909, while president of that country. There had been considerable dissatisfaction with his actions while president and one of the reports when he fled was that he had taken $20,000,000 in money and a large quantity of jewelry with him.

One Cent Raise Offer Rejected.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—An increased scale of wages offered by officials of the two street car companies was turned down by the joint committee of the union employes. Hope of a final settlement of the wage dispute still is held out, however, and the subcommittee of the joint committee was instructed to return to the office of Mayor Harrison to confer further with the city executive and the presidents of the street railway companies.

NOT SUPPORTED BY LEGAL PROOF

Hearst Attacks Statements of Penrose and Archbold.

WANTS DOCUMENTS PRODUCED

Declares That Roosevelt Should Tell of Visits of Rogers and Archbold to the White House and of Sibley's Activity.

London, Aug. 26.—William R. Hearst in a signed article says that Senator Penrose is not altogether frank in his explanation of his receipt of a certificate of deposit for $25,000 from the Standard Oil.

"It is a notable fact that Senator Penrose confines his statements to allegations unsupported by legal proof. It is also worthy of note that Mr. Archbold does not produce any of the interesting documents that he has in his possession to establish the truth of his utterances. He quotes Mr. Bliss, who is no longer there to question the accuracy of his statements, and he does not produce any letters to or from Mr. Bliss or from Senator Penrose to or from Mr. Babcock or to or from Mr. Roosevelt.

Wants Proof Produced.

"Mr. Archbold's word needs documentary support. That fact has been proven heretofore and Mr. Archbold has already been confounded by the evidence of his own letters and those of his agents and confederates in political life and public plunder.

"As a matter of fact, various Republican campaign committees solicited Standard Oil money and accepted Standard Oil money and employed Standard Oil money in the campaign of 1904 and various Democrats received Standard Oil money then and later.

"Mr. Archbold has told part of the truth but not all of it. Let him tell all of it and produce the interesting documents that encumber his files.

Seeks Information from T. R.

"Mr. Roosevelt, too, should tell of the visits of Mr. Rogers and Mr. Archbold to him in Washington, of Mr. Sibley's activity in bringing about these meetings, of the 'perfect understanding' that existed, and various other matters of interest to the nation. All of these things will appear in due time and Mr. Roosevelt might as well relate them now.

"It must be said of Mr. Roosevelt, however, that although he received the financial and political support of the Standard Oil company he repudiated that institution after he was elected.

"In the same manner Mr. Wilson received the financial and political support of Senator Smith of New Jersey and repudiated him after election."

GIANTS SCENT THE PENNANT

Under McGraw New York Has Always Been Good Road Team.

New York, Aug. 26. — The Giants have won more games on the road than they have at home, and, in point of successes on foreign fields have the best record to date of any team in either league. Strength of that sort seems to point to a successful rush for pennant honors during the remaining weeks of the race.

The Giants under McGraw always have been a strong road team and this year actually have played their best ball away from home.

EXCITEMENT AT BELGRADE

Reported Massacre of Turks Incenses the Servians.

Belgrade, Servia, Aug. 26.—There is great excitement here over a reported massacre of Serbs at Sienettza by Turks. Thousands of persons paraded the streets and listened to warlike speeches. They also clamored for an attack on Turkey.

The cabinet met to discuss the situation. No details of the massacre have as yet been received.

One of the most interesting incidents of the great annual baby parade at Asbury Park, N. The governor took off his hat to the moose and his rider.

NEW YORK GAMBLERS FLEE

Many Hurry Out of Town to Avoid Subpoena Servers.

New York, Aug. 26.—Scores of gamblers and keepers of disorderly houses have suddenly found themselves suffering from ill health and subpoena servers attached to District Attorney Whitman's office said that it was surprising how many persons of the underworld had found it necessary to leave the city at this time.

Ten process servers invaded Broadway in their automobile to serve subpoenas to appear in the "John Doe" proceedings to inquire into police graft. Only four of the men for whom subpoenas had been issued were found. Scores of others for whom subpoenas were issued, it was learned, had left the city for various health resorts.

Not "Gyp the Blood."

New York, Aug. 26.—The young man who was arrested by Sheriff Cuddebeck of Pike County, Pennsylvania, and his posse at Greeley and locked up on suspicion of being Harry Horowitz, better known as "Gyp the Bolod," one of the two fugitive Rosenthal murderers, was shooed out of the jail after detectives pronounced him the wrong man. He is an Italian.

London Isolated by Fire.

London, Aug. 26.—London for a time was entirely cut off from telegraphic communication with the rest of the country and with the continent. For a time communication with America was impossible as the result of a fierce fire in the general postoffice, where the general telegraph office is situated and where all wires of the service are concentrated.

Counterfeiter Arrested.

Chicago, Aug. 26. — Secret service operatives arrested Richard Burns, a counterfeiter, in a raid at his home and found hundreds of spurious ten-dollar gold pieces. Burns, who served ten years at Fort Leavenworth for counterfeiting, assumed the name of Charles Campbell.

ROW OVER OLD STATE CLAIMS

House and Senate Get Into an Unexpected Deadlock.

DEFICIENCY BILL IS HELD UP

Members of Lower Branch Declare They Will Not Yield to Senate—Probe of Campaign Gifts Also Figures in the Rumpus.

Washington, Aug. 26. — With both houses deadlocked over the general deficiency bill and the senate snarled up in a filibuster within a filibuster, plans for the adjournment of congress have been knocked sky high.

After puttering in vain, and keeping the president of the United States sitting all night in the senate lobby, both houses recessed at about daybreak until 12 o'clock today.

The dawn of another legislative day found the belligerent Democratic senators ready to continue their insistence that the house shall yield on the $600,000 century old state claims in the general deficiency bill. The house will refuse.

LaFollette In the Way.

Add to this a determination upon the part of Senator LaFollette to force the passage of the Penrose-Reed resolution for a sweeping campaign contribution inquiry and you have a first class mix up. Any attempt to put through an adjournment resolution will be blocked on a point of no quorum either by LaFollette or the four fighting Democrats. This will necessitate a summoning of absentees back to Washington.

Senate Must Yield.

The unexpected deadlock and the row over the Penrose-Reed resolution has develop a lot of bad feeling between the houses and among the members of each. As things now stand everything is in condition, but the general impression is that the senators who sought to force a few old state claims will be obliged to yield eventually and that the senate itself will be forced to vote on the Penrose resolution.

The amendments in the deficiency bill that are kicking up most of the trouble, concern the claims of the states of Oregon, Maryland, Virginia and Texas. They involve in the aggregate a little more than $600,000. One of them, the Virginia-Maryland claim, is more than 110 years old. The others also are hoary.

House Stands Pat.

By a unanimous vote the house asserted it would never yield to the senate. In this conclusion the Republicans supported the position of the Democratic leaders. According to statements made in debate the house would rather see the bill fail than passed in the form in which it was adopted by the senate.

Under the rules neither house can adjourn in the absence of a quorum if a point of order is made that no quorum is present.

Taft Signs Bills.

President Taft signed the Panama canal bill. Afterward he sent congress a memorandum suggesting the advisability of the adoption of a resolution declaring the Panama measure was not considered by this government a violation of treaty provisions regarding the canal.

The president also signed the army appropriation bill, which carried approximately $89,000,000 in providing reforms in the organization of the war department.

The postoffice and post roads appropriation bill, which carries approximately $266,000,000, was also signed.

PREDICT FIGHT ON ALL TRUSTS

Chicago Business Men See Extermination War.

NEW GOVERNMENT CAMPAIGN

American Telegraph and Telephone Company and the American Can Company Under Investigation by Authorities.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—Chicago business men with financial interests scattered throughout the nation, believe that the dissolution suit to be filed against the $500,000,000 American Telephone and Telegraph company by the federal government marks the beginning of a general anti-trust campaign.

The dissolution of the company named is sought as a precursor of a number of actions soon to be taken, which will include filing of suits aginst some of the largest trusts in the United States.

Incentive In Campaign.

The success of the government in the litigation brought against the Standard Oil company, the National Packing company and the American Tobacco company, is considered the incentive in the new campaign.

The American Can company, a New Jersey corporation which is known to manufacture 90 per cent of the tin cans in the United States, is under investigation by the federal authorities. It operates thirty-nine factories for the manufacture of tin cans and owns also two retinning factories, and the plants where the machinery is made.

Organized In 1901.

The company was organized in 1901. very year the net earnings of the company have been more than $3,000,000 and last year were $5,400,000, yet no dividends have ever been paid on common stock, although the preferred stock has drawn 5 per cent dividends every year.

It is expected that no criminal action will be taken against the companies under investigation. The corporations concerned probably will be given their choice between voluntary dissolution and action in the civil courts.

PLOT TO KILL SOLON

Washington Citizen Overhears Details on Car and Tells Speaker.

Washington, Aug. 26.—An alleged plot to kill Representative Ben Johnson of Kentucky, chairman of the house committee on District of Columbia, to head off certain proposed legislation, has been disclosed. The affidavit of a Washington man, detailing a conversation he heard on a street car, in which one of those talking said he had been following Mr. Johnson for three nights to kill him, was obtained and is now locked up in the office of Speaker Clark.

Mr. Johnson has been very aggressive in advocacy of legislation affecting the District of Columbia. He is said to have incurred the enmity of many people who interpret his views as hostile to the interests of the city.

RACE RIOT IS AVERTED

Negro Who Killed White Girl Commits Suicide.

Springfield Aroused by Tragedy, and Crowd Gathers at City Hall—All Permitted to See Slayer's Body.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 26.—A repetition of the race riots of four years ago, when a number of persons were killed and hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of property was destroyed, was feared for a time in Springfield as a result of the murder by Arthur Johnson, a negro chauffeur, of Ruth Powers, a yong white woman employed at the home of O. B. Caldwell.

All available police officers and deputy sheriffs were detailed on the hunt for the murderer. Later the body of Johnson, who had ended his own life, was found in a barn at the rear of the Caldwell home.

Johnson left the following note:

"To the Home Folks and Friends: Good-bye to all. This girl, Ruth Powers, has drove me to this. Hope God will have mercy on me. Bye-bye to all."

It is understood that Johnson was infatuated with the white girl.

Before this it seemed that an outbreak was certain. Once, when an insane man accidentally touched an alarm bell in the county jail, summoning the city police, a crowd of nearly 200 gathered.

To quiet a report that Johnson was not dead but was in jail Coroner Rhodes requested the newspapers to bulletin the fact that the public would be permitted to view the body of the murderer. Hundreds took advantage of the invitation.

Reports that many negroes had purchased arms and ammunition resulted in stringent orders being issued by Mayor Schnepp prohibiting their sale.

LAWS TO AID WORKMEN

Wisconsin Men Want Compensation Under Compulsory Statute.

Milwaukee, Aug. 26.—Compulsory workmen's compensation instead of the elective law, as provided in Wisconsin, is favored by most members of the national commission on uniform state laws, which took up the subject. Its special committee submitted drafts of two laws, one compulsory and the other voluntary.

Dr. Charles P. McCarthy, legislative reference librarian of the University of Wisconsin, argued most strenuously for the compulsory law.

CYCLONE WORKS HAVOC

Thousands of Dollars Damage Done at Conneaut Lake, Pa.

Erie, Pa., Aug. 26.—A cyclone of 100 miles an hour velocity swept Conneaut Lake, near here, injuring several persons and causing thousands of dollars' loss. The water of the lake was thrown a hundred feet in the air by the wind in places. Without warning the wind came out of the northwest through the inlet of the lake, accompanied by a funnel shaped cloud that brought a deluge.

Many persons were swept off their feet and stunned by the storm. Barns fell, trees were uprooted and hundreds of acres of grain were swept down.

DESTROYED A GOLDEN MYTH

Moral Seems to Be Let Children Discover the Truth About Santa Claus for Themselves.

It had been a hard year for the father of the family and the coming of Christmas had something of terror in it for him when he thought of how much less in the way of gifts he could do than he would have liked.

But what hurt worst was that, having had to meet some heavy bills, he found it would be quite impossible to buy the bicycle that he had promised his boy Santa Claus would bring.

He was sorry for the disappointment that he knew the lad would feel and he decided that it would be best not to wait and have the disappointment come on Christmas day. So he went to the lad, a manly little chap, and said:

"Look here, my boy, you are old enough now to understand things. Each Christmas when you received gifts you supposed, and, indeed, we told you, they were brought by Santa Claus.

"As a matter of fact, Santa Claus is only a make-believe, a tradition that has come down through the ages to help make the Christmas season brighter and happier and less selfish for children. The truth is that your mother and myself have always been your Santa Claus.

"This year, sonny, things have not been going very well with me and I can't just afford that bicycle that you thought Santa Claus was going to bring you.

"Be a brave little man about it and we'll have a merry Christmas anyway, and maybe early in the year I'll be able to get it for you. But I really can't afford it now. You won't mind very much, will you?"

"Why—no—dad," said the lad, though he had to fight a bit to keep the tears out of his eyes.

"But," he said, thoughtfully, "no Santa Claus! Why, I believed in him. Say, dad, you haven't been fooling me about Jesus, too, have you?"—St. Louis Republic.

Red Tape in Action.

An American, in visiting the London postoffice, observed that the newspaper box had a large mouth, and, with the curiosity of the average American tourist, he stood gazing into it. Suddenly a bale of newspapers struck him and he fell into the box.

His companions hurried to the counters to rescue him, but owing to the red tape of the English postoffice the clerks disregarded their appeals. The American was in the mail box and would have to be treated as a mail matter. They therefore stamped him and threw him into a compartment containing provincial newspapers.

The unfortunate man's friends thereupon went to the chief, who listened phlegmatically to their story, then asked if their friend was addressed. On being informed that he was not, the chief said:

"The matter is simple. The man will remain for six months in the bureau. At the end of that time, if no one applies for him, he will be burnt as a dead letter."

Pantheon and Parthenon.

The Parthenon, or what is left of it, stands upon the Acropolis of Athens. This most famous building on earth was erected under the administration of Pericles about B. C. 442. Its present ruinous condition was caused by the explosion of a bomb during the war between the Venetians and Turks in 1687. The Pantheon, at Rome, was built by Agrippa in B. C. 27, and, unlike the more beautiful temple at Athens, is still in a fair state of preservation. The Pantheon is, of course, well worth seeing, both for its own sake and on account of its historic interest; but it does not hold the fame belonging to the incomparable building on the Athenian Acropolis.

TOUCHED TENDER SPOT

APPEAL IN HEN'S EYES TOO MUCH FOR "NIMROD."

Consequently Destructive Bird, Held in Honor as a Gift, Continues to Make Barren Waste of Doctor's Garden.

One of the doctor's patients is an Italian who speaks English imperfectly, and is, besides, very poor. The doctor became interested in him at a hospital clinic, where he treated him for some time. When quite restored to health, the Italian, full of gratitude and affection, desired to make some return for the kindness that had been shown him, and after much consideration decided to present his benefactor with one of his most valuable assets, a large white hen which he was fattening with a view to a feast for himself and family later on. So one morning he arrived at the doctor's office with this offering in his arms and sat humbly waiting his turn among the other patients.

"Well, Joseph, is your hen sick?" asked the doctor jocosely, when Joseph finally was shown into the private sanctum.

"Seek-a!" exclaimed Joseph. "No, ser, heem-a no seek-a. I brought-a heem to you. I want gev-a heem to you. You make-a me well. You treat-a me kind. I geva you de cheek. I have-a no more. I like-a you, please take-a," and with tears of emotion in his eyes he thrust the struggling, squawking fowl into the hands of the physician, who, being a most tender-hearted mortal, could not refuse a gift he knew was offered in a spirit of sincere devotion.

A few days later the doctor's brother, whose prowess as a hunter of big and little game had won for him among his friends the nickname of "Nimrod," was visiting the doctor, and, happening to look out of the sanctum window into the yard, observed the hen contentedly scratching up a bed of geraniums, the last bit of vegetation her actice claws had left untouched in the inclosure.

"Hello, Doc! Since when have you gone into the poultry business?" said he.

Then the doctor explained. "The deuce of it is," he concluded ruefully, "that the activities of that miserable bird have kept my yard looking like a barren waste."

"Kill her, why don't you?" said Nimrod. "Cut off her head."

"Oh," said the man of lancets and probes and surgical knives, "I couldn't do it; not in cold blood. Nimrod—not in cold blood."

"Pooh," returned Nimrod, "let me do it for you then. Just a clip on the side of the head and it's over."

"All right, my boy, go and do it," said the brother. So the doctor closed the window and drew down the shade and Nimrod departed on his murderous errand. Twenty minutes later he returned.

"Well?" queried the doctor, looking up from his writing, "is it done?"

"No," replied Nimrod.

"Not done!" said the doctor. "And why not?"

"Why, the darned bird looked at me with its round, silly eyes and I couldn't do it," confessed Nimrod, with a deprecatory smile.

So Joseph's gift still clucks and scratches contentedly and the doctor's yard continues to look like a barren waste.—New York Press.

Small Consolation.

In Dunoon (Scotland) the other afternoon one of the municipal employes had a free bath. He is a veteran who drives the cart for watering the roads. While filling the tank of the vehicle the long hosepipe came off the tap, with the result that the water rushed high into the air as if it were anxious to do the aeroplane act. There was no way to get the water turned off except to go straight into the middle of it. The waterman had many trials before he managed to throttle the impromptu fountain. And when he had made it tap the mat, and came out soaked to the skin, he was not cheered up by the remark of a witness of the Homeric contest, who said—"Ach, Donal, never mind; it'll no' dae ye ony herm; it's saut water."

PLAGUE SPREAD BY CAMEL

The Paris Medical publishes some observations which throw an important light on the cases of plague which occurred in Russia some time ago. As far back as 1907, Dr. Klodnitzlhy noticed in the Cazarel Island, in the Caspian Sea, a slight outbreak of plague. Three women were attacked, and he was able to establish, after inquiry, that they had all three been engaged in handling the carcass of a camel which had died from some unknown cause. Later, in April, 1911, plague appeared in a little place in the district of Kamysch-Samara. Six persons were attacked with plague, and all had eaten of a camel that had died.

At the end of September, in the same year, another camel in the district died, and then an autopsy was made. There were no clear indications of any injuries to account for death, but in the viscera the doctor found a bacillus identical with that of Yersin, the cultures of which reproduced plague in animals which were inoculated. Toward the end of the same month other human beings were attacked, and the outbreak coincided with the death of a camel, and tests with the blood produced a typical plague bacillus. Dr. Klodnitzlhy has no doubt that the cases of plague in the human beings owed their origin to eating the flesh of plague-stricken camels, and he suggests that the camels in question had been eating herbage which had become infected by camels suffering from the disease.

EVER SEE A STOUT POSTMAN?

In London, for Instance, Carriers Walk Over Sixteen Miles Carrying Forty Pounds.

Has it ever struck you why a stout postman is such a rarity? The question is worth attention.

A postman who in a busy London residential district walks from fourteen to sixteen miles a day, starts out in the morning with mails weighing something like eighty pounds. As his letters and packages are distributed, the weight of his bag, of course, grows less, so that the average weight he carries during his trip is forty pounds. A pint of water weighs a pound. A 10-quart pail weighs about twenty pounds, and the average weight the postman carries is equal to two of these. If you want to know why postmen are thin, try a 15-mile walk with a 10-quart pail of water in each hand.

The driver of a brewery wagon, on the other hand, is usually fat. The reason is that he sits on the seat of his dray most of the day, and often consumes large quantities of liquid. Policemen, too, often grow fat through standing about on their beats.—Answers, London.

Surely Simple Enough.

"Jersey justice" is famed the country over, and one of the latest examples proves that it is indeed sui generis. In a city not a thousand miles from New York the Sunday law with regard to amusements is supposed to be strictly enforced. It was noticed recently, however, that a wealthy and influential brewer who was the principal owner of a house not noted for giving classic entertainments was permitted to present unmolested "sacred concerts," which consisted principally of high kicking and stale jokes. A rival manager, learning of this went to the police commissioner with his tale of woe. That functionary, leaning his chin on his hand, regarded the theatrical man attentively for a moment, and then said: "You see, it's this way. He can give his performance on Sunday and you can't. Now, you understand the law, don't you?" And who could fail to comprehend such a simple explanation?—New York Tribune.

Patrolman's Brave Act.

A New York patrolman of the East 126th street station, sent thrills up and down the spines of several hundred persons in Third avenue the other afternoon when he leaped for the head of a runaway horse, missed the bridle, fell sprawling, and then picked himself up in time to get a grab at the end of the flying wagon. Such was the speed at which the outfit was moving that the policeman, to the admiration of onlookers, was hoisted into the wagon. He found it impossible to stop the horse, but calmly sat in the driver's seat and waited until the animal was halted by a string of street cars at 138th street. The horse had run more than three miles.

Just Puzzled Him.

"Your studies are costin' me a heap o' money," observed the rustic father, reaching down in his jeans for another roll to slip to his nearly-educated son.

"I know it, father!" replied the son, with considerable emotion. His emotion did not prevent his pocketing the wad, but he went on talking, just as if there had been no interruption.

Then he smiled sweetly, assumed a puzzled expression and added: "And I don't see why my studies should be so expensive. Why, dad, I try to study as little as possible!"

ROMAN ROADS IN ENGLAND

Project of Putting Old Highways in Useful Condition Is Being Revived.

British motorists are showing some interest in a project which is being revived of reopening and putting in usable condition the old Roman roads that led out from London to the surrounding cities and that connected up the outlying places. The ancient highways, built by the Roman generals for military purposes, were well constructed and their routes were exceedingly straight, but they have apparently in many instance been practically abandoned.

Few except students of the subject are aware of the great network of highways which were driven across England, Wales and Scotland by the Roman generals. The straightness of these roads probably is explained by the fact that the cities and towns they linked up were founded subsequent to the road making. The roads were constructed for military purposes —the subjugation and control of the turbulent Britons—and had no set objective. Camps grew into cities and towns founded at points of military vantage. These naturally lost their importance in many instances when the conquerors withdrew, and their very sites are forgotten.—Feld.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

Morenci had a grand Home Comers Day Aug. 22, and a bit of local history has come before the public. The village was first settled in 1833, Messrs Hoag and Sherman taking up the land where the village is located.

In 1834 Messrs. Wakefield and two Wilson brothers settled there. Jeptha Whitman built the first log house and kept the post office. The first hotel was a double log house run by Wm. Sutton. First school was in a log house and taught by Miss Louise Dellham. First church organized in 1836 of the Methodist persuasion, with seven members. Church built in 1852. Baptist organized in 1858. Village incorporated in 1871 and is now third in point of prosperity and wealth in Lenawee county

A new $25,000 switch board is being installed in the office of the Lenawee Telephone Company in Adrian, which will join the lines of what has been known as the Bell and Citizen Exchanges A new brick annex has been built for the machinery for the central generating system.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Presbyterian church of West Dundee have raised $322 in the last two months to help in the much needed addition for church parlors, and ground is being broken for the same. Ladies Aid Societies prove to be all that their name implies, in all our churches.

Hillsdale's new federal building was opened to the public Aug. 22, and was opened for business Friday, the 23. It was erected at an expense of $60,000 and has been in process of construction for nearly a year, It is an honor to Hillsdale.

Adrian is rejoicing over the fact that the mammoth Wabash bidge spanning the river Raisin, is nearly completed. It said to be "a triumph of modern engineering, and a monument to 20th century science." It is constructed of fine concrete and steel. Two abutments and three piers have been constructed on which high steel girders have been placed. When completed it is thought this bridge will endure for ages.

GASOLINE STOVE EXPLODED

While preparing dinner on a gasoline stove Saturday, Mrs. (Dr.) Briegel was quite severly burned on her hands and her hair and eye brows were slightly singed by the explosion of stove.

They were fortunate in extinguishing the blaze before any further damage was done.

ACCIDENT

Accidents will happen, and when John Betzer threw a ball at the "African Dodger" at the Carnival last Friday evening, he failed to dodge, and received a bad cut over his right eye. A doctor was called and rendered the necessary assistance. This part of the show was put out of commission for the rest of the evening.

Concerning Sham Optimism.

Sham optimism is really a more heartless doctrine to preach than even an exaggerated pessimism—the latter leaves one at least on the safe side.—Thomas Hardy.

CHILDREN'S PARTY

Stacyhome, August 24

The little Misses Turner
Gertrude and Margaret named
Had such a pleasant party,
At Stacyhome so famed.
Just sixteen little lassies
Met on the lawn together,
Rejoicing in the sunshine,
That brought such pleasant weather
With jolly games and laughter
The hours passed swift away,
Till came the call to supper
In Stacyhome so gay.
The tables and the pretty room
Were decked with flowers a plenty,
Why I believed, of nice boquets,
There must have been most twenty.
A two course supper followed then
Just like a grown up's party
With chicken patties, pickles, jell,
And peanut sandwich hearty.
And then, such beautiful ice cream
So solid and so fruity,
With plenty of such perfect cake
It surely was a beauty.
Some laddies came in time for tea,
And helped to make them jolly
With funny stories riddles puns,
They banished melancholy.
Came six o'clock, the time to go,
They breathed a sigh quite hearty,
For they had such a charming time,
At the girlies goodbye party.

EAGLES' PICNIC

There was a large crowd at Eagles' picnic at Devils Lake Sunday. Various sports were indulged in; among them a base ball game between the Jackson Cuttings and Tecumseh Independents. Up to the 8th inning the score was 2 to 0 in favor of Jackson. But the tide finally turned after some exciting manouvers, the final score was 3 to 2 in favor of Tecumseh. The game was an exciting one and was fought bravely to the finish by both clubs.

REBEKAH PICNIC

In celebration of the thirteenth anniversary of their organization, the Rebekah lodge held a picnic at the Coller House Saturday afternoon.

About seventy gathered for the occasion, which proved a most delightful one. The time was spent in social visiting for the good of the order.

The call to supper was quickly responded to and a grand forage was made on the good things set before them.

FARMERS PICNIC

The Farmers' Union Picnic at Lee McConnell's last Saturday was most enjoyable, with a good crowd of 130 in attendance. Rev. W. B. Hartzog and Mrs. Jenny C. Law Hardy each favored the company with a fine address. Mrs. Hardy spoke on Woman Suffrage and Dr. Hartzog on Local Option. Both subjects being of deep interest to all.

THE CARNIVAL

The Pilbeam Amusement Company that have been with us for the past week in Monument park, closed their performances Saturday evening. A large crowd was present for the last night, business in their several lines seemed to be doing well. The show people were quiet and courteous, and Tecumseh had no reason to regret their coming among us.

LITTLE GIRL BITTEN BY DOG

Virginia, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Westgate, while visiting at the home of Wm. Knern in Manchester was badly bitten on the face by a dog. They brought the child to Dr. O. Q. Jones who assisted by Mrs. L. M. Jones cauterized the wound and took eight stiches. Everyone will be anxious for the outcome.

WHY TICKET AGENTS GO CRAZY

The following article taken from the Sioux City Journal was handed into the office by one who has nearly gone crazy.

"Do you suppose No. 17 will be in on time day after tomorrow? Why not?"

"Can you tell me if a young lady in a blue dress and straw hat got off the train which got in from the North at 9:10?"

"What time does the 5 o'clock train leave, and is it going to leave on time?"

"Is the train going to get into Fort Wayne on time, do you think?"

"What made No. 7 so late a week ago last Tuesday?"

"Do you think it is safe to ride in a parlor car, or is there apt to be a rear end collision?"

"Why is No. 13 marked up fifteen minutes late?"

"Have you noticed an old gentleman with white whiskers and a telescope, go through the gate any time to day?

"How do I get to Bink's Corner, Texas, without changing cars?"

I lost a back comb on the southbound train three weeks ago last Wednesday. Can you tell me where I can find it?"

"Will you watch for my sister and tell her how to get up to my house? I haven't time to wait for her train?"

MATILDA MUGGINS

MATILDA MUGGINS (may her looks improve!)
Awoke one night from fleeting dreams of love,
And saw, within the moonlight near her bed,
A spirit writing in a book of red,
In words of flame it wrote, with mien inspired.
"What names are those?" the damsel then inquired.
The spirit, answering, stayed its gleaming pen.
"The maids whose beauty fires the hearts of men."
"..nd am I one?" she querled. "Nay, not so,"
The spirit said. Matilda spoke more low,
But hopeful still, and begged in accents bland,
"Write me as one that cooks to beat the band."
The spirit wrote and vanished. The next night It came again with a great scroll of white,
And showed the names whom men had blessed,
And lo! Matilda's name led all the rest.

OTHER PLACES, OTHER CUSTOMS

Also you will find one very important difference between the social customs of New York and those of a small Western town. The men who are invited to Cynthia and Elizabeth's house will be very nice to you. They will entertain you and send you flowers, and be thoughtful and considerate and cordial. In your home town such attentions to a young girl would have a very special meaning, but in New York these things are done because social usage and good breeding demand it and, in the last analysis, it is a tribute to Cynthia and Elizabeth rather than to you, because you are their guest. But whether or not these pleasant but meaningless attentions pave the way to friendships founded upon more substantial and satisfactory grounds depends on you my dear. If you get the mistaken idea that, just because the men are nice to you, you are a very popular and important young person, your pride may take some very uncomfortable tumbles. So don't lose your head, if for a time you are the center of things Try your very hardest always to give as much as you receive; to interest the women, too who entertain you. I should have put that first, for, after all, it is by far the more important thing to social success. Everything in life is on a basis of 'this for that," so don't cheat, my, child. In society, as in business, honesty is the best policy and square dealing yields the most desirable returns.—"What — When — Where — Why," in The Ladies' World for September.

DANCING

At The Farm, Wampler's Lake

Beginning July 11 and 13, every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday through the summer

George J. Nisle.

Bull Made Merry Time.

Two men injured, several more seeking refuge in trees, and a panic among pedestrians, were a few of the results which attended the recent escapade of a young and ferocious bull at Burton-on-Trent, England. The animal escaped from a sale yard, and, after causing consternation by its antics through several busy thoroughfares, entered a recreation ground, where it proceeded to play havoc. An inmate of the workhouse was knocked down. While a man was trying to effect a rescue the animal rushed away, and knocked down a second person. While several betook themselves to trees for safety, one man sought safety behind a tree, and for ten minutes had to continually circle it and defend himself by his belt. For two hours all efforts to capture the animal proved futile, but the expedient of fetching a herd of cows had the desired effect.

WHY IT SUCCEEDS

Because It's for One Thing Only and Tecumseh People Appreciate This.

Nothing can be good for everything. Doing one thing well brings success. Doan's Kidney Pills do one thing only.

They help sick kidneys.

They relieve backache, kidney and bladder trouble.

Here is Tecumseh evidence to prove it.

Mrs. Sarah E. Austin, Pearl St. Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have had no need of Doan's Kidney Pills or any other kidney medicine since 1908. I can still recommend this preparation highly. I suffered from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint for more than a year and when someone told me that Doan's Kidney Pills were effective in cases of this kind, I obtained a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They help me immediately and I continued their use until I was well."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agent for the United States.

Remmber the name—Doan's—and take no other.

"I'm tired of laying eggs," complained the hen. "And I'm tired of lying about them," claimed in the dealer in the coldstorage product.

Hay fever and asthma make August a month of intense suffering to many people. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound gives prompt ease and relief, and is soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes. Wm. M. Merethew, N. Searsport, Me., says: "A few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound relieved me of a severe attack of asthma and less than a bottle caused a complete cure." Refuse suqstitutes. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Well-Trained Cockatoo.

"When seals were taught to do tricks balancing and to whirl flaming torches, and ordinary barnyard cocks crowed a duet at the command of a trainer, we thought the highest point in that commercially valuable line of education had been reached," says a writer in a Berlin paper. "But a new 'first place' has been created for a grass-green cockatoo. This educated member of the parrot family rides a tiny bicycle at command and seems to enjoy the sport. He does many tricks for which professional riders receive applause. The same collection of animal wonders' contains a monster lion, which is shown in a cage provided with a grand piano. A woman trainer enters, seats herself at the instrument and strikes a chord, at which the lion leaps upon the piano and glares at the pianist. Then she plays, and the lion roars in time with the music. What next?"

Work Was Remedial.

The following report from the records of a probation officer is significant: "M. Z., of German descent, graduated from grammar school. Parents neat, respectable, and thrifty, Germans. Girl wanted to go to work. Parents would not allow this, as they did not need her wages and thought she should stay at home and help about the house. Girl became unmanageable, and stayed out several nights, whereupon her parents brought her into court as incorrigible. The probation officer urged that the girl be allowed to go to work. The parents agreed, the girl was placed on probation, and found work for herself in a department store. From that time she gave no trouble.

Terms in Modern Evolution.

"Yes, it was romance, all right, even if it did turn out badly. It started at one of last spring's picnics. She was plucking white daisies or something with the proper background in perspective. He saw her and muttered: "Oh, you pretty squab!'"

"Then what?"

"Oh, she overheard it, all right, and in a roundabout way an introduction followed."

"Go on."

"Well, it wasn't many weeks before he had her out under the trees in the moonlight, with a mocking bird accompaniment, asking her: 'Oos duckie is oo?"

"Next chapter."

"The first week in June he marshaled up sufficient courage to say: 'Say, chicken, let's get married?'"

"I see; short engagement, eh?"

"Yep; wedded bliss not long, either. Along with other indignities alleged in her divorce petition she says he called her a goose. He retaliated by saying no man was expected to stay married with a chattering guinea always around."

"Now what?"

"She got her freedom yesterday. Tonight he's celebrating, declaring he's glad he's rid of the old hen."—St. Louis Republic.

Fruits Ripened by Drug Vapors.

Horticulturists have for some time been experimenting on the effects to be obtained by subjecting plants to the vapor of ether, chloroform and other volatile substances. They have found that the growth of many fruits and flowers can be forced by this method and have obtained particularly striking results with lilacs, which they have thus been able readily to obtain in winter. An American agriculturist has experimented more particularly in the effect of these and other substances on the ripening of fruit. His observations have shown that in the majority of cases the more volatile the substance to which the plant is treated the more rapid is the ripening. In forcing the ripening of dates, for instance, he found that the best results were obtained when he employed acetic, proprionic, lactic or salicylic acid. Heat powerfully stimulates the ripening process and one of the peculiarities of fruits thus forced to maturity is that they are generally found to keep better than those which have ripened naturally.

Sought to Swallow Will.

A curious scene occurred recently in a lawyer's office at Castanet, near Toulouse, France. The lawyer was reading the will of a landowner who recently died, in the presence of the relatives of the deceased. The deceased left practically his whole estate to his widow, and this fact so infuriated a cousin that he suddenly jumped up, snatched the will from the lawyer's hands, tore it into fragments and, cramming them into his mouth, endeavored to swallow them. He was seized by the throat and finally forced to disgorge the bits of paper, which were afterwards gummed together.

DREAD DEATH COMING

FEAR DEEPLY IMPLANTED IN THE HEARTS OF ALL.

Some More Effected by Loss of Honor, a Visit to a Dentist, or Bankruptcy, but Few Deliberately End It All.

Probably the first thought of every reasonable man in reading the dreary details of the disaster to the Titanic was: "What would I have done in the same circumstances?" Probably his second bore the hope in all humility that if such circumstances should arise for him he would behave without too much of the awkwardness of panic. Only a fool would haphazard a prediction of his conduct in the face of a peril so unexpected and attended by the terrors of midnight and the sea. It is no discredit to the human race to say that cowardice is a gift from the devil which has been impartially distributed among mankind.

Every man who thinks at all is afraid of death. He may be more afraid of something else, or loss of honor, health or money, or going to a dentist, or, like the man in Pickwick, of life without buttered muffins, but he chooses death only as a bad alternative for a worse. If he is not afraid of one thing you may be sure he is afraid of another.

A man will go up to the clouds in a balloon who wouldn't go down into twenty feet of water in a submarine. A steeplejack may be afraid of dogs and a lion tamer of riding in an elevator. We know a man who has made a great reputation for coolness under fire in battle, who gibbers with fear whenever he has the stomach ache. One man fears fire, another burglars, another railway trains, another measles.

Conduct in an emergency depends on many things besides those abstract qualities known as "cowardice" and "courage." A man is apt to act calmly when his surroundings, at the time the peril presents itself, are customary and familiar, when his nerves happen to be sound, or when he has time to meditate on his action and weigh carefully its consequences.

Again a man may be persuaded to shame or glory, as the case may be, by the example of his neighbor. One person afflicted by blinding fear may turn a hundren men into a panic stricken mob or he may convert them into a throng of heroes through their very horror of his conduct. And one man who has established his moral equilibrium quickly can instantly convey fortitude to the others. Courage and cowardice both like company.—F. P. Dunne in the American Magazine.

Bird Store a Magnet.

The bird store window is an unfailing attraction to many people. Perhaps it attracts men more than women, but it is a magnet that draws all children.

Let the small boys discover a bird store and they halt and linger long, wondering over or admiring the strange or beautiful feathered creatures within, and children walking with their mothers, if they should spy this window, are sure to tug her toward it to give them a chance to look in.

The bird store window interests all children, as it appears to interest also many grown men who may be drawn to it by a natural fondness for birds and animals, or be attracted by the novel or striking character of the exhibit on view.

Here, for instance, in this window is a white peacock, a remarkable bird seen with its plumage in whatever form. As with characteristic deliberation it walks about with its long tail feathers folded and trailing people stop to look at it, and then let it raise and spread its great white fan and many more halt and gather in a crowd around the window.—New York Sun.

BLOW UP WATER MAIN

Dynamiters Leave Kansas City, Kan., In a Predicament.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 26.—Dynamiters during the night blew up two sections of the twenty-four-inch water main that carries the water supply from Quindaro pumping station, five miles west, to Kansas City, Kan.

As a result Kansas City, Kan., is without water, even for fire protection. Water works officials said that it may take three days to repair the main. Meantime Kansas City, Kan., will have to depend on a small five-inch pipe for its supply of water. This emergency pipe can be connected within five hours.

Olive's Prisoner

By ROBERT H. BROWN

(Copyright, [illegible] Press.)

The girl standing in the doorway of the ranch house shaded her eyes with one hand and looking away saw nothing save the green expanse of grass broken here and there by a jagged fence rail. There were some maple trees about the house, but beyond the confines of the yard there was nothing but grass.

There was no sound to break the stillness of the September afternoon except the long chirrup of insects and the buzzing of bees among the flower beds. From the stables came the occasional stamp of hoofs.

Olive Cole was all alone. Even the Chinese cook had muttered something about finding mushrooms in the far meadow, and flapped his way out of sight.

Olive strongly suspected that he was playing fantan at some rendezvous with several fellow countrymen from the other ranches. The men had talked about it.

She wished he had not gone this very afternoon when her parents had gone to Red Tree station, and the place was deserted. It was the first time she had been left alone, but she was not afraid, for in the belt that clasped her trim waist was an efficient little revolver.

An eagle soared like a speck in the blue heaven. Beneath him a hawk circled.

Then out of the silence came the thud of hoofs on the turf and there dashed into view a horse and rider tearing out of the Red Tree trail. The horse scuffled to a standstill down at the gate to the corral, his rider slipped to the ground and darted into the barns while the animal snuffed the air for a moment and then galloped madly past the house, turning to the right and vanishing down the trail to the hidden spring.

"Oh dear!" cried Olive with a hand above her heart.

She recognized this little scene in one of the grim tragedies of the west. It had happened once before and she had never forgotten the sight as the cattlemen led the horsethief away to lynch him.

Her hand dropped to her side and her face stiffened into a mask of indifference as there came the sound of other hoofbeats and a dozen men drew rein at the gate.

"Afternoon! Miss Olive," said the leader wiping his moist forehead. "Yore pa around?"

"No—he's gone to Red Tree, Mr. Hall."

"Any of the boys here?"

"All over on the range. Is there anything I can do for you?"

The sheriff replaced his hat and glanced around at the determined looking men in his party.

"The fact is we're after a chap that was riding a dark bay with a white nose. Ain't seen any such party?" He looked keenly at her from under his hat brim.

"I saw a horse rush past here and turn down toward Hidden Spring," said Olive.

"Was there a man on him?"

"No—not even a saddle."

"Was he a dark bay with a white nose?"

"I couldn't tell exactly—he went so fast. I am sure he was dark," said the girl quietly.

"Then what became of him?" demanded Hall, turning to his companions.

"Must have slipped off at the crossroads and cut for the timber."

"We better divide up then. Half of you fellows go back and follow the other trail and the rest of us will go down to Hidden Spring. You might look through the stables before you go." The sheriff rode away with six of his men and the others left their horses and tramped toward the stables.

Olive followed them, her heart in her throat. She hoped the fugitive, whoever he was, might have hidden himself securely. She despised cattle thieves, but she had a tender regard for human life—indeed for life of any description and she would not have killed a jack rabbit. As for her revolver, she carried it to frighten more than to wound.

As the men searched the stables and the barns with the thoroughness of long practice, Olive quaked inwardly. It would be a clever man indeed who could have escaped their scrutiny. The horses in the stalls stamped nervously as the searchers peered around and even Olive's cream colored pony snapped at her when she laid a caressing hand on its nose.

"Nothing doing here," declared Hank Holmes as they tramped out of the building.

"What has he done?" asked Olive, finding her voice with difficulty.

"Been rustling the Englishman's cattle. Caught him last night riding one of the horses—same one you saw, I guess, and he got away from us! Slick as a whistle—said he was the Englisher himself."

"Wasn't he?" inquired Olive curiously.

"Bluffing. The Englisher ain't ever been here but once and nobody except Callahan, the boss, saw him. We took him to Callahan last night and he said it was a fairy story—said he'd never seen the varmint before. Said the Englisher, Hayden's his name, was small and dark and this chap's big and tight. Looks like a Swede. Tell yore pa, will you, Miss Olive, he might come along this way after dark."

"I will tell him," said Olive, smiling stiffly.

She watched them ride away toward the timbered lands and she looked keenly in every direction before she returned to the barn. Then she stood in the doorway, with her back to the interior, and asked in a very shaky voice:

"Are you there?"

"Yes," said a muffled voice, and Olive turned to discover a man's big frame emerging from the hay that filled her pony's manger.

"You are hurt!" she cried, for a little stream of blood was trickling down his hand.

He wiped it away. "One of those silly brutes prodded me with a pitchfork," he said, carelessly. "I'm [illegible] fully obliged to you—because you did not betray my presence here. May I ask why you spared me?"

He smiled down at her. Her quick glance noted that this was no ordinary cattle thief if he were one at all. Neither was he a Swede. Big and blond and extremely goodlooking, he was dressed in rough gray [illegible] with brown leather riding boots. [illegible] head was hatless and as he stood there looking down at her with that keen blue glance Olive was convinced that the sheriff and his posse had made a ridiculous mistake.

"You are Mr. Hayden?" she asked.

"I was until last night," he smiled, "but these fellows have given me the lie so many times since then that I begin to doubt my own identity. Why, even my foreman, Callahan, swore to my face that I wasn't myself!"

"I never could bear that Callahan," declared Olive emphatically. "I've seen him so many times in company with disreputable Mexicans from over the border that I've never thought him honest."

"You've hit it, exactly. I was trailing him last night after one of his excursions when the sheriff got hold of me. You see Callahan had told me all about it as soon as I arrived and I had reason to suspect the fellow. Well, I'm here to stay, if I can convince your neighbors of my identity before they deal out what they call justice!"

"Suppose you retire to the upper loft and remain there until I talk with my father. He's perfectly reasonable, and after the men get on Callahan's trail they will see how matters stand," suggested Olive.

"I will take your advice," said Hayden rather reluctantly. "I hate to run away, but if I want to fight another day I presume I better keep out of sight."

Olive waited until he had disappeared in the dim upper loft, and when the rustling of the hay had ceased and he had called down a cheery: "All right-o!" she sped back to the house to await her father's return.

Presently the sheriff and his six men came riding back leading the bay horse.

"What luck?" called Olive.

"What you see!" growled Hall unamiably. "Saw your Chink and a half a dozen others with a gambling lay-out down at Hidden Spring. Broke that up, all right!" His grim face relaxed.

"You didn't hurt Wah Lee, did you?" she asked quickly, and as they laughed she added faintly: "You know, father says he was the best cook we ever had."

"He's coming now—seems to be alive!" retorted Hall as they went on their way.

Wah Lee was trotting quickly toward the house. He was wailing to himself in a heart-broken sort of way. In one hand he carried his severed pigtail and acute anguish was written on his flat yellow countenance.

Olive comforted him with what words she could muster, but nothing save communion with his gods and the burning of much joss could assuage his mortification.

Then came Olive's parents. First exacting secrecy from them she told them the story. Mr. Cole shook his head in strong disapproval. "It doesn't do to oppose the law, my dear," he said before he went out to the barn.

When he returned there was another expression on his stern face.

"Olive's right—I believe it is Mr. Hayden, after all. I'll go over and set the boys on Callahan's trail."

It was late at night when fifteen men rode up to Cole's ranch and announced that Bill Callahan had been caught. They were quite ready to apologize to the big Englishman when he had been extricated from his perch in the loft.

"I owe my life to you. Miss Olive," he said to her later in the evening as he took his departure.

"I am very glad," she said, shyly withdrawing her hand from his.

"So am I," he said heartily.

Weeks afterward he came to tell Olive that he owed his life to her and he wanted to pay the debt.

And when Sheriff Hall received his wedding invitation he mopped his brow and gasped.

"Gosh, but that gal of Cole's came mighty nigh being an old maid, didn't she?"

And those who had accompanied him that day nodded solemnly in the affirmative.

ALWAYS ROOM FOR ONE MORE

Enggas' Piano Box Buggy Displaced After Marriage by Vehicles of Increasing Capacity.

When William Enggas, a plumber at Fifth and Grand, got married, he had a stylish horse and a neat piano box buggy. A few years later the horse had been replaced by a sturdier animal and the buggy had grown into a road wagon, with an extra seat. Now, when the Enggas family goes driving, which is often, the road wagon is found to have grown to a sort of omnibus, with seats for 12. A team of chunks has replaced the one horse of the road wagon days.

"I don't care if I have to use a hay wagon some day," remarked Enggas as he rested his horses for a moment. "We have only ten children, but I am sure we would have twice as much fun if we had 20. I know that ten are five times as much fun as two. Yes, they do enjoy their drive in the bosom of the family, as it were."

And Mrs. Enggas, who doesn't seem a bit worn and nervous as the story books and suffragettes would have us believe of a mother of family, smiled her assent. Maybe it is because she has no time to worry over suffrage or anything but to bring up her healthy, bright lot of babies.—Kansas City Journal.

Australia's Wheat Exports.

Australia exported 728,000 tons of wheat to date, compared with about 428,000 tons in 1910.

Lilliputian States.

The Lilliputian size of some of the German states is well known, but that it is possible to visit seven of them, including two kingdoms, two duchies and three principalities, in an easy walk of four and a half hours, will probably be news to most people.

Starting from Steinbach, in Bavaria, the pedestrian arrives in half an hour at Lichtentanne, which is situated in Saxe-Meiningen. From here the road leads in one and a half hours to Rauschengesees (Reuss, Elder branch), after which in a few minutes Gleima, in Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt, is reached. Half an hour's walk takes him to Altengesees (Reuss, Younger Branch). An hour further on lies Drognitz, on Prussian soil, and the last stage is another hour's stroll, finishing up at Saalthal, Saxe-Altenburg.

Mirage Easy to Be Seen.

The celebrated Fata Morgana, a presentation of natural "moving pictures" on an immense scale which is occasionally seen in the Straits of Messina, is explained by a scientific writer as being a mirage, such as frequently occurs in various parts of the world; "in fact," he says, "one may see a mirage any day by looking through the stratum of air overlying a hot stove, or adjacent to the side of a wall heated in the sunshine." Young scientists will be interested in verifying this statement.

Kaw Indian Chief Remembered.

Henry Bluejacket, a celebrated Kaw Indian chief, visited central Missouri in 1833. He spoke English well, was gentlemanly and agreeable in his deportment. He was physically large and handsome. His dress was a loose sack hunting jacket of blue cloth, with fringed buckskin leggins and moccasins and a foxskin cap. Contrary to the usual custom among Indians, the Kaws usually wore caps on their heads made of fox, coon or wildcat skin.

Ancient Italian City.

Asolo, which inspired two of Browning's verses in "Asolando," and which is observing the centenary, is a fortified town in Treviso, in northern Italy. It was the ancient Acelum, and possesses a cathedral and a ruined aqueduct. The former palace of Catharine Cornaro, queen of Cyprus, is in the neighborhood. There are beautiful seats in the vicinity, and the town has a population of under 6,000.—London Globe.

7 BOYS HIT BY TRAIN

Disastrous Sequel to Trip to a Melon Patch.

Three boys were killed and four fatally injured at the McKeen tower on the Southern Indiana belt junction, two miles from Terre Haute, Ind., when a south-bound passenger train ran into them. They had just dodged a freight train.

The dead are: Carl Mattox, eighteen years old; Lewis Powers, sixteen years old; and Jesse Darnell, aged seventeen.

The injured are: Earl Bedwell, Stimson Kitsnell, Earl Mattox and William Regan, all of this city.

According to witnesses the boys had been to a melon patch, and ran across the belt track in front of the freight train, failing to see the passenger train.

LIGHTNING'S DEADLY WORK

Seven Persons Struck and Killed Near St. Louis.

Seven persons were killed and one seriously injured near St. Louis, Mo., by lightning bolts.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hansdorf, twenty-six, of St. Louis, was killed at Prairie du Pont, Ill.

Orlie Meadows, a small son of Mrs. Lulu Meadows of St. Louis, and Edward S. Miles of East St. Louis, were instantly killed while sitting under a tree at East St. Louis.

Lightning struck the residence of Jefferson Rulo, two miles south of DeSoto, Mo., killing Mr. Rulo, his wife, son and daughter, and badly injuring a brother of Mr. Rulo.

"Lefty Louie" on Steamer.

"Lefty Louie" or Rosenberg as he is variously known to the underworld, wanted as the fourth member of the murder quartet which killed Gambler Herman Rosenthal on the morning of July 16, has been located. The "gunman" is on a steamer bound from a Texas gulf port to New York. He will arrive here Tuesday and will be placed under arrest by detectives from the district attorney's office as soon as the steamer docks.

MODEL FARMS

On Michigan State Fair Grounds as Developed by Boys.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 26.—Over 100 boys of the State of Michigan have received complete instructions regarding their trip to the Michigan state fair, Sept 16 to 21 inclusive and are on edge waiting for the great trip. These boys passed the examination for the boys state fair school and won the week's stay at the fair over a goodly number of competitors. Several thousand boys took the examinations and the fortunate ones, representing eighty-three counties of the state, have been notified just how to prepare for their trip, in all probability the greatest trip of their life.

The thirty farms which comprise the minature model farm group at the state fair now show the results of hard work by the boy scouts and members of the Y. M. C. A. who have been working for some months to bring forth crops for fair time. The bays have been very much interested in their work and have accomplished much more than was expected of them. This novel feature is certain to prove a great feature of the fair.

The fair grounds never looked as beautiful as they do this year, in the opinion of Thomas E. Newton, president of the state fair. Many thousands of dollars have been expended this summer in beautifying the grounds and visitors will note a delightful change in the general arrangement.

GRAND RAPIDS—The terrible infantile paralysis made its appearance in Grand Rapids, and claimed its first victim. The four-year-old daughter of Leon Foster, a member of the Boyne City State League baseball team, succumbed to the disease.

62D CONGRESS HAS AT LAST ADJOURNED

Long Filibuster Is Broken and Sine Die Adjournment Taken.

Senator LaFollette Forces Investigation of Roosevelt Campaign Fund —Appropriations Cut Down at This Session.

The Sixty-second congress adjourned sine die at 4:30 p. m. Monday.

President Taft, at 4:10 o'clock, had signed the general deficiency appropriation bill.

What seemed to be a long filibuster was broken when the Penrose resolution to extend the inquiry of the Clapp committee investigating campaign funds into correspondence or financial transactions between John D. Archbold, George W. Perkins, Theodore Roosevelt and members of congress," passed the senate without a rollcall.

Points to Be Aired.

As finally amended the resolution authorizes the committee to probe the following points:

The statement of Senator Penrose made in the senate regarding the Standard Oil company's campaign contributions to the Republican national committee of 1904.

Expenditures and contributions in the rampaign for presidential nominations this year.

Financial transactions and correspondence relating thereto, between John D. Archbold and members of the senate and house.

Financial transactions and correspondence relating thereto, between George W. Perkins, Theodore Roosevelt and members of the senate and house.

Reports Big Saving.

Appropriations for the expenses of the government in the fiscal year of 1913 amounted to $1,019,626,143.66, according to a statement made to the senate by Senator Warren, chairman of the appropriations committee.

The total is less than that of the last year by $7,046,788, and is $21,000,000 less than the estimates. Senator Overman declared the adjourning congress had made a saving in appropriations.

"We have saved the taxpayers of the country $7,000,000 this year," he said, and that "this saving has been made despite an increase of $37,000,000 in the expenditures for pensions, rivers and harbors and for the postoffice department."

Taft Signs Bills.

President Taft signed the Panama canal bill. Afterward he sent congress a memorandum suggesting the advisability of the adoption of a resolution declaring the Panama measure was not considered by this government a violation of treaty provisions regarding the canal.

The president also signed the army appropriation bill, which carried approximately $89,000,000 in providing reforms in the organization of the war department.

The postoffice and post roads appropriation bill, which carries approximately $266,000,000, was also signed.

GRAND RAPIDS — After falling headlong from second story window, Eva Pierce, daughter of Henry Pierce, daughter of Henry Pierce, a barber, was saved from death by her descent being broken by a hammock.

NILES—Some degree of order is being restored in this vicinity following the big storm. The Michigan Central and Southern Michigan railways, whose tracks suffered from numerous washouts, have resumed service, and regular trains are all running again. The wide extent and disastrous effects of the storm are now more fully understood. Six bridges were swept away in Howard township, and nearly every culvert in the township is gone. Bridges in Niles and Pokagon townships are also gone.

MANY FACTORIES EVADING THE LAW

Complaint Against Many Manufacturers In Michigan.

Withhold from Labor Commissioner Data Which Would Enable Him to Better Conditions.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 26.—According to Labor Commissioner Powers many of the factories and industrial concerns in the state withhold from his department information which they are required by law to give regarding the conditions surrounding their workmen. Many of the largest concerns in Detroit are included in the list.

"Some of the largest manufacturers in Michigan are refusing to furnish us with data which will enable us to better conditions," declares Mr. Powers. "We are not making any threats, but we must and will have such information. It would appear that those who refuse us information have something to hide.

"The workman's compensation law goes into effect Sept. 1 and we need data that we may see that it is enforced. Many factories of Michigan are already making conditions for employes safer and more healthful in anticipation of the enforcement of the law."

A representative of the national child labor commission, which has headquarters in New York, is working in Michigan with the state labor commission. He will assist in investigating conditions.

FOR SEVENTEEN ALDERMEN

Blanket Warrant Issued in the Detroit Graft Cases.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 26. — After a months delay Prosecutor Shepherd has had a warrant issued against Edward R. Schreiter.

Charging conspiracy under the common law, a general criminal warrant was issued against Mr. Schreiter, who is to lose his job as secretary of the common council committees in one week, and seventeen of the eighteen aldermen previously arrested on bribery and other charges in connection with the Wabash Railroad company's petition for the closing of a portion of Brooklyn avenue.

Alderman Stephen S. Strzycki, of the Seventh ward, is the only one of the eighteen members of the common council previously arrested whose name is not included in the general conspiracy warrant. The prosecutor didn't have enough evidence against Strzycki, he says.

FARMER CUTS THROAT

Had Shown Signs of Mental Disturbance Recently.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Aug. 24.—Borrowing a razor from his father, stating that he wanted to shave himself, Lloyd Kimmell went to the barn after the rest of the family had left the home in Superior township on a visit to the city, placed a mirror so that he could get a good view of himself and deliberately cut his throat, severing the jugular vein.

Kimmell was thirty years old and recently returned from the west. Lately he had shown signs of mental disturbances.

New Corporations.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 26.—The following companies filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state: Wagemaker company, Grand Rapirs, $100,000; Palace Roller Rink company, Detroit, $3,100; Northwestern Review company, Detroit, increase from $3,000 to $5,000.

ARCHBOLD TELLS OF STANDARD OIL GIFT

Corroborates Penrose's Story Of Campaign Contribution.

Charges in Effect that Strenuous Attacks on the Oil Company Were Inspired by Failure to Secure Second Contribution.

John D. Archbold of the big Standard Oil company, at Washington corroborated under oath all the statements that have been made by Senator Penrose of Pennsylvania in regard to the Standard Oil company's contribution of $125,000 to the Roosevelt 1904 campaign fund and the subsequent effort to obtain another contribution of $150,000 from the same source.

Mr. Archbold, in his testimony before the senate investigating committee, went even further than did Senator Penrose. He charged in effect that President Roosevelt's attacks upon the Standard Oil company were inspired by the failure of the company's directors to give up the $150,000 that was asked for by Mr. Roosevelt's national treasurer, the late Cornelius N. Bliss.

Claim Bliss Says T. R. Was Advised.

Mr. Archbold testified emphatically that Cornelius N. Bliss had assured him that he had informed both President Roosevelt and Mr. Cortelyou of the Standard Oil's $100,000 contribution to the Roosevelt campaign. That Mr. Bliss made this stateemnt was also made under oath by Mr. Penrose, who declared he heard him say in the presence of Mr. Archbold that "Both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Cortelyou had been fully advised of the first contribution and were extremely solicticus to have Mr. Bliss' request for the second one complied with.

Mr. Archbold also asserted that he had personally received this assurance from Mr. Bliss, but that he had made such assurance one of the conditions of the gift.

Wanted Gift Appreciated.

Mr. Archbold testified that the Standard Oil board of directors in deciding to contribute $100,000 instructed him that it would be given only with the understanding that it would be accepted and "appreciated" by Roosevelt.

Senator Penrose again testified under oath that he had heard Mr. Archbold state this condition to Mr. Bliss and the latter's reply that the Standard Oil people need have no fears on that score.

Mr. Archbold made a further statement against George B. Cortelyou, who was chairman of Mr. Roosevelt's 1904 Republican national committee. He declared that Mr. Bliss, when he asked for the second contribution of $150,000, said that he wished Archbold to meet Cortelyou and to have the chairman explain the conditions which necessitated a further contribution.

Cortelyou Absent.

"The engagement was made to meet Cortelyou," said Archbold.

"Was it kept?" asked Senator Pomerene.

"No," said Archbold. "Mr. Bliss came alone and said, 'Well, you see I am alone. Mr. Cortelyou did not think it advisable to come and he told me that whatever I might say should be considered as said by him.'"

Mr. Archbold said that Mr. Bliss was one of the most honorable and upright men he had ever known and that he would accept his word on anything.

Mr. Archbold's testimony disclosed the fact that the contributions to the Roosevelt campaign were made in September and that the request for the second contribution came about the middle of October. Mr. Roosevelt's admonitory letter to Mr. Cortelyou was not written until Oct. 24.

FRAME-UP, SAYS ROOSEVELT

Former President Does Not Believe Archbold's Testimony Truthful.

Sensational charges brought against Ex-President Roosevelt by Senator Penrose before the senate committee investigating campaign contributions, and in the testimony given by John D. Archbold before that body, provoked from Colonel Roosevelt bitter replies in the form of two lengthy statements. In effect the former president disposes of every allegation made by his accusers as deliberate and malicious falsehoods.

Colonel Roosevelt reviewed every phase of the testimony given by Mr. Archbold and pictured the conditions under which it had been given as a "frame up."

"I do not for one moment believe that Mr. Archbold's testimony is truthful. He apparently possesses such a moral standard that he does not understand the infamous accusation he is making against Mr. Bliss, a dead man.

"Mr. Archbold states that he and the late H. H. Rogers visited me at the White House and that I then remarked to them that there had been some criticisms about campaign contributions. This is a falsehood.

Mrs. Bernstein Acquitted.

At Chicago a verdict by the jury in Judge Lockwood Honore's court held that Mrs. Florence Bernstein, "silent woman of sorrows," was not guilty of murder of her husband, George Bernstein. A—35.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

GRAND RAPIDS — In the present annual report of the Michigan department of labor, the inspector of mines declares that owing to lack of authority in the state mining laws he had no power to improve deplorable conditions that exist in the gypsum mines in Grand Rapids, where hundreds of miners' lives are daily endangered because of lack of emergency exists. He asserts that hoisting cages have no covers, that the safety clutches are in bad order, and that there are no hoisting signal codes.

About the Spare Room.

How often the best and sunniest bedroom in a small house is set aside for the rare visitor, while the children are cramped for space, or its master, the bread-winner, has some dark cupboard as his special sanctum. If he attempts to write in the dining-room he must bundle away his papers whenever the table is required for a meal, and the wear and tear to his temper—for every man finds it aggravating to be "hustled"—often makes him "gey ill to live with." But for the "fetish" of that seldom used spare room he would find home far more home-like, and his wife would reap a sure reward for the sacrifice of the petty pride which makes her think more of "what people will say" than of her husband's comfort.

COL. SAVIERS NO MORE.

Prominent Citizen Passes to His Reward

We take the following from The Independent of St. Louis Mich.

Col. Lemuel Saviers, capitalist, public spirited business man and long-time useful citizen of St. Louis, is dead The end came at 4:30 o'clock on Monday, August 19, 1912, at his home in this city. The funeral was held on Wednesday at his late home, Rev. Hurd Allyn Drake, of the Presbyterian church, delivering the address. Interment in Oak Grove cemetery.

Thus ends the life of one who was prominent for nearly forty years in the business life of St. Louis and Central Michigan. His life story, like that of many another who has helped to make Michigan what it is, is one of youthful struggle against difficulties, culminating in splendid success. He was born in Antrim, Ohio, December 12, 1840. His ancestors were prominent in a military way, his grandfather having come from France with LaFayette. In 1844 he came with his parents to Tecumseh, Mich. At the age of fourteen was apprentice to learn the trade of carpenter and millwright at $5.00 per month and board for the first year. When the war broke out he enlisted as a private in a company of sharpshooters. He was successively promoted to the offices of lieutenant, captain, major, lieutentant colonel, and colonel, and in September, 1864, was discharged for disability caused by wounds. After the war, though he had commanded regiments and brigades, he entered Tecumseh high school with a class of young people. After graduating he taught one year. In 1866 he married Miss Caroline M. Bills. He was for several years postmaster of Tecumseh, but in 1874, on account of ill health, he came to St. Louis to try the mineral baths. Improving in health he remained here and engaged in the lumber business, and soon became a leading power in the community.

Col. Saviers has been in poor health for a year with heart and nervous trouble, but was able to be about until nearly the day of his death. He is survived by his widow and their only daughter, Alice, wife of W. G. West.

CORUNNA — A hilarious three days' debauch ended fatally for Frank Burrows, a middle aged farm hand living near Corunna. His body, with the skull crushed, was found near the Ann Arbor railroad track, near this city, where he is believed to have sat down and gone to sleep.

GRAND RAPIDS — After falling backwards down stairs Mrs. B. Ennes of Lansing, who is here visiting her son, struck on her head. Her back comb was driven deep into the base of her skull and her condition is critical, an artery being severed. She is seventy-two years old.

18TH MICHIGAN INFANTRY.

50th Anniversary Blissfield Aug. 26

"50 Years ago Aug. 25 the 18th Mich Infantry volunteers enlisted in the service of the Civil War.

45 years ago they had their first reunion, and Aug. 26 they met in Blissfield for the 45th meeting of their organization. There were 97 old soldiers from out of town who registered, As it was their 50 anniversary, the decorations were in yellow with, "Old Glory," in every available space.

The W. R. C. served dinner to over 200, after dinner a short program was given General George Spalding gave a fine talk on the 50th Anniversary speaking in great praise of the reputation of the 18th during service, Atty. Hart gave an address along the line of history of the regiment during the war. Following the program the old soldiers held their Annual Camp Fire many of the number giving five minutes talk.

Among those who attended from Tecumseh were James Ingersoll, Hiram Wescott and wife, Mrs. Thomas Wyrill, Mrs. E. M. Lewis, Mr. Critchett, Wm Jordan and wife, George Burrough and wife and Mr. and Mrs. Ranson Mills of Tipton an inspiring feature of the re-union was a Fife and Drum Corps composed of members of the Civil War Musicians Association.

ATTENTION COMRADES

The Lenawee County Sailors and Soldiers Association Reunion will be held on Thursday September 5, 1912, on the Lenawee County Fair Grounds at the city of Adrian. We will meet at 10 o'clock at the dining hall where we can deposit our baskets and lunch boxes, visit until noon, and at one o'clock will have a fine program at Merchants hall.

Every body come and bring your lunch basket. Comrade our numbers are growing smaller every year, and we will soon be mustered out, but let us be alive while we are here, come and have a good time,

SURPRISE PARTY.

Miss Adaline McNiel was the victim of a complete surprise party Tuesday evening it being her birthday.

There were over thirty present to help her celebrate the event a notable circumstance was that Miss Adaline is the oldest of six sisters all of whom are living, were together at the party not only was Miss Adaline surprised by the company but the whole family as well. Ice cream and cake were served during the evening and a most enjoyable hour was passed in social good cheer.

The guests left many remembrances for Adaline as a testimony of their friendship and good will.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE THIRD DEGREE" OPENING ATTRACTION AT THE OPERA HOUSE

The opening date of the coming theatrical season at the Bradley Opera House is announced as Thursday September 12th, the attraction, Chas. Kline's great American play, "The Third Degree" which is by the same author and under the same management as, "The Lion and the Mouse" which played here last season. "The Third Degree" is presented with a complete scenic production and effects and a first class cast. The company appearing here on September 12th is the same one playing Jackson the 10th Adrian the 11th. It is a guaranteed attraction in every way.

Among some of the other good things in store for the theatre goers of Tecumseh are Werba & Luescher's big musical opera, "The Spring Maid" with 60 people and their own special orchestra, starring the captivating Russian prima donna, Miss Gene Luneska. Miss Luneska appeared as prima donna with Miss Anna Held in "Miss Innocence" for two seasons and one season with Grace VanStuddiford in "The Golden Butterfly" also one season in "The Chocolate Soldier."

George Sidney in "Busy Izzy" Stair & Havlin's big musical comedy.

Return date of Mr. Norman Hackett.

"The Shepherd of the Hills." Gaskill & MacVittys popular drama from the novel.

"Freckles" from the novel by Gene Stratton-Proter.

De Rue Brothers big minstrels, first minstrel booked here in years.

Leffler & Brantton's musical success "Let George Do It" (same management as "The Newlyweds.)

A possible return date of "The Wolf" and other good ones to follow.

No cheap attractions will be booked or played and patrons of the Bradley Opera House can plan on a season of the best attractions ever seen in Tecumseh.

Old-Time Market Days.

"Market-day," for ages an institution in England, still exists in certain localities, and may still be studied with interest by the tourist who visits Halifax, Nova Scotia, or Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, where large enclosures and roomy market-houses are maintained for the benefit of the country people, and such citizens as have established a regular market business. Everything from live stock to a bouquet of flowers may be brought here for sale, the owner being allotted a suitable place and charged a small fee for his accommodation, and while most of the market-people are far from being especially rustic in their dress or speech, the variety, and sometimes the peculiarity of their offerings still suggest the important part which the English market and its legal control played in the local and business life of three centuries ago.—"Nobility of the Trades—The Farmer," Charles Winslow Hall, in National Magazine.

PRIMARY ELECTION

Did you vote at the Primary Tuesday and if not, why not? If Tom, Dick and Harry were nominated on your ticket instead of those you thought better qualified for the position who can you blame but yourself, that you did not do your duty, as a citizen of the United States, it being your privilege of casting your vote for the man you preferred. OUR FUTURE PARTIES TO BE "RADICAL" AND "CONSERATIVE"

Under present conditions the Democratic party is best suited to furnish the nucleus for a new conservative party, since it is farthest removed from the old-fashioned, reactionary conservatism. It is the one party whose organization has stood the test of time. Under the leadership of Jefferson and Jackson it was distinctly the people's party. For fifty years (save for the two Cleveland administrations) it has been out of power and has hence escaped, in the eyes of the people, damaging association with predatory wealth. Just now the party has chosen for its leader an eminent educator well equipped for the task of giving direction to the conservative organization.

To the attainment of a new radical party the path is not so clear. The long and continuous tenure of office of the Republican party during the time of the growth and strengthening of great abuses serves as a disqualifying factor for the fulfillment of the function of either party in the immediate future It is thoroughly disqualified for leadership in the new conservatism. If, however, out of the Republican party there could be extemporized at once an aggresive radical party which would outstrip the Democratic party in its bid for radical support, the result would be in many respects ideal.—From "The Logic of the Coming Party Alignment," by Professor Jesse Macy, in the American Reviews for September,

FARMERS PICNIC.

Aug. 29, Devils Lake Estimated 10,000.

As usual a great crowd of people assembled at Devils Lake for the Farmers picnic, by train, by automobiles, by single rigs and by double rigs the people kept coming to this great jubilee event of the year. Though the day was cold and threating, yet everyone seemed merry and happy. The attractions were many and varied the ball game between Jackson Cuttings and Rollin was won by the Cutting team score 2 to 0, James Schermerhorn of Detroit was the orator of the day.

BEAL—McSEVENY

Married Aug. 17 1912, at the Rectory of St. Paul's Episcopal church in Saginaw, by the Rector Thomas I. Swan, Mrs. Olive Beal and Joseph McSeveny.

Mrs. Beal was a resident of Tecumseh for many years, and her friends unite in best wishes for a happy married life.

ACCIDENT

It seems most to bad that Adam's Park should be scene of another accident, when the ladies have done so much, for the amusement of the young people, but boys will be boys, and accidents will happen wherever they get together.

Ralph Hunt while playing on the trapeze Monday took quite a tumble and was thoroughly shaken up later he complained of pains in his side and Dr. Briegal was called but he was not seriously hurt and is out with his papers as usual.

POST OFFICES TO BE CLOSED SUNDAYS

As a result of a provisin of the new postal appropriation bill lately passed by Congress and signed by President Taft, all first and second class post offices will be close on Sundays. Every city in the United States is affected by this decision. Special delivery letters will however be attended to, but no mail will be put in even the lock boxes. The closing is now compelled by law.

Special Demonstration and Sale of GREAT MAJESTIC RANGES

ONE WEEK ONLY

SEPT. 2 to 7, 1912

ONE WEEK ONLY

Save $8.00

As a special inducement during our demonstration week only, with every MAJESTIC RANGE sold (prices always the same) we will give free one handsome set of ware as illustrated here.

Every piece of this ware is the best of its kind. Not a piece that is not needed in every kitchen. It cannot possibly be bought for less than $8.00. This ware is on exhibition at our store. DON'T FAIL TO SEE IT.

SPECIAL

All during this week a special demonstrator, direct from the MAJESTIC FACTORY, will be glad to show you "ALL ABOUT RANGES"—SHOW YOU why the MAJESTIC is the best range on earth at any price.

Come—If You Intend to Buy or Not.

EDUCATION lies in KNOWING THINGS—KNOW how the oven of a range is heated, KNOW how the water is heated—HOW the top is heated—WHY the MAJESTIC uses so little fuel—KNOW how a range is made, inside and out. This education may serve you in the future. DONT OVERLOOK a chance to KNOW THINGS shown by one who knows. COME.

Which Shall It Be?

Do you intend to continue laboring, burning valuable fuel and destroying high priced food with that old, worn-out cook stove?

You know that old stove eats up a lot of fuel each year.

You know you have trouble in making it bake just right, in fact, spoil a batch of bread every once in a while—you know it costs considerable for yearly repairs.

Stop and think and figure.

Wouldn't it pay you to buy a good range, a range with a reputation—

The Great Majestic Malleable and Charcoal Iron Range?

You make no mistake in buying the GREAT MAJESTIC—it's the range with the reputation—ask your neighbors. Then, too, it's made just right and of the right kind of material—MALLEABLE AND CHARCOAL IRON, riveted together, practically air tight, lined with pure asbestos board. Parts being malleable, can't break. Has a movable reservoir and an oven that don't warp. That's why the MAJESTIC uses so little fuel, bakes just right every day in the year (browns bread just right all over without turning), heats 15 gallons of water while breakfast is cooking—properly handled lasts a lifetime, and costs practically nothing for repairs.

Don't buy a range you expect to last a lifetime "unsight unseen," you'll surely be disappointed. Come to our store during demonstration week, see the GREAT MAJESTIC, have its many exclusive features explained, find out why the MAJESTIC is 800 per cent stronger than other ranges where most ranges are weakest.

Don't Overlook the Date. This is a Special Invitation to You and Your Friends and Neighbors.

Pastor's Merited Rebuke.

When Samuel S. Colber was preaching in an old log schoolhouse in Johnson county, Missouri, in 1852, his congregation was quite small. One Sunday all were sitting at the desks forward near the puncheon floor. The sermon was monotonous and the old log seats had no backs. Observing the sleepy, downcast look of the congregation, the minister woke them up by shouting: "Arouse, heaven is not under the floor!"

IMPROVEMENTS ABOUT THE TOWN.

The new house of Wade L. Jones is nearly ready for occupancy and is one of the most pleasant little homes in town all of the modern improvements have been added the decorations are fine. We congratulate Mr. and Mrs. Jones on their lovely home.

B. J. Pulvers house is still in the hands of the workmen but he hopes to be at home to his friends the first of October. The house is a fine bungalow with a pleasant outlook everything finished in the best up to date style and Mr. and Mrs. Pulver may well be proud of their charming home

The business of Brown & Co has made it necessary for them to add more sheds. They are building in the rear of the shop of Wm. Hazlett.

The corner they occupy was so long an unsightly blot on our street that everyone is rejoiced that this firm has been so successful and improved the property until now it is pointed to with pride as a flourishing business center.

The work on the property lately purchased by Dr. Hardy is progressing fast the addition on the west side for office rooms is nearly completed. The main building has been raised on a new foundation and other changes are being made.

Down town the stores have also caught the fever of improvement, the Webster Anderson Co are reconstructing in their east store which is to be exclusively given up to ready to wear stock. A dress making department will also be one of the latest features.

W. H. McMinn at the Daisy Meat Market is improving his place of business, he has installed a new refrigerator and other fixtures which with the new sewer connections will make this one of the nicest places of business in town

DICKINSON—FRASER

Married in Besserner, Mich., Tuesday August 27, Fred Claire Dickinson of Tecumseh and Miss Hazel Irene Fraser of Besserner.

The young couple will be at home to their many friends in Tecumseh after October first

When a young man starts out on a vacation trip without any definite purpose mentioned to his friends, it is a good plan to look out. Fred is an innocent looking young man, but evidently knows what he is about. His many friends congratulate him on his marriage and wish the young couple all happiness.

WHY IT SUCCEEDS

Because It's for One Thing Only and Tecumseh People Appreciate This.

Nothing can be good for everything. Doing one thing well brings success. Doan's Kidney Pills do one thing only.

They help sick kidneys.

They relieve backache, kidney and bladder trouble.

Here is Tecumseh evidence to prove it.

Mrs. Sarah E Austin, Pearl St. Tecumseh, Mich, says: "I have had no need of Doan's Kidney Pills or any other kidney medicine since 1908 I can still recommend this preparation highly. I suffered from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint for more than a year and when someone told me that Doan's Kidney Pills were effective in cases of this kind, I obtained a supply at Wright & Son's Drug Store. They help me immediately and I continued their use until I was well."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agent for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

"I'm tired of laying eggs," complained the hen. "And I'm tired of lying about them," claimed the dealer in the coldstorage product.

Hay fever and asthma make August a month of intense suffering to many people. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound gives prompt ease and relief, and is soothing and healing to the inflamed membranes, Wm. M. Merethew, N. Searsport, Me., says: "A few doses of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound relieved me of a severe attack of asthma and less than a bottle caused a complete cure." Refuse suqstitutes. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

THE TRIALS OF A TRAVELER

"I am a traveling salesman," writes E. E. Youngs, E. Berkshire. Vt., "and was often troubled with constipation and indigestion till I began to use Dr. Kings New Life Pills, which I have founp an excellent remedy." For all stomach, liver or kidney troubles they are unequaled. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

It is said "most women have five senses. Some have common sense and a sense of humor, how many have you?

Dr. C. H. Ellsworth, Dentist, 16 Baldwin St., Rochester, N. Y., says Foley Kidney Pills gave him immediate relief and strengthened him wonderfully. "I have been bothered with weak kidneys and bladder trouble and suffered much pain. Foley Kidney Pills gave me immediate relief and strengthened me wonderfully. I am pleased to recommend their use." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Robert W. Hetter, Lawrenceville, Mo, who had been bothered with kidney trouble for two years, says. "I tried three different kinds of kidney pills but with no relief. My neighbor told to use Foley Kidney Pills, I took three bottles of them, and got a permanent cure. I recommend them to everybody." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh,

FACES SCHOOL PROBLEM

Ionia Must Make Room for Increased Attendance.

Ionia, Mich., Aug. 26.—One of the problems that is confronting the Ionia school board is how to take care of an anticipated 16 per cent increase in attendance over last year, when school opens in Ionia Sept. 3. Last year there were about all that could be conveniently handled, but with forty-three additional pupils coming from the eighth grade and eighty-three applications already in hand from pupils who come from the rural districts of the county, the total high school attendance will be around 200, greater than ever before in the history of the local high school. This comes in face of the fact that the rural tuition was increased this year from $20 to $30.

PORT HURON — A rather mysterious diamond robbery was reported to the local police authorities by J. G. Philpott, a local wholesale liquor dealer. Diamonds to the value of $2,700 were taken from Philpott's apartment over his store. The police are baffled, as there is no tangible clue upon which to work. The stolen gems are the property of Mrs. Philpott.

LANSING — The numerous cases against the striking molders charged with violating the injunction issued by Judge Collingwood was resumed in circuit court. Officials of the national organizations arrived in the city and overtures were immediately made for a settlement. It is said the employers refused. Harry Langley, leader of the strikers, denied picketing.

A WOMAN'S GOOD LOOKS

Depend on her general health and freedom from pain. Many a woman looks old before her time because of those irregularities which are essentially feminine. Starting from early womanhood, she suffers from frequently recurring derangements that upset her womanly health. If she be beautiful she grows into that mellow age without wrinkles and crowfeet about the eyes or the blue circles underneath. It is invariably the rule that such women suffer little, or not at all, from womanly derangements which sap the health and leave in the face the tell-tale story of pain and suffering. Dr. R. V. Pierce, the famous specialist in the diseases of women, found a prescription in his early practice that soothed the organism peculiar to womanhood—oiled the machinery, as it were, of the human system—and helped the woman to pass those painful periods that scar-lined and aged her face. This remedy became the well-known Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that has benefited thousands of women and saved them from misery and suffering at different periods in life.

MRS. PIERCE.

MRS. HARKELY E. PIERCE, of 244 Bright Street, Sarnia, Ont., writes: "I am now a well woman after suffering for three years and doctoring with several different doctors, each one saying it was something different, and the last one, after putting me through a thorough examination, said I was suffering from a growth, which, in time, would result in cancer, and said I would not live more than two years if not operated upon right away. I became hopelessly discouraged but would not consent to the operation as I was too weak and too much afraid, but at last, through the advice of a friend, I tried Dr. Pierce's medicines, and after using two bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' I immediately felt a change. I also used two boxes of 'Healing Suppositories' and eight boxes of 'Lotion Tablets,' and can safely praise the name of Dr. Pierce's medicines to all who suffer from any female disease, for these medicines are all they are claimed to be, and I hope will help others as they have helped me."

THREE DROWN; ONE RESCUED

Canoe Sinks and Survivor Drifts Two Hours Before Help Comes.

Detroit. Mich., Aug. 27.—George Robinson, Edward Jolly and Louis Loose were drowned and Henry Steinberg was rescued in the Detroit river, after their canoe sank.

The four had been paddling about at the head of Belle Isle when the craft took in water and hurled them into the river. Steinberg clung to the canoe nearly two hours before being sighted by a passing launch.

WAREHOUSE IS ROBBED

Two Men and Woman Are Arrested in Kalamazoo.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 27.—William Matthews, Jesse Clerk and a woman named Jeanette Whitcomb were arrested, charged with a wholesale theft of groceries and other supplies from a warehouse owned by Lemon & Wheeler

Just how much has been taken by the thieves is not known, but it is believed it will amount to several hundred dollars.

TRAVERSE CITY — Sister Mary Derencia, who was thirty years old, died at the home of the Dominican Sisters here. She was a teacher in the Catholic school at Carson City for a number of years. The body will be taken to Grand Rapids, where the funeral will be held Thursday morning from St. Alphonsus church.

ANN ARBOR — About a half a dozen stock and freight cars got away from Ann Arbor switching crew on the grade connecting the Ann Arbor with the Michigan Central and ran wild into a loaded stock car. A car with twenty-six cattle in it crumpled up like a jack knife and crushed the life out of twenty cattle.

BATTLE CREEK—No Battle Creek church can have a "grab-bag," no lodge a raffle nor a card club a prize contest, according to a statement made by Chief of Police Farrington. His decision came about as the result of an attempt by the church to have a ban placed on all slot machines in the city.

WATER POWER BILLS KILLED

Representatives Rainey and Foster of Illinois Lead in the Slaughter.

At Washington, D. C. a dozen bills on the house calendar to permit water power development by private concerns were "killed." Opponents of the so-called "water power trust," led by Representatives Rainey and Foster of Illinois, had the bills stricken from the calendar.

Among the measures defeated was the omnibus bill reported by the house interstate commerce committee, which includes wholesale grants of power and dam sites.

GENERAL BOOTH DEAD

Head of the Salvation Army Passes Away in London.

At London, Eng., General William Booth, commander-in-chief of the Salvation Army died during the night. He had been failing since last May, when an operation for cataract was performed on his left eye.

Bramwell Booth, son of the dead general, in accepting generalship of the Army, said that if even no other condition moved him to take the post he would do so because "it was my general's wish. I am strengthened in that purpose by the fact, of which I had no knowledge until a few moments ago, that the appointment was made during the lifetime of my beloved mother."

BRAMWELL BOOTH.

The new commander-in-chief invoked the strength and wisdom from God to enable him to discharge his responsibilities. He promised to discharge his obligations to the utmost of his ability.

CIRCUS TENT BURNS

Crowd of 25,000 Sees Spectacular Fire at Sterling, Ill.

At Sterling, Ill., while about 25,000 persons awaited an opportunity to attend Ringling Brothers' circus in the afternoon a blazing shingle, blown off a burning barn near by, fell on the big tent and set it on fire. Soon afterward the blazing canvass fell, carry- to the ground all the scenery and trappings.

The damage was estimated at $10,000 on canvas, $15,000 on apparatus and $5,000 on scenery. All the animals were taken out of their tents, but only the main tent burned.

OWOSSO—The Thirty-second annual reunion of the celebrated Sixteenth Michigan Volunteer Infantry here brought together two brothers who had not met previously for about forty-five years. James A. Clark, who is an inmate of the Grand Rapids Soldiers' home, and Robert B. Clark of St. Cloud, Florida, served together in Company I.

DETROIT—A good many farmers in Cass county are losing hogs as a result of hog cholera which is at the present time prevalent in that section. Farmers south and east of Cassopolis seem to be the ones who have suffered the heaviest losses. Harry D. Gleason is the heaviest loser so far, he having lost sixty hogs within the past few weeks.

MUSKEGON—After having wandered aimlessly in the woods near this city for four nights and three days, Mrs Louise Vanderlain, who disappeared from her home, was found by a posse of citizens and deputy sheriffs. Her clothing was cut to ribbons from tramping through the heavy woods and swamps. Her recovery is doubtful.

LITTLE BROWN HOUSE

By A. HOWARD GUNTER

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

The divorce was granted, the papers signed, and Margery Graham and Henry Wade, whom God had joined together some eight years earlier, were put asunder by Norton & Norton, as attorneys for the husband, and young Keley West, representing Mrs. Wade. The whole affair, their friends agreed, had been beautifully managed. Incompatibility was the plea, and the only disagreeable feature of the arrangement was that which necessitated a final meeting of the parties to the suit at the office of Norton & Norton.

Margery had cried before the meeting, for it seemed absurd to think of Henry as not belonging to her any more, as marrying some other woman, perhaps. Then she had dried her eyes, powdered her nose and put on her most becoming suit, feeling that Henry must be made to see that he was losing something precious; and flanked by her bosom friend, Rita Whitmore, and on the arm of young West, she had come to the appointment with just that look of resigned martyrdom on her face which the occasion demanded.

Henry came to the meeting by himself and looked frankly worn and wretched, moreover, he made no attempt to ease the embarrassment of the situation, but was cold, gruff and unnatural, "a perfect brute," as Rita said afterward, with a congratulatory squeeze of Margery's hand.

Margery went back to the mansion that Henry had built for her when they moved into town five years before, and, putting her head down on Polly Marie's curls, cried so that her tears ran down Polly's fat neck. That tickled Polly Marie and she laughed such a splendid, hearty gurgle that Margery had to laugh, too, though she was very miserable. A burning sense of indignation had upheld her during the ordeal, but now that Henry had granted all her demands the transgressor had in some way managed to put her in the wrong. She was sick of life, she hated this marble palace, which had been the scene of her troubles, and suddenly she remembered the little brown house.

She had not been there for years, because it was ever so far out in an undeveloped suburb, that small, snug home where she and Henry had begun housekeeping when they ran away from their people and were married years ago. Old Martha, her nurse, lived there now, and kept everything just as they had left it.

"Dress Polly Marie for a walk," she called to the governess, and began stuffing things into her handbag.

The governess protested, pointing to the heavy clouds that were gathering outside, but her mistress was obdurate.

There was a long trolley ride and then a walk across an open field, with Polly Marie, who had fallen asleep, hanging limply over one shoulder, and the bag thumping against her ankles in a most uncomfortable way. But she struggled bravely on, for over the high stone wall in the distance she could see the gables of her haven.

Through the iron gate, up the long walk, and then came disappointment; for the sitting-room shutters were closed and Martha was evidently not at home. A moment she paused in consternation, then she recalled the broken hasp on the shutter of a back window. It had been so long since she was there that she had almost forgotten. All she had to do was to climb on the garden bench, pull the shutter open, and—there she was!

But this was not so easy with Polly Marie and the bag, and only after two or three futile leaps did she reach the ledge and scramble to the floor inside. The sky had darkened and great splashes of rain were falling, but from her vantage ground, Margery leaned out and called defiantly, "Rain away, rain away, we're safe in our little brown house."

From room to room she went and the house was full of memories—nice, domesticated memories—that hovered about the linen closet and purred from the kettle on the stove. The tiny bedrooms, a dining room, a sitting room and best—or worst—of all, Henry's den. At that door she stopped; it would be so dark in there, for the heavy panels needed a cheery fire to light them up. With something like a sob, she threw open the door and caught her breath with sheer joy. A bright fire crackled on the hearth and the reading lamp brought out warm lights from the brasses in the room, and in front of the fire, with his head buried in his hands, sat Henry.

But of course Henry should be in his den. It was the most natural thing in the world. So; "Please," she begged, "may we come in? We're dreadfully cold."

"Are you real, Margy," asked Henry, peering at her across the circle of light. Then wonderingly, "Come in, whether you're real or not—out of the darkness, out of the storm."

She stumbled across the floor with her burden and, dropping down in a huge wicker chair before the fire, began unpeeling the sleeping Polly Marie. "It isn't a bag of chocolate eclairs, nor a poodle," she assured him proudly, "it's a baby."

Polly Marie emerged like a fat blossom, and Margery stripped off the damp stockings and held the tiny pink toes to the fire. Then she snuggled deep into her chair, cuddled Polly against her heart, and sighed a long, deep sigh.

"Oh, homey little house!" she whispered.

Henry lit his pipe and settled himself deep in his arm chair.

"Right little, tight little, nest," he answered, through clouds of smoke, and did not even pretend to be ashamed of such foolishness.

"Oh, cozy, cunning home," cried Margery, with great content.

They sat for some time in silence while outside the storm roared and whistled through the trees. A vivid flash of lightning tore the darkness and Margy jumped and squealed.

"Not afraid of that?" asked Henry, as of old.

She almost forgot what the answer should be, but got it out before the pause was noticeable. "Not when you are here," she answered. "But Henry, what are you doing here? I thought you had rooms at the club."

"Which shows how much you knew about me, or cared," he answered gloomily. "I've been living here over two months, with old Martha keeping house for me. She's gone to her sick daughter tonight. When the trouble got so bad"—he winced and spoke with lowered voice—"I couldn't stand it, Margy. I bolted from the club one night and came back home."

He leaned over and touched one of Polly's pink toes. "Fine kiddie," he said, "very fine kiddie. But where did you get her, Margy?"

Margery flushed with pleasure. "I'm so glad you like her. It's Mary Hall's baby. You remember poor Mary, that went to school with me? Her husband left her nothing, you know, and when she died the baby was put in an asylum, a horrid place where she had to wear a uniform." She hugged Polly Marie close. "I'd been going to see the little thing, and when the trouble got so bad"—her turn to speak with lowered voice—"I couldn't fight it out alone. So I went right down and got Polly Marie for my very own."

"I'm glad," declared Wade with satisfaction. "The little house had always wanted a baby, Margy."

"Perhaps," she suggested, "if we'd had one it wouldn't have happened as it did." Then, for a woman must ever meddle with the tree of useless knowledge, "What made it happen, Henry? Was it the stacks of money that brought on our di—"

But his hand was over her lips. "Hush, Margy! Not one word of that. That happened back there in the world. When you came through the iron gate, under the honeysuckle arbor, and raised the brass knocker on the door—you remember how we searched the town for that knocker?—then you left the world behind. You must never say that word in here, for it would hurt the little brown house. You see, Margy, the little brown house is a real home, and the minute that word is spoken, or even thought of, within its four walls, a real home dies."

"How stupid of me," she cried, "and to think I almost killed the little house. I mustn't say that word even to tell you how sorry I am, Henry, that I was so foolish and unforgiving?"

"No, my dear, not even to give me the chance to tell you how ashamed I am of the wrong I did you."

He drew a bowl of violets across the table and held them toward her. "They'll make you forget, Margy. They grow so close to mother earth that they know her sweet, wise secrets."

"Oh, wild, faint, woodsy smell!" she cried and buried her face in the flowers.

"Henry," she declared, looking up at him with sudden understanding, "you've been working in the garden all day. Henry, you didn't—you couldn't be so cruel as to plant my pet patch?"

He nodded guiltily. "How could I know this wonderful thing would happen?"

"Oh, you're the stupid one now," she answered joyfully. "For shame to have so little faith. Didn't you know I'd come home at last?"

"You're right," he apologized, "but you see I had to plant ever so hard today, to take my mind off other things. Tomorrow I'll dig it up and you can plant it all over again."

He made a chain of the largest blossoms and put it on her head, drawing her hair about her face. "Madonna," he called her, "my lady of the earth and man and all things sorrowful and human," and stooping quickly he kissed her.

Margery blushed like a schoolgirl and sat up in a sudden, wide-eyed remembrance. "Henry, Henry, I must go. I can't stay here tonight. You aren't my husband any longer. What would people say?"

"'People' would be horrified. But you can't go out in all that storm, Margy." He laughed a long, contented laugh that defied the storm, the world and "people." "Tomorrow we'll be married again to restore your reputation, and in the meantime let us go on being happy. You aren't my wife, Margy; I'm not your husband, and Polly isn't our child; but for all that the kettle is singing on the hearth tonight and we're a real family in a real home."

English Women Intemperate.

"Women now provide a disproportionately large part of the habitual drunkards," says the head constable of Liverpool, England. Thus, during 1910, in the class of three or more convictions within twelve months there were 133 men and 184 women, and in the class of six to sixty convictions (all told) there were 733 men and 774 women. For two years the "black list" in Liverpool has consisted solely of women.—"Temperance."

WRATH CAME IN VERY HANDY

So Mad After Spat With Sweetheart That He Whipped a Bandit.

Sam Jones was mad clear through. He had just had a quarrel with his sweetheart, and although he had concealed his anger until he left her home he was now boiling over with rage. As usual, Sam had got the worst of the little spat, for in spite of his 6 feet 2 and his great strength his diminutive lady love had wound him around her finger like so much ribbon.

As Sam alighted from the elevated train at his home station his cheeks were still flushed with helpless anger and he was just spoiling for a fight or almost any kind of a chance to even up matters on some one. His wish was destined to be granted sooner than he knew, for when he descended the elevated steps to the street a figure blocked his path, a revolver was held a few inches below his nose, and a gruff voice commanded, "Come on! Shell out, Jack!"

Without a second's hesitation Sam smashed the would-be robber full in the face with his brawny fist and sent him reeling several paces backward and stunned him so that he dropped his weapon. Both Sam and the thief were so surprised that they merely stared at each other for a few seconds, then the latter remembered that he possessed a good pair of legs and started to run at express speed.

"Here's a good one," Sam laughed grimly as he set out in hot pursuit of his assailant. "This fellow intended to hold me up and now I'm going to hold him up just to balance things a trifle." Sam was soon forced to give up the chase, however, for he was burdened with a heavy ulster, while the holdup man wore a light sweater.

"Gee," chuckled Sam, "if I hadn't been as hot under the collar as I was, as a result of that little fuss with Alice, I'll bet I'd have shelled out like a little lamb when he presented the invitation. I'll go up there tomorrow night with a big box of chocolates and square things up."

Mirage Easy to Be Seen.

The celebrated Fata Morgana, a presentation of natural "moving pictures" on an immense scale which is occassionally seen in the Straits of Messina, is explained by a scientific writer as being a mirage, such as frequently occurs in various parts of the world; "in fact," he says, "one may see a mirage any day by looking through the stratum of air overlying a hot stove, or adjacent to the side of a wall heated in the sunshine." Young scientists will be interested in verifying this statement.

Kaw Indian Chief Remembered.

Henry Bluejacket, a celebrated Kaw Indian chief, visited central Missouri in 1838. He spoke English well, was gentlemanly and agreeable in his deportment. He was physically large and handsome. His dress was a loose sack hunting jacket of blue cloth with fringed buckskin leggins and moccasins and a foxskin cap. Contrary to the usual custom among Indians, the Kaws usually wore caps on their heads made of fox, coon or wildcat skin.

LABOR HEARS DENEEN

Governor Addresses Great Assemblage at Springfield.

Deals Principally with Topics Peculiarly Interesting to Earners of Wages.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 2.—Governor Deneen was the orator at a big Labor day celebration at Springfield. Laboring forces from all of central Illinois held their celebration at the state capital and a big crowd was present.

The state executive dealt with labor problems in the main. The gathering at Springfield was not political in its nature, aside from the fact that all such affairs are looked upon as semipolitical in a presidential year, say the political leaders.

This effort of the governor will be followed within a few days with a stumping tour that will cover all sections of the state. The governor plans to make as many as three counties a day in his effort to cover 102 political divisions in the state. The last two weeks of the canvass will be devoted exclusively to Chicago and Cook county.

The Deneen Republican state textbook is nearing completion. This document is to be placed in the hands of every voter in the state. It will contain a record of Republican progress in Illinois. Governor Deneen and the others who are aiding in preparation of the book say the record of administrative history is progressive from start to finish.

A Big Haul.

Anderson, Ind., Sept. 2.—Mike Moloski is in jail here charged with attempting to steal the ticket wagon belonging to a dog and pony show. He had just been discharged by the show when he sighted the wagon, in which was a safe containing $1,700. Hitching a team of ponies to it, he started to drive away but was overtaken.

TRAIN IS DITCHED IN NORTH WOODS

Accident to Palace Car Flyer on Northwestern Railroad.

SEVEN KILLED; 21 INJURED

Help Is Long In Arriving on Account of Loneliness of Scene of Wreck Five Miles South of Shawano, Wisconsin.

Shawano, Wis., Sept. 2.—Seven persons, including nearly the entire crew, were killed and twenty-one injured, some seriously, when a fast sleeping car train of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, was ditched in a washout caused by a cloudburst five miles south of this city.

Wreck In North Woods.

General Manager Cantillon of the railroad was on the train in his private car with his family and a party of friends, but all escaped injury. The train was wrecked in the lonely part of the northern woods and it was hours before help could arrive.

The train is a palace car train, consisting of ten sleeping cars en route back to Chicago and the south with their freight of families of the rich who have been spending the latter part of the summer in the northern woods.

Steel Pullman Not Smashed.

Almost every member of the train crew was instantly killed. Only the occupants of the smoking car and the day coach were among those injured. Those in the one Pullman car that went over the embankment were thrown out of their berths, but, owing to the steel structure of the car, it was not smashed, and its occupants escaped with slight injuries.

The dead:

C. Bethin, conductor; George Marks, brakeman; Carroll Mennett, baggageman; Stewart C. Sheldon, express messenger; John Jones, engineer, all of Green Bay.

W. S. Calkins, Shawano, passenger.

Alex. Sheols, mail clerk, Clintonville.

AVIATOR DROPS "BOMBS"

Jack McGee Shows What Harm Might Be Done with Dynamite.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 2.—Jack McGee, the aviator, gave an exhibition of what he could do in throwing "bombs" down upon the government station here. Starting out about 5:30 a. m. in his biplane McGee carried with him a number of small packages of flour on which were pinned notes asking what would have been done if the contents had been dynamite. He dropped three bombs at strategic points.

The test was perfectly satisfactory to McGee and it was made without any previous knowledge of the officers at the various stations, who were taken a little by surprise by seeing a birdman soaring over their heads so early in the morning.

GEN. CARTER TO SUCCEED POTTS

Will Have Command of Central Division, War Dept.

HEADQUARTERS IN CHICAGO

Orders Received from Major General Leonard Wood, Chief of Staff of the Army—General Carter a Brave Soldier.

Chicago, Sept. 2.—Official orders placing Major General William H. Carter in command of the central division of the war department with headquarters in Chicago were received from Major General Leonard Wood, chief of the army staff.

General Carter will succeed Brigadier General R. D. Potts, who has been temporarily in charge since the establishment of the central division a little over a year ago. General Potts will return to Fort Leavenworth as commander of that army bailiwick of which post he had never been relieved.

On Leave of Absence.

General Carter will assume command after a three months' leave of absence, granted him by the secretary of war. General Potts will remain in charge until the leave of his successor expires.

General Carter was appointed commander of the division by President Taft. He was in command of the department of the lakes with headquarters in Chicago prior to the creation of the central division.

General Carter was in charge of the department of the lakes from Feb. 1, 1906, to Nov. 16, 1908. When the central division was formed he became a member of the general staff in Washington. He was born in Nashville, Tenn., in 1851. In 1873 he was graduated from the United States Military Academy.

Given Medal for Bravery.

He was awarded a medal of honor for distinguished bravery in action against the Apache Indians at Cibicu Creek, Ariz., in August of 1881. He then became a student of army organization and administration and is given the credit for being chiefly responsible for the technical details of military legislation of the present army organization.

The official notification carries with it the appointment of Major General William W. Wotherspoon, now commander of the department of the gulf, to succeed General Carter as a member of the general staff.

DE PALMA WINS TWO RACES

Takes Both National and Free-for-All Contests at Elgin.

Elgin, Ill., Sept. 2. — Smashing all records for the Kane county course, Ralph De Palma, who never before in his spectacular career had won an automobile classic, was twice crowned king of speed at Elgin.

Twice Starter Fred J. Wagner flecked the grease-splattered hood of the Italian's gray Mercedes with the checkered flag of victory. Twice the daring descendant of the Latins was hailed as hero by 60,000 speed enthusiasts who linked Chicago and Elgin with a chain of motor cars and worshiped at the shrine of Velocity in the blistering sun.

In winning the Elgin trophy De Palma covered the 254 and a fraction miles in 3:42:20, an average speed of 68.4 miles an hour. He finished the free-for-all races in 2:55:36.

NATION MAY ACT ON BOMB CHARGE

Investigation Being Made of Alleged Dynamite Shipment.

BEARING ON THE WOOD CASE

United Labor Will Watch Prosecution with Interest, to See that No Favor Is Shown Those In High Places.

Washington, Sept. 2.—The federal government may participate in the prosecution of the men charged with planting dynamite during the strike at Lawrence.

The department of justice is investigating reports that there was an illegal interstate shipment of dynamite for use in Lawrence. If this charge is well founded, the shippers will be subjected to a heavy penalty under a federal statute.

Dynamite Shipments Against Law.

The law forbids interstate shipments of dynamite improperly labeled or lacking a label. One of the reports received by the department is that dynamite was found attached to the truck of a car that arrived in Philadelphia and which went to that city via Lawrence from Bellows Falls, Vt.

The department will seek to establish the purchasers of the dynamite, its shippers, and the men to whom it was consigned. This information may be of value in connection with the trial of William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen company, and others indicted on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the planting of dynamite at Lawrence.

May Affect Wood Defense.

If it should be discovered that Mr. Wood had nothing to do with the shipment a strong case would be obtained by the defense. If the evidence should connect the men indicted with the shipment their case would be weakened.

The district attorney at Boston instituted an investigation last spring into some alleged dynamite shipments. He failed to substantiate the charges, according to the department of justice and the matter was dropped.

The administration feels that labor will watch the Lawrence affair with intense interest, and will insist upon as thorough an effort to convict the guilty as was displayed in connection with the prosecution of the McNamaras at Los Angeles. It is realized that there must be no favor shown and that no matter how high the station of the men on trial or what their influence may be, absolute justice must be administered.

Under such circumstances, the attorney general will follow every clew with a view in determining who violated the law in connection with illegal dynamite shipments.

MAY OUST TAFT MEN

Roosevelt Men of California G. O. P. Body Plan a Blow at Foes.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 2.—The Roosevelt faction of the executive committee of the Republican state central committee, which claims the right to transact the committee business in opposition to the Taft faction, will make a second attempt to decide whether certain members shall be expelled for having solicited funds for Taft's support without authorization.

San Francisco members of the state central committee are the ones under fire. They are officials of the San Francisco county committee, which Taft men control, while the state body is dominated by the Roosevelt adherents. Meyer Lissner of Los Angeles, chairman of the Republican state central committee and an ardent Roosevelt supporter, is leading the fight for the expulsion of the Taft men.

COL. ROOSEVELT IN OWN DEFENSE

Letter to Senator Moses E. Clapp Is Given Out.

DENIES STANDARD OIL GIFT

Says that Present Attack of John D. Archbold and Senator Penrose Is Solely Upon Late Cornelius N. Bliss.

New York, Sept. 2.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt gave out the letter which he gave to Senator Moses E. Clapp, chairman of the senate campaign investigating committee, before which John D. Archbold and Senator Penrose charged that Mr. Roosevelt had been party to the soliciting and accepting of Standard Oil campaign contributions in 1904.

Mr. Roosevelt almost at the opening gives the lie in these words:

Colonel Charges Falsehood.

"As regards the statements of Mr. Penrose and Mr. Archbold that with my consent or knowledge Mr. Bliss asked the Standard Oil people for $100,000 or any other sum, or received such sum from them, it is an unqualified falsehood."

Farther on Colonel Roosevelt compares Senator Penrose to a grafting policeman, and adds, "His language is precisely the language that might be used by a blackmailing police officer in a big city in advising the keeper of a law-breaking liquor saloon or a gambling house to contribute liberally, because otherwise he 'might incur hostility in certain quarters.' If this language were proved against the policeman he would be removed from the police force."

Full Publicity Promised.

Mr. Roosevelt promises that there shall be full publicity of contributions in his primary last spring.

"I wish to emphasize the fact," he continues, "that the testimony of Mr. Archbold and Mr. Penrose in this matter is an attack on Mr. Bliss, who is dead, and is also, unwittingly, the severest possible reflection on themselves; but it is in no sense any attack on me except insofar as they assert that the dead man said that I knew of his request for money from them.

"I do not believe that Mr. Bliss said this any more than I believe their accusation that Mr. Bliss deliberately tried to blackmail the Standard Oil company. But please keep in mind that this is an assault on Mr. Bliss and not on me."

After a sweeping denial of knowledge or consent to any of the steps in the transactions as set forth by the two witnesses, he pays a glowing tribute to the memory of Mr. Bliss, but adds that, of course, he could not say whether Mr. Bliss had asked for or had received the money.

Quotes Old Bliss Interview.

Futher to prove that his skirts are entirely clean in the matter, although the skirts of others might not be so clean, Mr. Roosevelt quotes from what purported to be an interview with Cornelius N. Bliss, published in the New York Herald of Dec. 24, 1911. In this Mr. Bliss is quoted as correcting Edward H. Harriman's assertion that in 1904 he received word of the desperate state in New York from Mr. Roosevelt. Mr. Bliss said that he conveyed that information to the railroad man. He discusses the situation and the steps taken to raise the $200,000. At the conclusion of the interview there are these questions quoted in the Roosevelt letter which apparently farther involve Mr. Bliss:

"Then the president had nothing to do with the raising of the money?"

Answer: "Not once in the conference of the committee was there any suggestion that he was doing it. The only thing that Mr. Roosevelt had to do with such matters was to issue orders that money was not to be accepted from this or that person. His orders were ignored, as it was recognized that this was something about which he must not interfere and I brooked no interference."

Cortelyou Correspondence Cited.

The letter to Senator Clapp, which is about 15,000 words long, goes exhaustively into his correspondence with Chairman Cortelyou of Oct. 26 and 27, in which it is ordered that the $100,000 from the Standard Oil company be returned at once, although the sum is not mentioned, all of which was just after the time that Alton B. Parker had first made his charge that the Republican nominee and his chairman were obtaining money from the great corporations in an effective way.

PRAYERS FOR SCHOOLS

Protestant Churches to Send up United Petitions Sunday.

Plan Is to Make Invocation for 17,000,000 Children an Annual Custom.

New York, Sept. 2.—Every Protestant church in the country has been requested to pray for the public school next Sunday by the promoters of the second World's Christian conference. From 2,500 pulpits a unversal prayer for the 17,000,000 children of the American public school system will be offered and it is planned to make this event an annual custom. Sept. 8 has been chosen for this purpose, as it opens the week when all the larger cities reopen their schools.

This universal prayer is a part of the movement of the National Reform association which will culminate in the second World's Christian Citizenship Conference to be held in Portland, Me., next summer from June 29th to July 6th.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. The Men Who Succeed as heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success, to-day, demands health. To ail is to fail. It's utter folly for a man to endure a weak run-down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas. B. Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders, and deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well." Try them. Only 50 cents at C. A. Aunt Judy

By Philip Kean

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Aunt Judy in the eyes of her nephews and nieces was too old for romance, yet Aunt Judy was only thirty-eight.

When Newton Hale moved to Queen's Point he brought with him all the belongings of a man to whom money is no object. There were motor cars, riding horses and dogs, golf sticks, a half dozen trunks, a man and two maids and a housekeeper. His coming revolutionized the dull little place.

"He says he likes the Oakes so well that he's going to buy it. He enjoys a quiet life, and he hates the city," Natalie said to Aunt Judy as the older woman fitted a sheer pink lawn on the girlish figure.

"He's sensible," said Aunt Judy. "There isn't a prettier place in the world than the Oaks."

Natalie turned to get a better view of herself in mirror. "Don't you think you'd better make the skirt a little shorter in the back?" she asked.

Aunt Judy pinned it up obediently. "I like pink," she said, sitting back on her heels to view the result. "I used to wear it a lot when I was a girl."

"Did you?" said Natalie, vaguely. "Do you think you can get my dress done by Tuesday?"

"I'll try."

"Mr. Hale is going to give a moonlight garden party. I guess you'll have to chaperon us, Aunt Judy. He said we'd better ask some older person."

"I don't know what I'll wear."

"Oh, anything—nobody'll notice," said Natalie.

Aunt Judy had a momentary sense or resentment. Nobody took any interest in her.

An old white dimity, scant of skirt and with an embroidered collar proved rather becoming, and Aunt Judy decided to wear it. Some impulse guided her to pile her wavy hair on top of her head in a style which accorded with the quaintness of the gown. At the gate she stopped and picked two sprigs of white lilac and tucked them in her belt. Then she wandered across the road and up a long lane and entered Newton Hale's garden.

There was an old sundial in the garden, and Aunt Judy loved the motto which was carved on it: "Grow old along with me—the best is yet to be."

As she came out from a long lane of blossoming almond bushes she saw the master of the house standing at the top of the terrace. He was in white flannels, and from the top of his handsome gray head to the toe of his white buckskin shoes he was up-to-date, well groomed.

He came down quickly. "Which of the Morgans is it?" he asked, smiling. "I have always known them by the color of their hair—it's like old copper with the firelight on it."

"I am Aunt Judy," said the little lady. "I fancy I'm early—but I like it here in the garden."

"I like it, too," he said.

Then the young folks came, and Natalie took possession of their host. "You said we should have a ride in the motorboat."

"Surely," he responded.

There was room for all but one.

"Aunt Judy won't mind," said Natalie, carelessly, "will you, Aunt Judy?"

When they came back they trooped to the dining room. Newton Hale gave Aunt Judy the place of honor. After dinner she went out on the porch, and Newton Hale followed her. Natalie, coming out later, looked in vain for Mr. Hale. She did not think of Aunt Judy. She was probably curled up in the library over a book, or was amusing herself in some quiet corner. Aunt Judy was never lonely.

As a matter of fact, Aunt Judy at that moment was skimming over the waters of the bay in a motorboat, and the owner of the boat was saying, "Nobody will miss us, and I'm going to make up to you for the ride you didn't have today."

That night Natalie talked some discontentedly about her evening. "I don't think Mr. Hale was very polite not to look after his guests, do you? He was away half the evening."

The next day the big touring car came around to the door, and Natalie came presently to her aunt. "He wants you to come," she said, with a shadow on her face. "Some of the boys will have to stay at home. But as he asked for you especially, I suppose he thinks a chaperon is necessary. Some city people do, you know."

"Yes, they do," said Aunt Judy.

Mr. Hale helped her into the seat beside him, somewhat to Natalie's discomfiture. "I don't see why he should carry the chaperon idea quite so far," she murmured to her sisters.

But Aunt Judy had a lovely time. Newton Hale and she belonged to the same generation.

"The young women and girls of today are a bit too strenuous for me," said Mr. Hale, "that's why I left town. I wanted to get out of the whirl."

They stopped at a roadside inn for lunch. There was an American woman selling lace at the doorstep. Mr. Hale made her display her wares. There were some collars and the girls exclaimed delightedly when he presented one to each of them.

"But you have chosen nothing," he said to Aunt Judy, and Natalie said quickly: "There's a lovely table square. We could use it when we have card parties in the evening, Aunt Judy."

Mr. Hale shook his head. "She must choose something for herself," and when Aunt Judy protested that the table square would be very nice, he said to the woman, "Haven't you something?" and with a quick glance at his interested face, she opened a sandalwood box, and showed a scarf of exquisite fineness.

"That's just the thing," said Newton Hale, but Aunt Judy protested.

"The poor woman needs the money," he said, half humorously, as he handed the scarf to Aunt Judy. "Look upon it as a charity to her."

"I really think, Aunt Judy," said Natalie the next night, "that the lace scarf Mr. Hale gave you would be much more appropriate for one of us girls. He really had to get it for you, you know, after that woman showed it."

"Yes," said poor Aunt Judy, "perhaps he did."

"You won't mind my wearing it to Mr. Hale's porch dance, will you?" asked Natalie, who was all in pale blue.

"Oh, no," said Aunt Judy.

She laid away the sandalwood box. At least the possession of that was undisputed.

Long after Natalie left Mr. Hale called. As the big automobile drew up in front of the porch, Aunt Judy went down to meet it.

Newton was in evening clothes and wore no hat. "Why didn't you come to my dance?" he asked abruptly.

"The girls said there would be other chaperons," she said. "And, besides," she laughed, cheerfully, "I had nothing grand enough to wear."

"You let Natalie wear your scarf," he said. "I—I wanted to see you in it—I confess I was—bitterly disappointed."

Aunt Judy was silent with astonishment. That any act of hers could cause any one pain was beyond belief. She had been ignored for many years—nobody had cared what she wore.

"I—I didn't know—" she said, softly.

"Haven't you seen," he said, impetuously, "that you are dearer to me than anything in the whole wide world? You are what I've been looking for all my life—the sweetest, the gentlest—woman."

"Oh," said Aunt Judy. She was faint with happiness. "Oh, I didn't dream—"

"Then let me tell you now," he said eagerly. "When I saw you there in my garden I knew that what the sundial said was true—'The best is yet to come.' And I have only waited to give you time to know me before I asked you—to marry me—Judy."

When Natalie came home that night, in all the glory of her aunt's lace scarf, she exclaimed at the sight of the big red car at the gate.

"Why, Mr. Hale," she said, "everybody has been asking for you."

"Well, I guess they had a good time," he said, comfortably. "I came over to talk to your Aunt Judy."

"To Aunt Judy?"

"Yes, and I can't keep my happiness to myself any longer. She has promised to marry me and be my mistress of the Oaks."

"What?" stammered Natalie. "Why, Aunt Judy's too old—to get married."

Mr. Hale laughed delightedly. "Youth is blind," he said. "Why, Natalie, can't you see that she is beautiful and that she's so rare that if she lived in town the men would worship her. I'm going to have her wear pearls always—great ropes of them, and white satin, and sables and plumes."

He said a great deal more, while Natalie looked at him in a stunned fashion and was silent.

But that night as her aunt helped her braid her hair the young girl said: "Pearls and diamonds—and sables—why, Aunt Judy, you will look wonderful—you are a beauty—and to think—we never knew!"

Queer Wax of Oregon.

Nehalem wax is the name given a somewhat mysterious product found on the beach near the mouth of the Nehalem river in Oregon.

It was observed by the early explorers of that coast. Later considerable deposits were found in the sand of the beach. In 1846 several tons of this queer, waxlike substance were shipped to Hawaii, and since then many tons of it have been sent to Northwestern markets.

Opinion is divided concerning the nature and origin of this substance. Some hold that it is beeswax and others contend that it is a mineral substance called ozocerite. It is usually found in large rectangular blocks. It has a honey-like aroma when freshly cut. Examination made in the laboratory of a western university shows that the substance closely approaches beeswax in composition and does not accord with the properties of ozocerite.

The conclusion, oddly enough, favors an Indian legend of the wreck of a ship at the mouth of the Nehalem before the coming of the white men. A Spanish ship with supplies for the Catholic missions in the north sailed from Lower California in 1769 and was never afterward heard from. —Harper's Weekly.

SINCE TIME OF GRANDMA

Remarkable Changes Effected in Dress and Social Activities in Feminine World.

The modern society woman has a multitude of expenses that her grandmother never even dreamed of; her visits to the masseuse, the hairdresser, the chiropodist, are a necessary part of her grooming today. While grandma tucked her switch guilitly away in the drawer of her dressing table and could not be bullied into the admission that she used powder, today her granddaughter unhesitatingly admits that she wears false braids and curls and that the soft glow of health on her rounded cheek was skillfully applied by a "perfect wonder" of a beauty doctor.

Social affairs have increased in number as well as in variety, and this has brought about a great change in my lady's wardrobe. Our grandmothers talked about their "best dress" and "best hat," the up-to-date lady speaks of her bridge gown, her dinner gown and her dancing frock. She has not one gown for dress up affairs, but 12 or 15. She has an appropriate outfit for each occasion. Not only must the gown be suitable, but all the accessories, including hat, wrap, gloves, shoes, veil, jewelry and even lingerie must be in absolute harmony.

When one stops to consider that the woman who is "in society" does remarkably well if she keeps within $100 for a year's supply of gloves, some idea may be formed as to the amount which she spends for such items as tailored suits, ball gowns and furlined evening wraps.

Arsenic Found in Vegetables.

Arsenic has been found as a normal constituent in man and animals, and now Drs. Jadin and Astrug, two French biologists, show that it may be derived from edible plants and fruits. They examined thirty-nine vegetable substances, and obtained arsenic from all, the quantities ranging from 0.03 part per million in the leek to 0.25 part per million in almonds and beans. Other vegetable matters, containing arsenic are the common cabbage, the turnip, the potato, cultivated mushrooms, black truffles, Japanese rice, red haricots, white haricots, gray peas, split peas, lentils, artichokes, salsify, chicory, lettuce, spinach, green peas, celery, carrots, watercress, cauliflower, wild asparagus, hazelnuts, filberts, chestnuts, apples, pears, oranges, pineapples and bananas.

LEFT WORK UNFINISHED

AUTHORS CALLED FROM THEIR MANUSCRIPTS BY DEATH.

Some of the Greatest Have Literally Died "In the Harness"—Nathaniel Hawthorne's Pathetic Forebodings of the End.

Robert Louis Stevenson's story, "Weir of Hermiston," was left a mere fragment. Another romance, "St. Ives," by the same pen, was running in a monthly magazine at the time of Stevenson's death. Here, however, readers were not deprived of a satisfactory ending, for the story was brought to a conclusion by Quiller-Couch.

"I hardly know what to say to the public about this abortive romance, though I pretty well know what the case will be. I shall never finish it," wrote Nathaniel Hawthorne, with reference to "The Dolliver Romance," which he had undertaken to write for a magazine.

This foreboding was soon verified, for Hawthorne had scarcely time to do more than lay down the groundwork of the story and write the initial chapters before he died. At his funeral in Concord the manuscript lay on his coffin. Soon afterward the first chapter appeared in the Atlantic, and subsequently the second chapter, which he had been unable to revise, was published in the same magazine. Several years elapsed and then a third fragment, revised and copied by the novelist's wife, was placed in the publisher's hands. The original manuscript is now preserved in the Concord public library.

Another serial that was being written when its author laid down his pen forever was "Denis Duval." Thackeray, indeed, was already in his grave when its publication commenced. Three parts, and a portion of a fourth were all that appeared, and "the story," wrote the editor, "breaks off as his life ended—full of vigor and blooming with new promise like the apple trees in this month of May." With the fourth part was given a set of notes, taken from Thackeray's own papers, elucidatory of the subsequent development of the plot.

Thackeray's great contemporary, Charles Dickens, also died in harness. For a long time his health had been indifferent, but he stuck unflinchingly to the work he had in hand. On June 8, 1870, he died. The morning and part of the afternoon of that day were devoted to completing the sixth number of "The Mystery of Edwin Drood," but scarcely had he finished work and sat down to dinner than he was seized with convulsions. After lingering some hours without regaining consciousness he died at six the same day.

"I shall publish late in this year," wrote Laurence Sterne, "and the next I shall begin a new work in four volumes, which, when finished, I shall continue 'Tristram' with fresh spirit." This new work here referred to is "The Sentimental Journey," one volume alone of which was ever given to the world, nor, by reason of the author's death, was "Tristram Shandy" ever continued.

BEAVER FINDS AN ADVOCATE

British Rancher of Opinion the Little Animal Is Much Abused, and Gives His Reasons.

"There has been a lot of garbled stuff written in regard to the poor humble beaver," says a correspondent. "He is the most cussed animal of any in existence in British Columbia today.

"He shuts up water in creeks, overflows meadows, eats off apple trees if you get them too close to his wanderings, and, in fact, to hear the complaints about him, you folks on the outside would think he should be exterminated. But not so; he is man's best friend in regard to the water question.

"Now, I am an admirer of the beaver; he has not a lazy hair on his body. He works unceasingly to shut up what you have torn out; not only for his part, but for the rancher that wants the water. As fast as you can open their dams every morning all the summer through, they will close them again at night. But put in a good dam and flume box with gate, and your trouble is over in a great measure.

"They will once in a while shut up the box, but not often. Hang up a piece of bright tin on a spring hole so the tin will swash in the water, and you will not be bothered much at the box. Now, if the ranchers left all these cuts open, which they all do, your water would all run off in the winter's thaws. So that is where the beaver comes to their relief. He shuts them up himself. And then he gets blamed for doing it.

"A beaver is awful shy when he first sees man. He certainly puts out for a hole in the bank. But you show up evenings for about a week or ten days and just walk around and pile a few sticks across their path where they are hauling down cotton wood or willows to the lake or pond and they will come and smell of the stick and get the scent of your hands and your tracks.

"Then they will quit that place and go make another. Well, you do the same at that place and so on two or three nights and they will get your scent so that they know it means no harm to them. They will pull all your sticks out of the road and keep right on at work. Now their fear of man is all past; they take no more notice of your being around than they would of a horse or cow.

"The beaver is one of the easiest of the larger animals to domesticate. He is fond of most any kind of roots, but of all the wild roots, he likes the big pond lily root that grows to enormous size. Some roots are ten to fifteen feet long, three to four inches in diameter. They criss cross and grow together till they are a regular mat. Then what he likes next is the white carrot, also the red. They are poor eaters out of a dish; they want to sit up and brace themselves on that muscular tail and take the food in their forepaws, or their little hands."—Fur News.

Answer of a Soldier.

When Napoleon was a student at Brienne he happened to be asked by one of the examiners the following question: "Supposing you were in an invested town threatened with starvation, how would you supply yourself with provisions?" "From the enemy," replied the sub-lieutenant of artillery; and this answer so pleased the examiners that they passed him without further questioning.

Obituary

MRS. S. O. MERRITT

Mrs Selah O. Merritt died at the home of Mrs. Harry Beedon and Miss Adah Merritt, in Eaton Rapids, Friday afternoon, August 23, after an illness of seven months, at the age of 74 years, 5 months and 18 days. Up to seven months ago Mrs. Merritt had been in perfect health, but about the first of February she had an attack of whooping cough, and afterwards bronchial pneumonia, which left her in such a weakened condition that death came to relieve her of her suffering.

The funeral service was held at the home on Main street, Monday, August 26, at 2:30 p. m., Rev. W. F. Harding of Leavenworth. Kansas, an old friend of the family who happened to be in Michigan, officiating. Burial was made in the family lot at Rose Hill.

Mary Romeyn was born in Gallen, Wayne county, N. Y., March 5, 1838, and departed this life Friday afternoon, August 23, aged 74 years, 5 months, and 18 days. She was the second daughter of and third child of Thomas T. and Blandenah Romeyn. The family moved to Tecumseh, Lenawee county, Mich., when she was in her 18th year. April 15, 1863, she was united in marriage to Selah O. Merritt who departed this life April 8, 1897,

To this union seven children were born: Emily, wife of Dr G. W. Shaw of Berkeley, Cal ; Henry T. of Coverdale, Louisana; Sadie E., who departed this life, January 30, 1894; Arlie, wife of Capt. F. J. Morrow, of Fort Leavenworth, Kansas; Eloise, wife of Harry W. Beedon of Eaton Rapids; Chas I., of Homer, Mich., and Adah I., also of Eaton Rapids

She is survived by one brother, Major Henry Romeyn of Washington, D. C.; and one sister, Susan Romeyn, of Ft. Leavenworth, Kansas.

WHEN IRVING PLAYED ROMEO

Silence, Light and Actors, the Three Things Necessary for Artistic Effect and Atmosphere.

Wendell Phillips Dodge relates an incident growing out of the first meeting of Robert Mantell with Sir Henry Irving, back in 1882, when both were playing Romeo in London. There were reviewers who found Irving too old for the youthful Romeo, and one advised that he should make way for "the young fellow over at the Olympic." Irving prepared a special afternoon performance in the Lyceum, to which all the players in London were invited. After it was over, Mantell went back of the stage, and Irving asked him how he liked the performance. "It has been like an afternoon at school with congenial lessons," replied Mantell. "How do you do it? How do you manage effects? How do you get such atmosphere, such a realization of the glory of the tragedy, with such little effort? Is there no recipe?"

"There is; indeed there is," answered Irving. "Simple, too; only three things to remember. The first is silence, and plenty of it behind the scenes, so that the actor may be at ease, with nothing to distract when striving for his shadings. The second is light, regulated as far as possible so that nature is counterfeited—and that, young man, is the recipe."

"But," protested Mantel, "you said there were three things to remember; you have mentioned but two. Is there a third?"

"Did I say a third?" asked Irving. "Um, perhaps I did, perhaps I did; but what could I have had in mind? Let me see. Ah, yes, silence, light, and—um, shall I say—actors? Remember that, my boy, actors. Silence, light, and—actors, that is the third."—London Strand.

BUILD TIGER PROOF HOUSES

Malay Natives Perch Their Houses High Up in Trees to Escape Beasts.

The ordinary Malay house is built on posts from five to seven feet high; but one which I came across was perched high up in a tree. It was the home of a man, his wife and family, and they informed me that it was placed in this unusual situation so as to be out of the way of the numerous tigers which then infested the neighborhood.

As tigers have been known to jump 18 feet in vertical height somewhere above 20 feet is considered to be the limit of safety. The Malayan house is a frail and flimsy structure of sticks tied together with rattan thatched with palm leaves and walled with plaited bamboo, or, as in this case, with the bark of a tree.

It is therefore an easy matter for a tiger with its great strength to break into a house and attack the inhabitants. Many instances of this have been recorded in Malaya. In one well known case a whole family were killed except one man, who climbed up into the roof, and thus escaping the notice of the tiger, was a horrified observer of the cruel mauling and ultimate slaughter and devouring of his relatives.—Strand.

German Musicians Poorly Paid.

The Germans like music, but they do not want to pay for it. What they gladly pay for is food and drink, with free music on the side. When a high-class musician plays at a variety show or in a night cafe, he is looked down on; yet these are the only places where an orchestral player can earn a decent living. Some startling figures have been printed in Der Turmer which shows that it is practically impossible for a German orchestral musician to marry and bring up a family. For a family of four the minimum expenses, apart from food, are $250 a year. The income of an orchestral player is $330 a year; which leaves less than 25 cents a day for food. Americans pay musicians ten times as much as the Germans do; but we, to be sure, are mere barbarians in the eyes of the Germans. —Boston Transcript.

Prominent Methodist Minister Released From Pastorate

Rev. G. N. Kennedy Severs His Connection With the Methodist Episcopal Church of Tecumseh, October 1st. to Engage in Business in Flint

RESIGNATION RECEIVED WITH REGRET BY CONGREGATION

The Fourth Quarterly Conference of the First Methodist Episcopal church was held at the church last Thursday evening.

Rev. B. H. Ramsdell D. D. the District Superintendent was present and presided over the conference. There was a large gathering of the officials. The year's work was reported and showed the usual harmony and prosperity

Rev. George N. Kennedy, the pastor requested to be released from the Pastorate at the close of the current year, that is, Oct. 1. The release was granted with regret. The members of the Board unaniously passed a resolution, commending the good work which he has done and his interest and helpfullness in all that concerns not only the church but also the wider community. Substantial improvements have been made and the church will close the year with all obligations met. Mr. Kennedy and his family have been very popular in and out of the church and he will leave our city with the regret of all. Mr. Kennedy has had some throat trouble for some time and desires a rest from speaking that he may wholly recover.

He has established a General Insurance agency at Flint and will unite with his old church at Flint where for four years he was pastor.

NOTHING IS EVER DESTROYED

Matter Changes, But Does Not Cease to Exist—Simple Experiment That Proves Proposition.

When a candle burns it is not destroyed. What seems like destruction is merely change. Any one can prove this for himself by a very simple experiment.

Take a glass tube and fit a cork into each end. Bore some holes in the lower cork, one of them in the middle large enough to hold a candle. Bend a smaller glass tube to U shape, fill it with small pieces of caustic soda and cork one end. Now connect the two cylinders by a small glass tube through the corks. Insert the candle through the lower cork and suspend the whole apparatus from one beam of the chemical balance. Weigh it carefully.

Connect the free end of the U tube to an aspirator so as to establish a uniform current of air through the tubes. Remove the candle, light it and instantly reinsert it. Let it burn down until entirely consumed. Now reweigh the apparatus. You will find that it actually weighs more than it did before the candle was burnt!

What had happened? The carbon and hydrogen of which the candle was composed have been separated, have drawn oxygen from the air and combined with it, forming water and carbon dioxide or carbonic acid gas. The caustic soda has absorbed the carbon dioxide and made sodium carbonate, and has also caught the water. The extra weight is simply that of the oxygen taken out of the air.

This is a practical illustration of the great truth that nothing is ever destroyed. Matter changes, but does not cease to exist. St. Thomas Aquinas taught this in the thirteenth century —thus as in so many other ways anticipating modern scientists—and some of the ancient Greek philosophers understood it. It has only been proved experimentally in recent years.

Fifty Thousand Child Gardeners.

As a result of a state-wide industrial contest in Oregon there are now 50,000 children busy gardening. It is thought that of the 125,000 school children of the state at least 75,000 will exhibit at their county fairs or at the state fair at Salem in the autumn something they have raised or made. The superintendent of public instruction and public spirited citizens are responsible for this wholesale plan of child farming. Substantial prizes are to be awarded to those who have been most successful in raising garden stuff, chickens and pigs, or in making some useful article. To aid the little ones the agricultural college has issued 50,000 bulletins containing directions for planting and growing seeds. The scheme is an excellent one, so different from the murderous child labor of the factory. It includes plenty of fresh air, healthful exercise, pleasant mental exercise, and blessed contract with nature, her beauty and life. There is here the early lesson of obedience to the royal law of labor.—Christian Herald.

Privations of Exploring Party.

Great privations were indured by A. H. Savage Landor during some portions of his eighteen months' journey across South America and back. He says: "When I left Rio in March of last year I took enough provisions to last for a year, but owing to wastage on the part of my men and loss, these eventually gave out, and toward the end of that part of the expedition through the unexplored portion of Brazil we remained for sixteen days without a morsel of anything to eat. Happily there was plenty of water, but there was no game, no fruit, no fish and no inhabitants, and neither my men nor myself had sufficient food to cover a six-pence."

Uncle Pennywise Says:

Countless ages of time passed, as we compute time—before the earth was prepared for the advent of man. The oldest civilization known is that of Egypt, and the pyramids are things of yesterday compared with the formation of the alluvial plains of the Euphrates, or the delta of the Mississippi, not to mention the Laurentian rocks.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE THIRD DEGREE"

"The Third Degree" at the Bradley Opera House, Thursday September 12, is a fortunate booking and one worthy of special notice, as the attraction is to be seen in but very few one night stands this season, its time having almost entirely been booked in the larger cities of the country. This is strong evidence of the strength of company. The company comes here from Adrian, they play in Jackson two nights before playing here.

SURPRISE PARTY.

The Research Circle numbering over 40 made Mrs. E. C. Bryan a surprise party Friday, it being Mrs. Bryan's birthday. This was a day of surprises to her, as just before noon, three of her neighbors dropped in for dinner bringing their baskets well filled. Soon after the large crowd came, her husband dropped in quite unexpectedly to help her celebrate her birthday. The Research ladies came well laden with baskets and a fine picnic supper was served and everyone had a most delightful time.

ENTERTAINED AT BRIDGE

Mrs. Eugene Harris entertained the Bridge club at her pleasant home west of town, Saturday afternoon. Six tables were played after which a most delicious supper was served, and an enjoyable hour spent in social chat. The out of town guests were Mrs. Ruth Cummins-Jardine of New York City, Mrs. Anna Newburn of Cleveland, and Mrs. E. Roy Meade of Chicago. A fine auto ride in the evening completed a most delightful day.

GAS TALK

Messrs. Stepe and Cole of Chelsea were in town Monday to talk up the project of installing a Gas plant in town. They have just finished piping from Chelsea to Ann Arbor and should they install a plant here, they would eventually extend the piping to Clinton and Manchester.

The matter was to have been canvassed at the Council meeting last evening but there were so few present that it was laid on the table until the next meeting.

A suit growing out of a fire set in a patch of heather and involving damages fixed by one judge at $1.25, has been fought through six courts in England, finally reaching the court of appeal.

Family Groups.

I know some people who have been indulging in a family group. Which is all right, if they feel that way about it. But where are they going to keep it? I have one down cellar and another under the bed and a third in storage. There was a mistake made in the order, so we each got thre apiece. Any one has a right to be in a family group, but no one has a right to show it to his friends.—Exchange.

Constipation causes headache, nausea, dizziness, languor, heart palpitation. Drastic physics gripe, sicken, weaken the bowels and don't cure. Doan's Regulets act gently and cure constipation. 25 cents. Ask your druggist.

Never can tell when you'll mash a finger or suffer a cut, bruise, burn or scald. Be prepared. Dr. Thomas Eclectic Oil instantly relieves the pain—quickly cures the wound.

SAVING

Few people save much unless they have a definite plan. Spasmodic saving seldom results in large accumulations.

Some people save all their coins of a certain denomination; others all coins of a certain date; others save by cutting off certain luxuries; others by a system of fines for breaches of certain rules.

But there is still a better plan; Set aside a definite sum as a debt to your future and deposit it regularly in this bank.

SAD ACCIDENT

Miss Emma J. Smith an aunt of J. H. Smith and of Mrs. J. J. Belcher, with whom she has been spending the last six weeks, had the misfortune to fall while crossing the parlor and sustained a severe fracture of her hip, Dr. Jones was called and made her as comfortable as possible.

Owing to her advanced age of 90 years, her condition is quite serious.

LABOR DAY

Monday was the 30th anniversary of the founding of Labor Day which had its birth on the first Monday in September 1882.

At that time the organization was the Knights of Labor who were assembled in New York and it was estimated that there were 20,000 men in the parade. Roger Price a coal miner was watching the parade and remarked, "well Uncle Dick, this is Labor Day all right," which was overheard by some one in power and it was adopted as the name of the new organization which became a legal holiday later.

CIVIC IMPROVEMENT

At the regular meeting of the Common Council last evening the Committee from the Town and Civic Improvement Society were present and presented their report to the Council. After hearing their report the Council promised to install the fountain purchased by the ladies, and to erect one of the band stands that have been used on our streets in past seasons. When this work is done Adams Park will be well fitted for the benefit of the community.

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Waldron and daughter Iva returned Sunday from a visit in Bath N. Y.

CATARRH OF STOMACH

Indigestion and Stomach Agony Quickly Ended

If you went to thirty doctors and paid each his fee for a prescription for indigestion or stomach misery it is ten chances to one you wouldn't get such a good prescription as the one from which MI-O-NA stomach tablets are made.

How can such a thing be? you naturally ask.

Simply because the man who wrote the prescription from which MI-O NA tablets are made knows more about stomach diseases than 96 per cent of all the physicians in America, and he gets paid for knowing.

And when you can get a large box of tablets made from this doctor's prescription for only 50 cents, are you going to continue to suffer? Sold by C A, Wright & Son and druggists everywhere.

Important Question of Dress.

Lord Chesterfield says: "I would rather have a young fellow too much than too little dressed; the excess on that side will wear off with a little age and reflection." To be as well dressed for all occasions as a man's means will permit shows self respect and not conceit as ignorant people sometimes imagine. Society invariably looks on young men with a partial eye, but it likes to see them well dressed.

Only Person "Touched."

Duels in France are often more costly than dangerous. The very lowest figure for which an encounter can be brought off is £4, and to do the thing in style considerably more must be spent. Aurelian Scholl, the boulevardier journalist, once suffered. A friend of his sent a challenge and borrowed 100 francs off Scholl for his expenses. This sum he never repaid. "The duel was a bloodless one," relates Scholl. "I was the only person touched."—London Chronicle.

Grain Drills

The selection of a Grain Drill is an important part of the next year's wheat crop. A poor drill that sows unever, or not at all at times, is a detriment to any farmer and may lose him the price of a good drill. We have been pushing the Ontario for several years and have had the best success with this make. Our fertilizer feed is cleanable and positive. Change gears are always ready. Ratchet rub. Light draft, strong construction and many features not found in other drills. We want you to have an Ontario.

FERTILIZER

Best results in wheat and clover catch are obtained by using "Union Brand" Fertilizer. We have a good stock ready for sale.

CERTAIN RESULTS

Many a Tecumseh Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Tecumseh. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times for the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store and my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it."

(Statement given December 7, 1908.)

A Willing Re-Endorsement.

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed on August 29, 1911, he said: I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented. You may continue to use my name as a reference."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Antoine Deloaia, Postmaster at Garden, Mich., knows the exact facts when he speaks of the curative value of Foley Kidney Pills. He says: "From my own experience I recommend Foley Kidney Pills, as a great remedy for kidney trouble. My father was cured of kidney disease and a good many of my neighbors were cured by Foley Kidney Pills."

For sale by all Druggists of Tecumseh.

Many Driven From Home

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery and cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles find quick relief and health returns. Its help in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping-cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50c. and $1 00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

U. A. Smith, Bridgeton, Ind., had kidney trouble for years, and was so crippled with rheumatism he could not dress without help. He started using Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I began to get better at once, and now all my trouble has left me and I do not feel that I ever had rheumatism. I rest well all night and tho' 59 years old, can now do the work of a man of 35 years. I would like to be the means of others getting benefit from Foley Kidney Pills." Refuse substitutes.

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

COMMISSIONERS' NOTICE

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.

In the matter of the Estate of RICHARD CALDWELL, Deceased.

The undersigned having been appointed by the Probate Court of said County, Commissioners to receive, examine and adjust all claims and demands of all persons against the estate of said deceased, do hereby give notice that we will meet for that purpose at the Tecumseh State Savings Bank in the Village of Tecumseh Lenawee County Michigan on the 7th day of September 1912, and on the 5th day of February, 1913 at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each of said days.

And that six months from the 5th day of August 1912, are allowed by said Probate Court for the creditors of said estate to present their claims to us for examination and allowance.

Dated August 5th, 1912.

The Cure for Degeneration.

Attention is just now rather too much concentrated—with the most humanitarian motives, to be sure—on that kind of social perfection which consists in bringing everybody up to an average. It is time to emphasize also the importance of producing and making the most of the few really great men through whom the world mainly progresses, the pioneers and the prophets of civilization and the arts. Of degeneration we have a morbid and needless fear; the best cure for it is not medical science, but social justice. Break up the slums, take the boys out of gangs and find them clean sport and congenial work. Pull down the rookeries, let in the sun and air, keep human life from festering in rotten places and nature will do the rest. Breeds and races may die out, but there are always new ones being created, and nature is herself the greatest of regenerating forces, destroying the decadent even as she checks the superman before he becomes as the gods.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

The "Workin' Stiff."

"He is one of the army of unskilled laborers easily mobilized on any of a variety of industrial frontiers," write Charles Phelps Cushing and Arthur Killick in the issue of Harper's Weekly—"an army estimated now at half a million, content to do the hardest sorts of toil at wages so low that not more than one man in a thousand saves anything." When he gets into trouble the "stiff's" hands are his best credentials. "Look at his hands, sergeant," the magistrate says. "The police court bailiff feels their palms and makes one of two permissible answers, 'Soft as a baby's, yer Honor!' or 'Hard as nails, sir.'"

Must Keep Hens Off Streets.

Bangor now has a "hen law." The city government has enacted a new ordinance which prohibits hens from running at large within a mile and three-quarters of the postoffice. This was apparently a joke when it was introduced, but it developed that the city government was alive with sufferers from foraging hens, and the measure went through amid much applause. People who do not look after their hens are now subject to prosecution and fine, upon complaint.—Kennebec Journal.

A WOMAN'S GOOD LOOKS

Depend on her general health and freedom from pain. Many a woman looks old before her time because of those irregularities which are essentially feminine. Starting from early womanhood, she suffers from frequently recurring derangements that upset her womanly health. If she be beautiful she grows into that mellow age without wrinkles and crowfeet about the eyes or the blue circles underneath. It is invariably the rule that such women suffer little, or not at all, from womanly derangements which sap the health and leave in the face the tell-tale story of pain and suffering. Dr. R. V. Pierce, the famous specialist in the diseases of women, found a prescription in his early practice that soothed the organism peculiar to womanhood—oiled the machinery, as it were, of the human system—and helped the woman to pass those painful periods that sear-lined and aged her face. This remedy became the well-known Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that has benefited thousands of women and saved them from misery and suffering at different periods in life.

MRS. PIERCE.

MRS. HARKELY E. PIERCE, of 244 Bright Street, Sarnia, Ont., writes: "I am now a well woman after suffering for three years and doctoring with several different doctors, each one saying it was something different, and the last one, after putting me through a thorough examination, said I was suffering from a growth, which, in time, would result in cancer, and said I would not live more than two years if not operated upon right away. I became hopelessly discouraged but would not consent to the operation as I was too weak and too much afraid, but at last, through the advice of a friend, I tried Dr. Pierce's medicines, and after using two bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' I immediately felt a change. I also used two boxes of 'Healing Suppositories' and eight boxes of 'Lotion Tablets,' and can safely praise the name of Dr. Pierce's medicines to all who suffer from any female disease, for these medicines are all they are claimed to be, and I hope will help others as they have helped me."

PRECIOUS RELICS IN DANGER

Steps Being Taken by the Pope to Insure the Safety of Documents in the Vatican.

Father Ehrle, the well-known historian, who has been prefect of the vatican library since 1895, is shortly to retire from his important post, and Monsignore Ratti, director of the Ambrosian library, of Milan, has been se-
Consequently destructive Bird, Held lected by the pope to succeed him.

The manuscripts contained in the vatican library number over forty thousand and surpass not only in number but also in value and interest those of all other libraries in the world combined because they have been accumulated since practically the beginning of the Christian era. It will be necessary for Father Ehrle to remain in charge for at least another couple of years in order that he may hand over to his successor these manuscript treasures, which must be identified one by one.

The pope, on the suggestion of the retiring librarian, has availed himself of this detailed examination of manuscripts, which takes place whenever a new prefect is appointed, to reform the methods heretofore adopted for their preservation. The manuscripts are inclosed in low wooden cupboards called "armadii," about five feet high, the doors of which are richly decorated, according to the plan in use for centuries in Rome, which was to combine art galleries and libraries and thus give room to hang pictures on the walls over the books.

While every precaution is taken for the preservation of the manuscripts from moths and dampness this old system of keeping them has its great drawbacks in case of fire, as the cupboards are naturally not fireproof. Father Ehrle suggested to the pope that every cupboard when possible should be converted into a strongbox or safe perfectly fireproof and that two or three large rooms should be specifically built with walls covered with steel plates or other non-inflammablet material, to which the manuscripts that can not be kept in cupboards could be removed.

His suggestion has been fully approved by the pope, who still recalls the fire in the vatican, which but for the intervention of the Italian firemen might have had disastrous results, and the necessary arrangements have now men made to have the vatican manuscripts preserved in such a way as to insure their safety and integrity.

LOEB IS TO TESTIFY

Will Tell Senate Committee About Campaign Contributions.

New York, Sept. 2.—William Loeb, Jr., has been subpoenaed to appear before the senate committee which is investigating campaign contributions on Sept. 30. At that time Mr. Loeb will tell what he knows about the contributions to the campaign of 1904. He already has secured Colonel Roosevel's consent to his giving this testimony.

MICHIGAN'S PRIMARIES

Musselman Wins Republican Race for Governor.

COMPARATIVELY FEW CONTESTS.

Mayor Thompson, of Detroit, Has a Close Brush With His Competitor—Graft Scandals Cut a Figure in Aldermanic Nominations.

Detroit, Aug. 28.—Incomplete returns give Amos Musselman, of Grand Rapids, the Republican nomination for governor over his only opponent, Frederick C. Martindale, of Detroit, by a majority estimated at 10,000.

W. N. Ferris, of Big Rapids, won the Democratic nomination for governor without opposition, and in like manner L. Whitney Watkins, of Manchester, received the Progressive nomination for governor.

Candidates for Governor.

Following are the candidates for governor of Michigan to be voted on at the November election:

Republican—Amos Musselman, of Grand Rapids.

Democrat—Woodbridge N. Ferris, of Big Rapids.

Progressive—L. Whitney Watkins, of Manchester.

Prohibition—J. D. Leland, of Corunna.

Socialist—James Hoogerhyde, of Grand Rapids.

Socialist Labor—Herman Richter, of Detroit.

Lieutenant Governor Ross had no opposition for renomination on the Republican ticket, and the candidates of other parties for lieutenant governor were nominated without contest.

Candidates for Senator.

Senator William Alden Smith, of Grand Rapids, was named as the Republican candidate for United States senator, having no opposition.

Theodor M. Joslin, of Adrian, was the unopposed candidate on the Progressive ticket for senator.

Alfred Lucking, of Detroit, had a close race with George P. Hummer for the Democratic nomination, and it is believed his nomination will be made certain by complete returns.

Congressional Candidates.

Patrick H. Kelley, of Lansing, Republican, and Edward Frensdorf, of Hudson, Democrat, were nominated for congressmen-at-large, neither being opposed.

Julius B. Kirby, of Saginaw, has a lead over W. H. Hill, of Detroit, for the Progressive nomination, which official returns are epected to make certain.

Congressman Wedemeyer in the second, J. M. C. Smith in the third, Hamilton in the fourth, Sam W. Smith in the sixth, McLaughlin in the ninth, and Young in the twelfth had no opposition for renomination.

Louis C. Cramton, of Lapeer, Republican candidate in the seventh district, is nominated over William E. Brown and James M. Haviland.

Reports from the eighth district indicate the renomination of Congressman Joseph W. Fordney over his Republican opponent, Emory Townsend.

Frank Buell has probably defeated Congressman George A. Loud, of Bay City, for the Republican nomination in the tenth district.

In the eleventh district Francis O. Lindquist, of Greenville, defeated Congressman F. H. Dodds for renomination on the Republican ticket.

Henry McMorran, of Port Huron, is the only member of congress in this state who was not a candidate for renomination.

Michigan's two Democratic congressmen, Doremus, of Detroit, and Sweet, of Grand Rapids, were renominated without opposition.

Detroit Contests.

Mayor Thompson, of Detroit, was renominated by the Democrats in a bitter contest with Police Judge Jeffries, the vote being very close.

Oscar Marx won the Republican nomination for mayor easily over Proctor K. Owens, who was the candidate two years ago.

The Progressives had three candidates for mayor, with Horatio Earle leading in unofficial returns.

Recent graft disclosures cut a big figure in the aldermanic contests, with varying results, some of the present aldermen being defeated for renomination, and others pulling through by close margins.

Fireman Shoots Companion.

New Albany, Ind., Sept. 2.—Thomas Dickson, former member of the fire department, fatally shot Leonard Sanders, a Southern Railroad brakeman, here. The men occupied the same house and the shooting grew out of a trivial quarrel. Dickson, who was arrested, claims self-defense.

Mirage Easy to Be Seen.

The celebrated Fata Morgana, a presentation of natural "moving pictures" on an immense scale which is occassionally seen in the Straits of Messina, is explained by a scientific writer as being a mirage, such as frequently occurs in various parts of the world; "in fact," he says, "one may see a mirage any day by looking through the stratum of air overlying a hot stove, or adjacent to the side of a wall heated in the sunshine." Young scientists will be interested in verifying this statement.

Kaw Indian Chief Remembered.

Henry Bluejacket, a celebrated Kaw Indian chief, visited central Missouri in 1833. He spoke English well, was gentlemanly and agreeable in his deportment. He was physically large and handsome. His dress was a loose sack hunting jacket of blue cloth with fringed buckskin leggins and moccasins and a foxskin cap. Contrary to the usual custom among Indians, the Kaws usually wore caps on their heads made of fox, coon or wildcat skin.

MANY DIE IN STORM

Houses Are Washed Away and Twenty Persons Are Drowned.

Twenty persons were drowned and many others are missing following a series of storms which swept over western Pennsylvania and the panhandle of West Virginia.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad tracks were badly washed and it is said days will pass before traffic can be resumed. Through trains were marooned in the flooded district. Many manufacturing plants are under water and the property damage will be heavy.

The storms came after a day of unusual heat, and burst with little warning. Rain fell in torrents; small rivers soon became raging streams. Houses were swept away and lives lost before the people were aware the flood was upon them.

Cherryvalley, a mining town on the creek, was flooded within half an hour after the rain began to fall. Foundations of houses were undermined and the structures toppled over into the flooded streets.

BOLTS START FORTY FIRES

Chicago's Loss in Sharp Storm Is $1,000,000.

About forty fires at Chicago, six of them in the heart of the business section, and the remainder at points widely apart throughout the city, brought terror to Chicago during the most terrific storm that ever swept over the entire city. The loss from fire and flood is estimated at more than $1,000,000.

Fire engines answering alarms were put to considerable delay by flooded subways, and in instances were forced to take circuitous routes to places from which alarms were sounded.

The fires were all started by lightning, and in less than half an hour practically every apparatus in the city was called out.

JACKSON—A rather serious riot is reported to have broken out among the convicts in the state prison here. The alleged outbreak occurred in the dining room, which was said to have been partially wrecked. Employes of the institution declined to give out any information regarding the affair. Warden Nathan F. Simpson is in Chicago.

BUSINESS AGENT SHOOTS HIMSELF

Flint Man Maintains Innocence of Charges Made.

Agent of Chicago Tea House Tries to End Life When Books Are Examined.

Flint, Mich., Sept. 2. — Preferring death to the prospect of having to face an official inquiry into the condition of his books, Lee Hoag, twenty-seven years old, and married, who has been acting as local agent for a Chicago tea concern, shot himself in the head with a 22-caliber revolver at his home. The bullet passed through his right temple and came out at the side of the nose, inflicting a wound which is not likely to prove fatal unless complications should develop.

After a preliminary investigation by two representatives of the Chicago house, which is said to have disclosed an apparent shortage of about $400 in Hoag's accounts, the investigators called at the home of the young man and asked him to turn over his books to them for examination. After bringing down some of the books he returned upstairs ostensibly for others. A moment later his callers were startled by the report of a revolver, and suspecting what it meant they sent a hurried call to police headquarters.

When officers arrived and proceeded upstairs they found Hoag lying on a bed, unconscious and bleeding profusely from the wound in his head. An ambulance conveyed injured man to Hurley hospital where he rallied sufficiently to realize what he had done and to express regret for his act. He declared that he wanted to live so that he might face the investigation, asserting that he was entirely innocent of any intention to defraud his employers. The investigation has disclosed that Hoag had neglected to make charges on the books against persons to whom he had extended credit.

LESS DEATHS; MORE BIRTHS

July Report for Michigan Better Than June Record.

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 30. — There were 2,818 deaths reported to the department of state during the month of July. This number corresponds to the annual death rate of 11.4 per 1,000 estimated population. A decrease of thirty-four deaths is noted as compared with the month of June. There were 544 deaths of infants under one year of age and 789 deaths of persons sixty-five years and over.

There were 5,477 births during July. This number corresponds to an annual birth rate of 23.0 per 1,000 estimated population. An increase of 207 births is noted over the month immediately preceding.

STORM AT TRAVERSE CITY

Farmers in That Vicinity Thought to Have Suffered Heavily.

Traverse City, Mich., Sept. 3.—One of the worst electrical storms in years raged in this district and the loss is expected to total several hundred thousand dollars. No deaths have been reported.

Telephone and telegraph companies lost heavily and it is believed that a large share of the damage must be sustained by farmers, whose crops in many instances were completely destroyed.

RAILWAYS LOOKIMG FOR A CAR FAMINE

Shortage of 170,833 Units by October 25 Anticipated.

Quick Orders for New Rolling Stock Have Practically Exhausted Steel Mills' Capacity for Present Year.

The United States is face to face with the gravest car famine in its history.

A shortage of 179,833 cars by Oct. 25, provided only that the amount of traffic handled in 1909 is furnished this year, was estimated in a warning bulletin issued by W. A. Garrett, chairman of the Association of Western Railways.

Heavy Tonnage in Sight.

The largest tonnage that has ever been handled by the country's railroads is declared to be in sight already, however, a western grain crop breaking all previous records and a sudden boom in all branches of business combining to put an unprecedented strain upon transportation facilities. This would largely increase the estimate of shortage.

Figures for August, later than those upon which Chairman Garrett's calculations were based, were on hand in the office of the Western Railways association, and showed a constant decrease in the number of available cars. The decrease in four weeks has been more than 25,000 cars.

Appeals Sent to Shippers.

Appeals to shippers to make the utmost use of every available car are being sent out broadcast by the railways. One railroad has issued a warning to many of its customers that they would better do what shipping they can in the next sixty days, as the prospects are that the road will not be able to furnish cars by the end of October.

Appeals to shippers to empty cars the minute they are received or to fill empties as soon as they are furnished, to manage if possible to fill every car close to capacity, and to take advantage of every possible means of reducing car waste have been distributed by the railways by the hundreds of thousands.

Rush for New Equipment.

With realization of the situation there has been a mad rush of the railways to the car builders, with the result that all the car factories are stocked up with orders for months ahead and the new equipment will not be ready for service in any effective numbers until next year. The car builders have ordered steel for their building material up to the capacity of the steel mills and cannot produce cars at a greater rate than the bounds set by the steel producers.

ARCHBOLD INDICTED

Standard Oil Men Accused of Violating the Anti-Trust Law.

The federal grand jury at Dallas, Tex., has just returned an indictment against John D. Archbold and other prominent oil men as representatives of the Standard Oil company. The charges are restraint of trade and commerce, unlawful conspiracy and combination in violation of the anti-trust laws.

It is alleged that individual defendants, the Standard Oil company and the Magnolia Petroleum company conspired to destroy the business of the Piece-Fordyce Oil association of Texas.

At Fond du Lac, Wis., Bishop Charles Chapman Grafton, the oldest bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church, died at the age of eighty two years. He had been in the Episcopal ministry for fifty-three years, and had been bishop of the diocese of Fond du Lac for twenty-four years. His life had been despaired of for several weeks.

WOOD UNDER ARREST

President American Woolen Company Charged with Conspiracy.

At Boston, Mass., Friday, President William M. Wood of the American Woolen company, was arrested on an indictment charging him with conspiring to distribute dynamite in Lawrence during the general strike there last winter.

President Wood surrendered to the authorities and was accompanied by counsel.

MAY RAISE PERRY'S FLAGSHIP.

Niagara in Good Condition After Century Under Water.

The flagship Niagara that led the American fleet under Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry to victory in the battle of Lake Erie, Sept. 10, 1813, after the first flagship, Lawrence, had been shot to pieces and abandoned, will be raised and rebuilt.

The hull of the vessel, lying in twenty feet of water in Misery bay, an arm of Presque Isle bay, better known as the Erie (Pa.) harbor, was thoroughly examined by Dan Claflin, a diver from Toledo, O., under the supervision of A. Q. Thatcher of the Thatcher Contracting company of Toledo and Milton W. Shreve, speaker of the house of representatives of the Pennsylvania state legislature.

Diver Claflin spent about three hours going over every part of the abandoned hull. He reported that the flagship was in good condition. He brought up spikes, made of hand hammered iron, that had been under the water almost a century

BOY FALLS 2,000 FEET

Caught by Balloon Rope and Carried into Air.

When at a Great Height the Rope Untangles and the Lad Plunges to His Death.

Flint, Mich., Sept. 2.—In the presence of hundreds of spectators Chester Betts, fourteen year old, was caught by the guy rope of a balloon and carried about 2,000 feet into the air before the rope untangled and let him fall to his death.

He crashed against the roof of a barn and was still alive when spectators reached him, but he died while in an ambulance on the way to the hospital.

The accident occurred at the county fair. Young Betts, with several other boys, was holding the balloon to the earth with guy ropes while the aeronaut, Abner Amshell of Lansing, was preparing to start his flight.

When the order came to let go Betts dropped the rope, but it caught about his foot and carried him into the air.

LIKE A BUSY CITY

Will Be State Fair Grounds During Week of Exposition.

Detroit, Sept. 3.—With its postoffice, bank, express offices, school, places of amusement, police department, fire department and a population of over 300,000 people during the week of Sept. 16 to 21, the Fair City becomes second in size to Detroit for one week only. The Michigan State Fair grounds will be more densely populated than the city of Detroit and during the fair will be provided with everything a city inhabitant could desire.

The postoffice department has arranged to give the Fair City a substation with two collections and two deliveries daily. The People's State Bank has arranged to open a branch on the grounds. The National and United States Express companies will construct buildings immediately for their business and the Grand Trunk railroad is constructing a station on the grounds.

Upwards of 200 boys will attend the Boys' State Fair school this year and more next year. The model farm will provide employment for a lot of youngsters. The very young will find amusement at the play grounds and along the midway created for the little ones.

The Fair City will be temperate in every way, for no bars of any character will be found. Soft drinks will be obtainable all over the grounds and milk may be had at the new dairy building in bottles and pasteurized. Butter may be obtained and bread and cakes also. The fruit and agricultural products may be bought in the huge market place for delivery at the close of the fair and the products of the boys' minature farms may also be purchased.

Thousands of people will camp on the grounds the entire week.

BOY KILLED BY CAVE-IN

Cadillac Lad Found Buried in Dirt by Father.

Cadillac, Mich., Sept. 3.—Mrs. Peter Anderson stepped into her back yard and standing on the edge of a freshly caved-in spot in the earth, called to her nine-year-old son, Frank.

Two hours later the father discovered the boy buried under a foot of dirt. Frank had been digging a hole and the dirt had caved in, smothering the boy to death.

GRAND RAPIDS—Mrs. Mily R. Smith, who was eighty-seven years old, one of Grand Rapids' first settlers, is dead. She came here with her husband overland from Detroit in 1849.

COL. ROOSEVELT IN HIS OWN DEFENSE

Letter to Senator Moses E. Clapp Is Given Out.

Says that Present Attack of John D. Archbold and Senator Penrose Is Solely Upon Late Cornelius N. Bliss.

Col. Roosevelt gave out the letter which he gave to Senator Moses E. Clapp, chairman of the senate campaign investigating committee, before which John D. Archbold and Senator Penrose charged that Mr. Roosevelt has been party to the soliciting and [illegible] of Standard Oil campaign [illegible] in 1904.

Mr. Roosevelt almost at the opening gives the lie in these words:

Colonel Charges Falsehood.

"As regards the statements of Mr. Penrose and Mr. Archbold that with my consent or knowledge Mr. Bliss asked the Standard Oil people for $100,000 or any other sum, or received such sum from them, it is an unqualified falsehood."

Farther on Colonel Roosevelt compares Senator Penrose to a grafting policeman, and adds, "His language is precisely the language that might be used by a blackmailing police officer in a big city in advising the keeper of a law-breaking liquor saloon or a gambling house to contribute liberally, because otherwise he 'might incur hostility in certain quarters.' If this language were proved against the policeman he would be removed from the police force."

Full Publicity Promised.

Mr. Roosevelt promises that there shall be full publicity of contributions in his primary last spring.

"I wish to emphasize the fact," he continues, "that the testimony of Mr. Archbold and Mr. Penrose in this matter is an attack on Mr. Bliss, who is dead, and is also, unwittingly, the severest possible reflection on themselves; but it is in no sense any attack on me except insofar as they assert that the dead man said that I knew of his request for money from them.

"I do not believe that Mr. Bliss said this any more than I believe their accusation that Mr. Bliss deliberately tried to blackmail the Standard Oil company. But please keep in mind that this is an assault on Mr. Bliss and not on me."

After a sweeping denial of knowledge or consent to any of the steps in the transactions as set forth by the two witnesses, he pays a glowing tribute to the memory of Mr. Bliss, but adds that, of course, he could not say whether Mr. Bliss had asked for or had received the money.

Quotes Odl Bliss Interview.

Futher to prove that his skirts are entirely clean in the matter, although the skirts of others might not be so clean, Mr. Roosevelt quotes from what purported to be an interview with Cornelius N. Bliss, published in the New York Herald of Dec. 24, 1911. In this Mr. Bliss is quoted as correcting Edward H. Harriman's assertion that in 1904 he received word of the desperate state in New York from Mr. Roosevelt. Mr. Bliss said that he conveyed that information to the rail road man. He discusses the situation and the steps taken to raise the $200,000. At the conclusion of the interview there are these questions quoted in the Roosevelt letter which apparently farther involve Mr. Bliss:

"Then the president had nothing to do with the raising of the money?"

Answer: "Not once in the conference of the committee was there any suggestion that he was doing it. The only thing that Mr. Roosevelt had to do with such matters was to issue orders that money was not to be accepted from this or that person. His orders were ignored, as it was recognized that this was something about which he must not interfere and I brooked no interference."

Cortelyou Correspondence Cited.

The letter to Senator Clapp, which is about 15,000 words long, goes exhaustively into his correspondence with Chairman Cortelyou of Oct. 26 and 27, in which it is ordered that the $100,000 from the Standard Oil company be returned at once, although the sum is not mentioned, all of which was just after the time that Alton B. Parker had first made his charge that the Republican nominee and his chairman were obtaining money from the great corporations in an effective way.

Sturgis, Mich., Sept. 3. — The artificial ice plant owned by Gushwa & Schermerhorn, recently completed, was totally destroyed by fire. The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss is $15,000; insurance, $7,500.

MONROE—Anthony Crunner, aged eighteen years, who lives in Pittsburg, Pa., arrested in Toledo on the charge of taking some jewelry and other trinkets from the home of Mrs. O'Reilley in this city, pleaded guilty before Judge Berthelote. He was fined $21 or to serve thirty days in the county jail. Crunner expects to pay the fine. Roswell Swan and Emil Ludwig and his wife, arrested at the same time, were given their liberty.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY, & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Every man has a lot of old debts due him that he can't collect, and knows he can't collect, and yet talks about them a great deal.

A really effective kidney and bladder medicine must first stop the progress of the disease and then cure the conditions that cause it. Use Foley Kidney Pills for all kidney and bladder troubles and urinary irregularities. They are safe and reliable. They help quickly and permanently. In the yellow package.

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

It is possible to make a great reputation with a little sense; a man with a little sense is really quite a genius.

$80,000,000.00 LOST ANNUALLY BY WAGE EARNERS

Dr. Sadler estimates that about $800,000,000.00 in wages is lost annually to the American people as a direct result of colds. Lost time means lost wages and doctoring is expensive. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly. It will stop the cough, and heal and sooth the sore and inflamed air passages. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

There are a thousand things the people ought to do, and although they admit it, they will never do them.

Uncle Ezra Says

"It don't take more'n a gill uv effort to get folks into a peck of trouble" and a little neglect of constipation, biliousness, indigestion or other liver derangement will do the same. If ailing, take Dr. King's New Life Pills for quick results. Easy, safe, sure, and only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

A man should either be able to keep his temper, or be abe to whip the man he is quarreling with.

The Men Who Succeed

as heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success, to-day, demands health. To ail is to fail. It's utter folly for a man to endure a weak run-down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas. B. Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders, and deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well." Try them. Only 50 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Those riding in automobiles are not as happy and comfortable as those on foot think they are.

Mrs. J. N. Hill, Homer, Ga., has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years, and she says she always recommends it to her friends. "It never fails to cure our coughs and colds and prevents croup. We have five children and always give them Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for a cold, and they are all soon well. We would not be without it in our house." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Laugh when a friend tells a joke; it is one of the numerous taxes you must pay.

What We Never Forget

according to science, are the things associated with our early home life, such as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, that mother or grandmother used to cure our burns, boils, scalds, sores, skin eruptions, cuts, sprains or bruises. Forty years of cures prove its merit. Unrivaled for piles, corns or cold-sores. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Some people are so strong on talk that they try to pay their bills with it.

T. L. Parks, Murryville, Ga., Route 1, is in his 73rd year, and was recently cured of a bad kidney and bladder trouble. He says himself: "I have suffered with my kidneys. My back ached and I was annoyed with bladder irregularities. I can truthfully say, one 50c bottle of Foley Kidney Pills cured me entirely." They contain no habit forming drugs.

For sale by all Druggists of Tecumseh.

Marie Antoinette's Prison Fare.

An interesting document has been published—the bill of the caterers who supplied Marie Antoinette's needs in prison. They boarded her, it seems, for seventy-four days at 15 francs a day, giving her for that sum coffee for breakfast and for dinner soup, boiled beef, fowl and dessert or, as an occasional alternative, duck and pastry. For forty-one days she had her maid with her, and the maid was boarded for 3 francs a day. Beds, mattresses and bed linen had to be hired, and the charge for these was 54 francs, while the hire of a bath amounted to no less than 60 francs. The washing bill, however, was only 22 francs, and the loan of books, at 1 franc a book, came to not more than 16 francs. The principal other item was 3 francs for a bottle of dentifrice, and the total of the bill, which the nation had to pay was 1,407 francs—a little over £56.

Qualified.

Baron—You have called to secure the position of porter? Applicant—Yes, sir. Baron—Was there not some one in the anteroom as you came in? Applicant—There was, sir. There was a man with a bill against you, Herr Baron, but I threw him out.—Fliegende Blatter.

Ether.

Ether was known to the earliest chemists. Nitric ether was discovered by Kunkel in 1681 and muriatic ether, from the chloride of tin, in 1759, by Courtanvaux. Acetic ether was first prepared by Gay-Lussac. The beneficent discovery that ether is capable of rendering one insensible to pain is due to Drs. Jackson and Morton, who, about the year 1846, introduced it into the practice of surgery. Some claim that as between the two men the honors are about easy. Apart from the blessedness of the discovery of anaesthesia, it is impossible to estimate the value of the discovery to surgery as a science. It enables the delicate operation that would otherwise be impossible.—New York American.

A Point of Law.

"Do you see that man over there?"

The world famous detective spoke in a low whisper, and his friend looked quickly around, scenting a mystery.

"Yes," he replied, just as cautiously.

"Well, he's a professional forger."

"Then why don't you arrest him?" asked the friend in surprise.

The world famous detective grinned aggravatingly.

"Can't," he said briefly. "It's not breaking the law to make horseshoes."

Soup Extraordinary.

Mrs. Mayfield was interviewing an applicant for the position of cook. "Can you make all kinds of sweets, entrees and soups?" she asked. "Oh, yes, mum!" said the applicant. "Do you make good mock turtle soup?" "Oh, yes, mum!" Experience had made Mrs. Mayfield a little distrustful. "Tell me how you would set about it," she said. "Well, of course, mum, like anybody else would." "But how would you make it?" persisted the lady. "Why, mum," said the cook, making a bold guess, "my way is to make a good strong soup first with anything I 'appen to have, then while it is on the boil I throw the young mock turtles in, mum!"—London Express.

Why He Laughed.

A south side woman sent her small son with a note to his father, asking him to purchase some groceries and send them home in the little fellow's wagon.

"I could not find papa, so I gave the note to the groceryman," announced Herold indignantly, "and he just laughed and laughed." This is what the note said:

"Dearest—Please put some sugar and rice in Herold's wagon. 'Tootsie.'"—Kansas City Star.

Grand Demonstraton

MAJESTIC RANGES

Slayton & Son As Entertainers and Instructors Made a Fine Showing Tuesday Afternoon.

As advertised in last Fridays issue of the Herald, Slayton & Son had a fine demonstration of the Majestic Range in their up stair display room Tuesday afternoon. There were gay banners and display ads in every possible place and the room resembled a gala day meeting place. Small tables and chairs were arranged for the convience of the guests who partook of the hot biscuit, cake and coffee, served.

Two beautiful Majestic ranges were on exhibition, with a good coal fire in one to show it up, in working order, and the other was open for inspection throughout.

There was quite a company of ladies present, who all seemed much interested in the range and most of them were notable housewives. They knew a good thing when they saw it, and as each part of the range was explained to them, they could appreciate its advantages.

A full table of stove furniture valued at $8.00 was on display as a special inducement to anyone who purchased a range this week, this to be given as a special for this week only.

Did any of you see the huge cake in Spayde's window? It was baked in the range in the forenoon, and as advertised was crushed under a plank with nine ladies on it and gracefully rose again and was dealt out in generous slices to those who were present.

The demonstration of this range continues through the week and will interest any who go to see.

Slayton & Son deserve much credit for the great pains they have taken to make this a pleasant as well as profitable showing.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

The Kansas Federation of Labor, in convention at Independence last week, endorsed equal suffrage. A Kansas suffragist is responsible for the following:

A lady there was who said "Why
Should men have the vote and not I
To call this democracy is naught but hypocrisy
I'll get me the ballot or die."

Clifford Howard, writer, editor and president of the Los Angles Evening City club, to whose efforts much of the credit for the California suffrage victory is attributed, is campaigning for votes for women in Ohio.

Brand Whitlock, Mayor of Toledo, says, in the Woman's Journal, I believe in woman suffrage because I believe in democracy, and I think it is growing increasingly clear that those who oppose woman suffrage oppose it because they oppose democracy. Every argument that is urged against the enfranchisement of women may be urged with equal force and consistency in favor of the disfranchisement of men. Men do not vote because they always vote right, or because they go to war (the only ones who can't vote are the soldiers), or because they love their homes, or vote independently of their wives' desires or in obedience or in opposition to their commands or because they are all practical or wise or unemotional, or because politics is their authentic or peculiar shere; they vote simply and solely because they are men; there is no other reason under the constitution or under the sky. And the only reason why women should vote, or why they should have the right to vote, is because they are women, because in common with men they are a part, and it would seem quite an essential part, of humanity. The electoral qualification in America is a human qualification, basic, elemental, and not at all artificial, and the human standard which America set up in the beginning is approached in that degree in which all of humanity is admitted to the effort to realize the sublime ideal."

The Demonstrator, was the right man in the right place, and whether making cake or serving it, showing the merits of the ranges or any other work that came before him, he was up and ready.

Royal Letters Prized.

Royal letter writers may expect that, in the vicissitudes of the centuries, their popularity will come to the test of that democratic implement, the auctioneer's hammer. Judged by this standard, King Edward III. and Queen Elizabeth have no reason to feel slighted. In London the other day one of the king's letters sold for $1,450, and a letter from Queen Elizabeth to Henry III. of France brought $1,225.

Big Bargain Day Set For September 10

MERCHANTS OF TECUMSEH UNITE IN A SPECIAL SALES DAY EFFORT

Thursday, September 10th, is going to be one of the biggest days in the history of Tecumseh. This is no idle assertion, and Tecumseh on that day will have a throng of out of town visitors that will make it look like a bargain day. In fact, that's what it is to be. It will be a combination Bargain Sales Day, a combined effort of the merchants of Tecumseh.

C. P. Woodward, of the Miner & Woodward, of Grand Rapids, organizers of bargain sale days, is here making arrangements for the big sale the date being set as given above. In one sense of the word this is not a new idea, but it is new in towns of this size. In places where sales have been held for the past few months tremendous success has crowned the combined efforts. Judging from such success arrangements were made with the Miner & Woodward firm to inaugrate the system here.

It's a big thing for store patrons. On this day bargains will be offered that will certainly please the public, Bargains that people will eagerly await and take advantage of. It is and advertising scheme, and a good one. The scheme is to boost Tecumseh as a trading point. Instead of putting on a balloon ascension, street fair or something like that, the merchants will put their money in goods to be sold at a bargain. It advertises the town, it advertises the stores where the bargains are offered. It gives the merchant a chance to extend his acquaintance. If the people like the bargains, like the stores and stocks, then its better than an even chance that they will come again. That's the way to advertise.

Next week this paper will be chuck full of advertising that will "deelight" you.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE THIRD DEGREE"

The forthcoming production of Charles Klein's latest play, "The Third Degree," which the United Play Company will present at the Bradley Opera House on Thursday, September 12, should arouse the interest of every playgoer, whether or not they were fortunate enough to have witnessed Mr. Klein's former success, "The Lion and the Mouse."

In his latest play, "The Third Degree," the author has seen fit to change the locale to New York City and taken for his central characters members of the old Knickerbocker set.

The story deals with a young man of good parentage who is under suspicion of having occasioned the murder of a man found dead under most peculiar circumstances. The Police in their stupidity, seeking to unravel the mystery, and anxious to fasten the guilt on someone, seize upon the boy as their victim and bring to bear the entire weight of their authority to convict him. The young man's wife, seeking to aid him, solicits the assistance of his father, and being refused, sets herself to defeat the minions of the law in their efforts to miscarry justice and with no other resources that a woman's intuition, ingenuity, cunning and courage, combats them single handed. The piece abounds in thrilling situations, which, if Mr. Klein had never done other than to create them, would have stamped him as a dramatist of rare ability. There is an abundant sprinkling of wholesome comedy throughout to relieve the more serious dramatic scenes.

RURAL MAIL CARRIERS WILL HAVE AN INCREASE IN SALARY

By authority given by the postoffice appropiation bill, Postmaster General Hitchcock gave an increase of salary to rural letter carriers on all standard routes, giving them $1,100 instead of $1000 as heretofore. This order will effect 30,000 men, proportionate increase to those on shorter routes.

This will mean an increase of $4,000,000 a year for disbursement.

CATARRH OF STOMACH

Indigestion and Stomach Agony Quickly Ended

If you went to thirty doctors and paid each his fee for a prescription for indigestion or stomach misery it is ten chances to one you wouldn't get such a good prescription as the one from which MI-O-NA stomach tablets are made.

How can such a thing be? you naturally ask.

Simply because the man who wrote the prescription from which MI-O-NA tablets are made knows more about stomach diseases than 96 per cent of all the physicians in America, and he gets paid for knowing.

And when you can get a large box of tablets made from this doctor's prescription for only 50 cents, are you going to continue to suffer? Sold by C A. Wright & Son and druggists everywhere.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Friday Aug. 30, was the birthday of Frances Gillespie when she was five years old. A party of relatives surprised the young lady with a party; taking baskets of good things for supper and packages of pretty things for presents, a most enjoyable time was spent by all

Among the guests were Mrs. F. D. Rector, Mrs. Bert Rector, Fred and Earl Rector and the little Misses Edith, Dorthy and Ruth Rector, Madeline Boyce and Clara Wilson who with Arline and Geraldine sisters, of Miss Frances made a very lively company

ACCIDENTS

Harold Sisson is No. 3 on the accident list at Adams Park, now we hope the spell is broken. Harold was performing on the rings when he was pushed by one of his schoolmates, so that he fell to the ground and sprained one of his legs quite badly. He was taken to his home and a doctor soon rendered the necessary attention. He may not be able to return to school in a week or ten days.

We regret to hear that Mrs. M. H. Taylor met with quite a painful accident Wednesday afternoon, while visiting at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Will Fisher. She had risen from her chair for some purpose, and the position had been changed, so that in sitting down again she fell to the floor. She was quite badly shaken up, and it was necessary to call a physician who discovered that she had fractured a rib. The shock to her whole system was severe. It is hoped that nothing serious will result from the accident.

MRS. GERTRUDE HUEY

Mrs. Gertrude Huey died at the Arnold Home for old ladies in Detroit, at midnight Wednesday. Her body will be brought here for burial, Friday evening. The funeral services will be held at the Presbyterian chapel at 1:30 p. m., Saturday.

Mrs. Huey was a long time resident of Tecumseh, and was Librarian for a nnmber of years. She was an active worker in club work, and a faithful church woman. At the death of her husband, who died some years ago, she was left to fight the battle of life for herself and her little daughter. She entered school for a few months and qualified herself as a teacher, which profession she followed, until her health failed her. Afterwards she became Librarian, until such time as her pain racked body made it impossible for her to do more. For a few months she was in St. Joseph's hospital in Adrian. later going to Detroit where she was an inmate of the Arnold Home, until death released her from her sufferings. Her daughter, Florence who has been her faithful companion, is left to mourn her loss.

MEN'S CLASS ENTERTAINED.

A most pleasant evening was spent by the men and women of the Presbyterian congregation Tuesday. The occasion was the pot luck supper and program given under the auspices of the Men's Class.

At 6:30 p. m. eighty people sat down around the large serving table which groaned with its burden of good things. Later in the evening the company retired to the social room where a musical program was rendered:

Piano duet—Misses Halladay and Kemp.
Vocal solo—Mr. F. Feun.
Violin solo—Mr. Leon McLaughlin.
Vocal solo—Mr. Elmer Slayton.

The real event of the evening however was the address given by Dr. Seibert of Adrian on "The Man and Religon."

The purpose of the evening was to arouse interest in the Men's Class which recomences Sunday next.

Grain Drills

The selection of a Grain Drill is an important part of the next year's wheat crop. A poor drill that sows uneven, or not at all at times, is a detriment to any farmer and may lose him the price of a good drill. We have been pushing the Ontario for several years and have had the best success with this make. Our fertilizer feed is cleanable and positive. Change gears are always ready. Ratchet rub. Light draft, strong construction and many features not found in other drills. We want you to have an Ontario.

FERTILIZER

Best results in wheat and clover catch are obtained by using "Union Brand" Fertilizer. We have a good stock ready for sale.

CERTAIN RESULTS

Many a Tecumseh Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Tecumseh. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times for the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store and my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it."

(Statement given December 7, 1908.)

A willing Re Endorsement.

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed on August 29, 1911, he said: I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented. You may continue to use my name as a reference."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other

Antoine Deloata, Postmaster at Garden, Mich., knows the exact facts when he speaks of the curative value of Foley Kidney Pills. He says: "From my own experience I recommend Foley Kidney Pills, as a great remedy for kidney trouble My father was cured of kidney disease and a good many of my neighbors were cured by Foley Kidney Pills."

Many Driven From Home

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery and and cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles find quick relief and health returns. Its help in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping-cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50c. and $1 00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

U. A. Smith, Bridgeton, Ind., had kidney trouble for years, and was so crippled with rheumatism he could not dress without help. He started using Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I began to get better at once, and now all my trouble has left me and I do not feel that I ever had rheumatism. I rest well all night and tho' 59 years old, can now do the work of a man of 35 years I would like to be the means of others getting benefit from Foley Kidney Pills." Refuse substitutes.

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Battles and Rain.

That rain followed many of the battles of our war was due not to the effect of the discharge of firearms, but to the fact that in the regions where the battles occurred rain falls on an average one day out of three and that commanders are more inclined to move armies and begin engagements in fair weather. In fact, while rain is in progress such operations are commonly impracticable on account of the condition of the roads. If by the regular operations of nature rain does not fall within two or three days after a battle it is due to the fact that a drought prevails. The idea of rain following battles is expressed in the writings of Plutarch, who states his opinion that the vapor rising from the hot breath, blood and sweat of the struggling masses is condensed into rain by the concussion of the weapons and the hoarse cries of the victors. In a form little less crude the belief that rain is caused by battles has survived to the present day, but it is absolutely unfounded.—Willis L. Moore.

Women Sweep the Streets.

There are many systems of street cleaning, but probably that of the French government of Porto Novo, Dahomey, West Africa, is the most economical. The native police examine the streets, and at any part which requires cleaning they stop the women and girls who happen to be passing at the time and order them to sweep the rubbish into heaps. A woman may be seen hurrying along, water jar on head, child strapped on back and perhaps on urgent business, when the native policeman hands her a brush, made from a palm tree leaf, and orders her to do her share of sweeping. This she does reluctantly, knowing how useless it is to refuse. Occasionally the native refuses to do this enforced labor, but in the end the sweeping is done, for the police possess unique powers. The men are exempt from this unpaid work, as, naturally, it would interfere and retard the trade of the colony.

Baboons That Like Oysters.

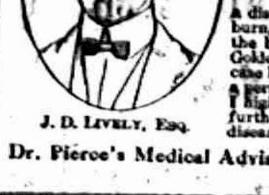
The liking for oysters is not confined to man alone. F. W. Fitzsimons in a recently published book says that he found in South Africa baboons that were fond of, in fact, all kinds of shellfish. Troops of the baboons often make excursions to the seaside, he says, to get these salty delicacies They open the shells with their strong teeth or by striking them on a rock

Why Women Are Not RICH.

Man is a millionaire many times over in the possession of blood cells. Woman is not quite so rich, for scientists have proven that the normal man has five million—the woman only four and a half million to a cubic millimetre of blood.

A decrease in number of red blood corpuscles and a person "looks pale"—in fact, is anaemic, the blood does not get the right food and probably the stomach is disordered.

Dr. R. V. Pierce found years ago that a glyceric extract of golden seal and Oregon grape roots, queen's root and bloodroot with black cherrybark, would help the assimilation of the food in the stomach, correct liver ills and in Nature's own way increase the red blood corpuscles. This medicine he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. By assimilating the food eaten the system is nourished and the blood takes on a rich red color. Nervousness is only "the cry of the starved nerves for food," and when the nerves are fed on rich red blood the person looses those irritable feelings, sleeps well at night and is refreshed in the morning.



J. D. LIVELY, Esq.

"I was attacked with a severe nervous disease, which was caused by a disordered stomach and liver," writes MR. JAS. D. LIVELY, of Washburn, Tenn., Route 2, Box 33. "All my friends thought I would die and the best physicians gave me up. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and derived much benefit from same. My case had run so long, it had become so chronic that nothing would effect a permanent cure, but Dr. Pierce's medicine has done much for me and I highly recommend it. I heartily advise its use as a spring tonic, and further advise ailing people to take Dr. Pierce's medicines before their diseases have run so long that there is no chance to be cured."

A Dutch New Guinea Dainty.

A strange food forms one of the articles of diet among the natives of Dutch New Guinea, of whom A. F. R. Wollaston writes in Cornhill as "The Most Primitive People."

"The search for food furnishes occasionally some very curious scenes. One of the most remarkable occurs when the river in flood brings down a tree trunk in a suitable stage of decay. A canoe is sent out with men to secure it and tow it to the bank. When it has been left stranded by the falling water the people—men, women and children—come out and swarm around it like bees about a honey pot, and you wonder what they can be doing. When you go close you find that some are splitting up the log with their stone axes, and others are cutting up the fragments with sharpened shells in the same way that their ancestors—and perhaps ours, too—did centuries ago. The objects of their search are the large white larvae of a beetle, about the size of a man's thumb. I have seen natives eat them just as they cut them out of the wood, but usually they roast them in the fire and consider them a great delicacy."

Why He Balked.

A young and husky college man who was traveling on a steamer across the Atlantic was asked to box five rounds with an equally husky chap, who was a fellow passenger, as part of a series of athletic games which were to be held for the amusement of the passengers. Next day the young man came to the chairman of the sports committee and asked that his name be withdrawn. "What's the matter? Are you afraid?" said the chairman, somewhat piqued. "You bet your life I'm afraid," said the collegian. "That fellow you picked for my opponent sits at my table, and at dinner last night he leaned over to me and said, 'What's this thing "demitasse" I see on the menu?' I knew right away that he was a 'rough guy' who had lived all his life in the open. If you want me to fight you've got to find a man that knows a demitasse when he sees it."—New York Tribune.

Neapolitan Dishes.

In the matter of curious dishes that Neapolitan favorite, the polyp, should be mentioned. The beautiful bay abounds with them, and the fishermen who make the little harbor of Santa Lucia their headquarters spend most of the day and night catching them. They are served whole and are not so repulsive as might be supposed, turning up in the "mixed fish fry" a nice golden brown. The Neapolitans have strong teeth and digestion. Polyps are tough, and I have always shunned myself to the tentacles, which are crisp and tasty. They are usually accompanied by rings cut from the cuttlefish. These are tougher still, but what, with butterfly fish, gurnets, mullets and other unknown varieties, a fritto misto pesche at Naples is not to be despised.—London Standard.

Great Men Who Drank.

Cato was a hard drinker, while, in the language of one writer, old Ben Jonson was constantly "pickled." The poet Savage used to go on the hardest kinds of "tears," and Rogers observed after seeing his own statue, "It is the first time I have seen him stand straight for many years." Byron says of Porson, the great classical scholar, "I can never recollect him except as drunk or brutal and generally both." Keats was on a spree once that lasted six months. Horace, Plato, Aristophanes, Euripides, Alcaeus, Socrates and Tasso of the old timers and Goethe, Schiller, Addison, Pitt, Fox, Blackstone, Fielding, Sterne and Steele were all hard drinkers at intervals.—London Times.

The Lady and the Oath.

The Lawyer (to the lady)—You understand the nature of an oath, don't you? The Lady (a little flurried)—I beg your pardon. The Lawyer (testily)—What is the nature of an oath? The Lady (triumphantly)—Profane, isn't it?—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Politeness is a coin destined to enrich those who give it away.

SEVEN KILLED IN WRECK

Fast Train on Northwestern Road Goes Into the Ditch.

Near Shawano, Wis., seven persons, including nearly the entire crew, were killed and twenty-one injured, some seriously, when a fast sleeping car train of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, was ditched in a washout caused by a cloudburst.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

LANSING—An astonishing lack of interest in the primary campaign may eliminate many Democratic candidates from the running throughout the state. An amendment to the primary election law passed at the last session of the legislature provides that no candidate shall receive a certificate of nomination from the election board unless his party shall cast a vote of 15 per cent of the vote cast for secretary of state at the last election. Reports from many parts of the state show that less than 15 per cent of the party was out in many counties and legislative districts. For a time it was feared that not enough votes were out to insure the state ticket a place on the ballot, but it is believed this danger is now over.

PETOSKEY—While it was coming in the direction of Petoskey at a speed of thirty miles an hour, a touring car driven by Howard Doughty of Grand Rapids went into a ditch at Rosedale, about a mile north of here, and turned over, throwing everyone out. Doughty sustained a badly bruised right arm, while Clara Pottroff, a vaudeville actress of Detroit, who is performing at a local theater, was so badly hurt it was necessary for her to undergo an operation at her hotel. It is believed she will recover. Norman Feldman of Petoskey, sustained injuries to his hip and Ethel Finnan, also of this city escaped with slight injuries.

BUCKLEY—An unknown woodsman who had been employed in Rennie's camp, about four miles southeast of here, suddenly went crazy while on his way to work and dashed off through the woods, yelling like a wild man. It took the combined efforts of the whole crew to capture him. He was taken to the Traverse City asylum.

DETROIT—Two Detroit aldermen, Louis Tossy and Martin J. Ostrowski were bound over for trial on charges of receiving bribes. Other aldermen and Edward R. Schreiter, former clerk, also appeared in police court to answer a blanket warrant alleging conspiracy to defraud the city. This case was continued until Sept. 10.

JACKSON—The police of this city have started a campaign against the use of cigarettes by minors, the first arrest being made when Byron Daly was taken into custody, on a charge of selling cigarettes to Edward Miller, a sixteen-year-old boy. Daly pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs.

GRAND RAPIDS—Police Patrolman Andrew Vanderwelde, who recently shot and killed Clarence Gates, sixteen years old, while chasing him away from a city steam roller, was exonerated by a coroner's jury. He claimed he shot downward, and the bullet glanced on a cement walk.

HOLLAND—After being awakened by the crackling of flames, Henry Balgrooven and family escaped with their lives from his farm home at Olive Center, which was totally destroyed by fire of unknown origin at midnight. None of the furniture was saved. The loss is about $2,500.

KALAMAZOO—The city of Kalamazoo's new tuberculosis hospital will not be located in a cemetery. So strong was the protest to members of the council that the alderman decided to refer the matter to the health committee again.

On and Off.

"What a lot of style the Browns are putting on!"

"Yes, and what a lot of creditor they are putting off!"

When the Sheriff Failed

By Clara Ines Deacon

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

It was such a trifling thing that one would have laughed at the idea—it would bring such results.

Old Slade, who had been a gardener at the Elms for a decade, gashed his right hand on an old tomato can hidden in the grass and had to carry that arm in a sling. There was work for him to do, but as he couldn't do it one-handed a helper was advertised for and came down from the city.

The Elms was the home of Ashton, the broker. There were only two others in the family—his wife and his daughter Gertrude. That Miss Gertrude was engaged to young Mr. Davenport, the novelist, had not excited the country to any great extent. He came down with the father every Saturday noon and remained over Sunday. He had written many a tale where the lover was a hero and the girl a heroine, and where romance and adventure were thicker than rabbit tracks on the first winter's snow, but the course of their true love had been almost monotonous.

They hadn't even been attacked by a ferocious grasshopper while sauntering about the lawn. Theirs was a gentle, every-day cooing, and neither party suspected that an old tomato can was going to introduce thrills and throbs.

Old Slade didn't like his helper, who gave his name as Griggs. Griggs knew his business, but he was vain and conceited. He thought himself a Don Juan. He had read novels in which chauffeurs, gardeners and stable boys married the heiress of the family, and he was on the lookout for just such a financial transaction. It was his hint to Old Slade that he was going to win the heart of Miss Gertrude Ashton within thirty days that got the old man down on him and made him rail out:

"You let up on being a conceited fool and attend to your work, or you won't last here a day longer."

And then what does Miss Gertrude do but find out and in a spirit of mischief seem to encourage the hopes and aims of Don Juan? Just like nine girls out of ten, engaged or not! She paraded around; she sighed; she asked questions; she said she wished ——, and then turned her head away. She twisted Don Juan into knots inside of four days, and if he ever doubted the truth of these novels he came to believe in them now. A shock awaited him just around the corner.

Griggs came on a Monday morning. Mr. Davenport did not come down the following Saturday. Old Slade could have dropped a hint the first day that Miss Gertrude was engaged, as the matter was public property, but he was suffering with his hand, and then it wasn't his business to be dropping hints. By Friday of the following week he decided to go to a hospital in the city and have his hand treated. He would be gone four or five days, and Griggs would have charge.

That wasn't the shock Griggs was to get; that was the glad hand. With old Slade out of the way there must follow declarations of love and an elopement and marriage. One of the first things he would do after the couple had been forgiven and he had been installed as the sole and only son-in-law would be to break Slade's neck and discharge him with a ha! ha! During Saturday forenoon he was too busy with the lawn mower to declare his love, and shortly after lunch Mr. Ashton and the lover arrived. The lover was greeted with such cordiality that Griggs went to the kitchen and asked the cook:

"Who is that jackanapes that came down with the boss?"

"What! You speak of Mr. Davenport in that manner!" was exclaimed.

"Then who is Mr. Davenport?"

"He's what they call the fi-an-say of Miss Gertrude, and you'd better look out what you say about him."

"Do you mean they are engaged?"

"Sure thing. Going to be married as soon as her aunt gets back from Europe. It's a real love match."

Mr. Griggs' wobbling legs wobbled him to his room to sit down, and think things over. The cook was a liar! Miss Gertrude was not in love with Mr. Davenport. He, Griggs, had met up with several young ladies who were in love, and they were not sighing and looking friendless. If Miss Gertrude were engaged, then she had been forced into it by a cruel father, who was hard up for cash and was selling her to Davenport. Or the latter young man had caught on to a crime committed by the broker, and was demanding his daughter's hand as the price of silence.

When he left his room Griggs knew just what he would do if he got the chance, and he felt that he was a man to whom chances came.

At 11 o'clock that night Mr. Davenport strolled in the grounds to smoke a cigar before going to his room. At about five minutes after the hour, as was afterward remembered, an auto stopped for a moment in front of the gate and then sped onward.

At ten minutes after 11 an arm was thrown around Mr. Davenport's neck, a knee was pressed into the small of his back, and he was garroted as neatly as the job could have been done on the Bowery in its palmiest days. Not a yell for help—not a struggle! He was gagged and shouldered, and when he had got his wits back he was in the gardener's room.

It took some time for the victim to understand where he was. Griggs was in no hurry to tell him. He sat and gloated over his captive for awhile, and then removed the gag and asked:

"Do you know me?"

"I think I saw you cutting the grass," was the reply.

"I am Griggs, the second gardener, and you have crossed my path!"

"But how?"

"Through some villainous plot you hope to marry Miss Ashton. She does not love you, and I propose to foil you. In fact, I shall marry her myself."

"If you will untie these cords I will smile," answered the young man.

"You can do your smiling after Miss Ashton and I have eloped together. I have uncovered and shall foil your plot. Why, man, you deserve to be hung, and what can I say of the father who is aiding and abetting!"

"Are you a fool, or a lunatic?" demanded Mr. Davenport after a silence in which he tried to answer the question for himself.

"I may be either, but I'm not a black-hearted villain."

"You can be sure [illegible] squeal."

"But I sha'n't be. You two unmasked villains will not dare to raise a hand. That's all. Open your mouth to the gag."

The butler had remained up for Mr. Davenport to come in, so that the house could be locked up for the night. After a couple of hours had passed he aroused the house and a hunt was begun. Griggs was called down, but he had seen nothing. The grounds were gone over, a horn blown and the missing man's name shouted, but he could not be traced.

When morning came the sheriff was telephoned to, and he came out with two constables. There was an all-day search without result. Then the auto was remembered and the sheriff gave it as his opinion that the missing man had been seized and carried off for revenge or to be held for ransom! Acting on that theory, he spent most of the night telephoning and telegraphing. Griggs had been very officious in the search, and just at dusk he came in to find Miss Gertrude alone on the veranda. It was an opportunity, and he whispered:

"The villains have been foiled!"

"What do you mean?"

"Be in the arbor at 10 o'clock!"

"You idiot, what do you mean!" the girl flung at him as she saw the grin on his face.

"I love you!"

And that settled Mr. Griggs. He had sufficient sense to see that he had made a mistake, and as he had nothing to pack he took the highway at once.

It was the girl, at a family council, that figured out that Griggs had had something to do with the strange disappearance, and she afterward led the search of the outbuildings. Mr. Davenport was no more used up than a man that had been starved and gagged for twenty-four hours would nathrally be, and after a day or two was all right. They didn't overhaul Griggs, because they didn't want to, and Mr. Davenport agreed with his fiancee when she said:

"Why, I think it's positively nice that we can point to a bit of romance in our courtship! It was getting too humdrum!"

Job for Actors.

"One class of persons with whom Actors out of a job stand high is the managers of department stores," said a theatrical agent. "They covet them for floorwalkers. If men hanging around here looking for work would take that kind of a job not many of them would need to be idle.

"Managers in city shops offer them places, and country storekeepers write and telegraph for them. Actors make ideal floorwalkers. They are graceful, they are suave, they know how to please women.

"But it is as much as a man's life is worth to mention such a job to the average actor. His pride is a precious possession, and he would rather go hungry than work in a store in New York. Some of those who go broke on the road sometimes accept a place as floorwalker in southern and western towns for a few weeks, but the manager who can induce an actor to turn floorwalker in New York is smart enough to be elected president."

Kisses Missent.

James Rankin Young, superintendent of the dead-letter office, is now getting on in years, but he sees more of romance than almost any other man in this country. He looks through the love letters which are missent, either through wrong addresses, or through incorrect spelling, by the Romeos of the United States. He came across one not long ago which had been in an envelope bearing the following address: "A Big, Blue-eyed Strawberry Blonde."

Although it is his business to try to locate the senders of missent letters, he can make no progress in the work when the communications bear such signatures as "Your darling," "Oceans of kisses," and "Your baby, dear."—Popular Magazine.

In Praise of the Lawn Mower.

For muscular development, for the proper straining of muscles, laming of backs that man may be strong, for the binding of shoulders and the thickening of thews, what compares with the lawn mower? The labor is useful; there even comes with years a certain art which permits the manipulation of the mower like a chariot and insures the annihilation of the last dandelion spot with a skill that astounds the inexpert.—New York Sun.

REWARD OR PUNISH THE GODS

Chinese System That Has Merit, Though Somewhat Humiliating to the Deities.

The Peking Gazette publicly commends and compliments the state gods when the sovereign or regent is satisfied that they have done their full duty toward Chinamen. When some particular god distinguishes himself by an extraordinary service his rank among the gods is raised by imperial command.

Once the God of War was increased in importance by reason of the great armaments which the government undertook to support, and after he had shown his benevolence by allowing the imperial troops to defeat a body of rebels he was metaphorically patted on the back and raised to the same rank as Confucius, who had hitherto held the first place in the state Pantheon.

The following is an interesting announcement that appeared in the Gazette:

"The governor general of the Yellow river requests that a tablet be put up to the River God. During the transmission of relief rice to Honan, whatever difficulties were encountered through shallows, wind and rain, the River God interposed in the most unmistakable manner, so that the transport of grain went on without hindrance.

"Order—Let the proper officer prepare a tablet for the temple of the River God."

"A memorial tablet," announces another issue of the Gazette, "is granted to two temples in honor of the God of the Locusts. On the last appearance of locusts last summer prayers were offered to this deity with marked success."

Explained.

"I wonder," said Ascum, "what is the meaning of this 'class hatred' so many orators spout about nowadays."

"Ain't you wise to that?" exclaimed Spoarty. "That's the feelin' that two pugilists in the same class has for each other."

Out of Reach.

Townley—"How's the new cook getting on?" Subbubs—"I don't know. She doesn't leave her address."—Boston Transcript.

Mirage Easy to Be Seen.

The celebrated Fata Morgana, a presentation of natural "moving pictures" on an immense scale which is occassionally seen in the Straits of Messina, is explained by a scientific writer as being a mirage, such as frequently occurs in various parts of the world; "in fact," he says, "one may see a mirage any day by looking through the stratum of air overlying a hot stove, or adjacent to the side of a wall heated in the sunshine." Young scientists will be interested in verifying this statement.

Kaw Indian Chief Remembered.

Henry Bluejacket, a celebrated Kaw Indian chief, visited central Missouri in 1833. He spoke English well, was gentlemanly and agreeable in his deportment. He was physically large and handsome. His dress was a loose sack hunting jacket of blue cloth with fringed buckskin leggins and moccasins and a foxskin cap. Contrary to the usual custom among Indians, the Kaws usually wore caps on their heads made of fox, coon or wildcat skin.

BANKER KILLS HIMSELF

B. F. Bash, Retired, of LeMoille Takes Strychnine.

Finds that Alienation Suit Has Been Commenced Against Him by Husband of Chicago Woman.

La Moille, Ill., Sept. 9.—Fearing exposures in a $50,000 alienation of affections suit brought against him within three months after the death of his wife, B. F. Bash, a wealthy retired banker, committed suicide in this, his home town. He was sixty years old and a leader in Illinois Chautauqua affairs.

Bash's associations with Mrs. Charles A. Dilts, who until recently maintained an establishment in Calumet avenue, Chicago, led to the suicide in this order:

Mrs. Dilts last week filed suit in the circuit courts of Chicago for divorce from her husband, a former Chicago man, now of Normantown, Ill.

On Friday Dilts brought suit in the Aurora courts against Bash for $50,000, alleging alienation of his wife's affections.

Bash answered the suit by swallowing strychnine.

Dilts told the story of his discovery of his wife's relations with the La Moille man. He said he had gone to Texas on business, leaving her in Chicago. Her letters were infrequent and Dilts noticed that each showed increased traces of chilliness. His wife expressed no concern over his absence nor did she urge him to hasten his return home as she had been wont to do.

Dilts first was uneasy. Then he grew suspicious and returned to his home without advising his wife of his approach.

Dilts started rummaging through the house to see what he might find. He says he found aplenty. As he expressed it, he discovered "bundles of burning love letters" from Bash, the widowed ex-banker.

Oyster Soup Kills Baby.

Princeton, Ind., Sept. 9.—Bernard, two-year-old son of John Stemally, died in a physician's office here of ptomaine poisoning. The family was here from the country visiting relatives and all partook of soup made from cove oysters. The baby was the only one made seriously ill.

Trustees Allege Bribe Offer.

Hammond, Ind., Sept. 9.—Testimony that a Hammond contractor offered them $2,000 for the contract to construct a sewer system in the town of Hobart was given by Hobart trustees in a hearing on a petition to restrain Contractor Vitro Grastiana from proceeding with the $20,000 job. Judge Johannes Kopelke, who heard the case, denied the petition. The bribe testimony has created a furore in Hobart.

PUT UP MONEY FOR DEMOCRATS

List of Contributors to Campaign Fund Published.

COUP BY CHAIRMAN M'ADOO

He Takes Public Into His Confidence in Regard to Identity of Men Supporting Wilson Financially.

New York, Sept. 9. — Acting Chairman McAdoo of the Democratic national committee, made public a list of the contributors to the national Democratic campaign, together with the amounts contributed. One hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars have been contributed to the fund.

In making the list public Mr. McAdoo said the contributions in the list made public range from $100 to $10,000. The larger contributions are the following:

Henry Morgenthau, New York, $10,000; F. C. Penfield, Germantown, Pa., $10,000; Henry Goldman, New York, $10,000; Rolla Wells St. Louis, Charles R. Crane Chicago, Cleveland H. Dodge, Jacob H. Schiff, New York, $5,000 each.

Mr. McAdoo said: "The Democratic national committee has put a new national standard by voluntarily publishing before election a list of contributions to its campaign fund. It will continue to take the public into its confidence throughout the campaign.

"The American people will never elect another president without knowing the sources from which his financial support is drawn. In the past political victories have been won by concealment; in the future they will be won by publicity."

SHERMAN TO WITHDRAW

Story Comes from East that He Will Quit Ticket.

Taft Quoted as Saying Some One Must Stump Country—Vice President Unable Through Ill Health.

Greenwich, Conn., Sept. 9.—Vice President Sherman spent Sunday in Greenwich at the Elmwood Inn, where he went by motor accompanied by two male friends, with whom he was closeted all the evening in his room. He appeared in vigorous health and in response to greetings as to his health he replied, "I'm all right."

A politician of country-wide fame says that secret news comes from where Taft is that Sherman is to get off the ticket, giving as reason ill-health preventing his campaigning, Taft saying Vermont election shows necessity for some one to campaign country for ticket. New man is to be from Massachusetts. Ambassador Guild returning from Russia mentioned because of his Roosevelt Progressive tendencies.

Warrants Out for Slayers of Innocent Negro in West Virginia.

Bluefield, W. Va., Sept. 9.—Gordon White, father of Inta White, for attacking whom the negro Walter Johnson was lynched at Princeton, has been arrested here and rushed to Charleston for safe keeping. He has been arrested on a warrant charging him with first degree murder. It is said that he was the first man to shoot Johnson.

Warrants are out for a number of others who were in the mob. It is now almost certain that Johnson was innocent of the crime for which he was lynched.

Accidentally Shot; Dies.

Beaudette, Minn., Sept. 9.—John Youngberg of Grassy River, Ont., died at Spooner hospital. He was in a canoe at Gull Bay when Jack Walden, his hunting companion, stooped to pick up a gun, which was accidentally discharged, fatally wounding Youngberg.

MONTANA SCENE OF BITTER FIGHT

Amalgamated Copper Company Battles Roosevelt.

PEOPLE REVOLT AGAINST RULE

Colonel Speaks in Opposition to Great Corporation All Through the State —Feels His Western Trip Is Success.

Missoula, Mont., Sept. 9.—Montana is the scene of as bitter a political struggle as that through which California passed in its fight upon the Southern Pacific railroad.

On the one hand are ranged the Progressives, determined on the removal from politics of the Amalgamated Copper company; on the other are the Republican and Democratic party machines, both dominated by the Amalgamated, and both prepared to play into each other's hands in order to effect the defeat of Roosevelt. Senator Joseph M. Dixon is hated because he typifies here the forces arrayed against the company. It is a warfare in which no quarter is asked or given. The Amalgamated is determined to retain its control because defeat would mean deprivation of privileges which have been so useful in its upbuilding.

People Are In Revolt.

The people, and this includes even the employes whose votes the Amalgamated casts, are revolting and propose to make a real effort in the coming elections to place in office men responsible to them and not under the domination of the corporation.

The political observer who has passed through this state with Colonel Roosevelt and who has heard the thunders of applause that have greeted his denunciation of the Amalgamated readily realizes the character and extent of the feeling against the corporation.

Beginning at Miles City in the eastern part of the state, the colonel began his campaign against the Amalgamated and he concluded it at Helena.

The Amalgamated, it is charged, has political agents laboring energetically to beat Colonel Roosevelt, Senator Dixon and the state ticket, which was named Saturday by the Progressive convention.

Analysis of Montana Vote.

It is estimated there are 70,000 voters in Montana. Of these 35,000 have been classified as Republicans, 30,000 as Democrats and 5,000 as Socialists. Of the Republicans between two-thirds and three-fourths are regarded as Progressives. Not more than 10,000, it is believed, will support Taft and perhaps not this number.

The problem the Progressives have to face in order to achieve victory is to draw votes from the Democrats, the latter are more or less united because of their belief that Wilson will be triumphant throughout the country in November, but unfortunately for their chances they have in their ranks a great many foreigners among whom have been circulated excerpts from the books of Wilson reflecting upon that class of immigration.

Colonel Roosevelt feels that his trip up to date has been a distinct success. He has found every evidence of popularity in the middle and far west. Indiana, Missouri and Minnesota particularly were enthusiastic. It is apparent that in all the states, especially North Dakota and Montana, a great deal of work will have to be done.

ELECTROCUTED; HIT BY TRAIN

Runaway Delinquent Girl Killed and Two Others Injured.

Aurora, Ill., Sept. 9. — Zoe Priddy, fifteen years old, one of three young girls who escaped from the Geneva State Home for Girls, was shocked unconscious while walking on the "third rail" of an electric road near here. While her companions ran for aid a car speeding at forty miles an hour struck the unconscious girl and killed her.

The girls started to walk along the tracks and to keep their balance they walked with linked hands, Zoe Priddy on the power rail. The girls had gone but a few paces when they were hurled from the rails by a shock of several thousand volts.

The two surviving girls were injured.

Paul Pry Police.

The German police have a consuming curiosity about the visitor. They are polite, but the curiosity must be satisfied, and it covers well nigh every point upon which information can be given, says Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick in "Home Life In Germany."

Before you have been in Germany a fortnight the police expect to know all about you. You have to give them your father's Christian and surname and tell them how he earned his living and where he was born; also your mother's Christian and maiden name and where she was born. You must declare your religion and if you are married give your husband's Christian and surname; also where he was born and what he does for a living. If you happen to do anything yourself, though, you need not mention it. They do not expect a woman to be anything further than married or single. But you must say when and where you were last in Germany and how often you have been and why you have come now and what you are doing and how long you propose to stay.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces,

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F J. CHENEY, & Co., Toledo, Ohio,

$80,000,000.00 LOST ANNUALLY BY WAGE EARNERS

Dr Sadler estimates that about $800,000,000.00 in wages is lost annually to the American people as a direct result of colds, Lost time means lost wages and doctoring is expensive. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly. It will stop the cough, and heal and sooth the sore and inflamed air passages. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

There are a thousand things the people ought to do, and although they admit it, they will never do them.

Uncle Ezra Says

"It don't take more'n a gill uv effort to get folks into a peck of trouble" and a little neglect of constipation, biliousness, indigestion or other liver derangement will do the same. If ailing, take Dr. King's New Life Pills for quick results. Easy, safe, sure, and only 25 cents at C A. Wright & Son's.

A man should either be able to keep his temper, or be abe to whip the man he is quarreling with.

The Men Who Succeed

as heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success, to-day, demands health. To ail is to fail. It's utter folly for a man to endure a weak run-down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas. B. Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders, and deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well." Try them. Only 50 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Those riding in automobiles are not as happy and comfortable as those on foot think they are.

Mrs. J. N. Hill, Homer, Ga., has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years, and she says she always recommends it to her friends. "It never fails to cure our coughs and colds and prevents croup. We have five children and always give them Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for a cold, and they are all soon well. We would not be without it in our house." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

"It's The Best Polish I Ever Used"

That's What Every One Says Who Tries

Black Silk Stove Polish

DON'T imagine for a moment that all brands of stove polish are the same. Don't get the idea that to keep a nice glossy shine on your stove you must blacken it every few days. It isn't a question of oft-repeated application. It's a question of the stove polish you use.

Black Silk Stove Polish is so much better than other stove polishes that there is absolutely no comparison—it is a class all by itself.

It makes a brilliant glossy shine that does not rub or dust off. It anneals to the iron—becomes a part of the stove. It makes old stoves look like new and lasts four times as long as any other.

Get a can and give it a trial. Try it on your parlor stove, your cook stove, or your gas range. If you do not find it the best polish you ever used, your dealer is authorized to refund your money. Black Silk Stove Polish has been made by the same formula and sold under one name for 20 years.

Here is what some of the ladies write us:

BLACK SILK
STOVE POLISH

Use Black Silk Air-Drying Iron Enamel for grates, fenders, registers, stove pipes, etc. Prevents rusting. Not affected by heat or cold. Produces a permanent glossy black surface. [illegible] Use Black Silk Metal Polish for silver, brass, silverware or tinware. It has no equal for use on automobiles.

The Wedding Ring.

The wedding ring is of foremost interest to the groom and a new wedding ring is to be had, called the "alliance ring." This appears to be one solid ring, but is actually two, the joints being invisible, and whenever engraved, the ring is separated by inserting a pin in the inside pinhole, which separates the ring and the marking is done on the inside surface.

Useful Footstool.

There is quite a fad among women who take pride in their well shod feet for the little footstools that their great-grandmothers used to use. To the great-grandmothers they were a necessity, since they kept the feet above the draft line, but for their degenerate descendants they serve the more frivolous purpose of putting pretty feet where no one can help noticing them.

IN MEMORIAM

WALLACE E. GRAY

By W. P. Stocking

By the death of Wallace E. Gray, I lost the last of my boyhood and youngmanhood chums. We were almost inseperable. Neither of us had any young brothers in our homes for playmates and being of congenial dispositions and living near neighbors much of the time, we very naturally formed a snug and lasting friendship. He was without bad habits, was retiring in manner, a safe companion for any boy and a loyal friend. Very often he would spend the night with me and as often I would spend the night with him I well remember when he first began to play a horn. I think it was the first night that he took a horn home to "try to play on it." I stayed with him and he "practiced" until his parents called the entertainment (?) off, but by patient perseverance he became a fine musician both on the cornet and violin. I used to think that he got the sweetest music out of the violin I ever heard. I remember his playing in the High School orchestra after we went over to the new building. I have before me an ambrotype of him holding in his hands his cornet of which he thought a great deal. This picture is over fifty-four years old and is a fine picture of him at that age, I prize it very highly. What a happy reunion must have taken place over on the other side when he, the last one, joined those gone before.

Now may I tell the readers of the Herald a little about our dear Long Beach, the fastest growing city in the country, as shown by the following figures:

Long Beach, California, 690.8 per cent increase. Largest in the United States. 1900, 2252, 1910, 17,809. There is a reason.

This increase in population consists in the main, of the very best class of citizens from nearly, if not quite every state in the Union who are drawn here by our excellent climate, our broad expanse of sea, our many miles of beautiful sea beach and unexcelled sea bathing, summer and winter.

They come first, as tourists, often repeating their visits but finally come to make their home in a city where saloons do not exist, a city of many churches which have large memberships and larger congregations by reason of so many church going tourists, A city of schools of the highest grade including a fine Polytechnic High School, The buildings costing $250,000 and that already has nearly 1,000 pupils.

The impression seems to have been formed by Eastern people that Long Beach is only a resort city. While we have very many of the better class amusements to attract resorters Sundays and special amusement days.

The throng which visit our beach to enjoy the surf bathing and the various other amusements often number from 30,000 to 50,000 and there is not even a hint of drunkenness and rowdyism, and I ask without fear of being "called down," where can Long Beach be beaten by any city of its age and size any where in this country? We have a municipal band which furnishes free music, every day and evening through the entire year.

They have a municipal water plant which furnishes water cheaper than the companies which the city brought out a year or so ago. But pshaw! What's the use of my trying to tell you of all the interesting facts concerning the "City by the Sea" of which we are so proud and justly so too Come and see and hear and feel for yourselves for in so doing can you be throughly convinced of the truth of my statements. "Come, come away" from those distructive electrical wind and rain storms to the land "Where the flowers everbloom,

The beams ever shine
Where the light wings of Zephys,
Oppressed with perfume
Breath o'er the gardens of our city
In bloom.
Where the orange and olive are the fairest of fruit
And the voice of the mocking bird never is mute
When the tints of the earth and hues of the sky
In color though varied, in beauty
may vie,
And the purple of ocean in deepest of dye
Where women are lovely as the roses
they twine
And all, save the spirit of man, is divine,"

And now a hop, skip and a jump from poetry to prose, from oranges, olives and mocking-birds to the: California Cantalope Crop which is one of the items of interest in Southern California. I offer a few figures and facts regarding this years crop, 3,000 car loads valued at $3,000,000 during the season which begins June 1st, and ends about July 15th, about 45 days, 3,000 men are employed, 1,000,000 crates in which to pack them the crates required 300 car loads of shooks, worth $310,000 each car contained 150,000 shooks,

The making of the crates required 1,500 kegs or 80,000,000 nails. Each melon was hand wrapped with the name of the shipper and brand on each wrapper, there were 60,000,000 wraps requiring fifteen car loads of paper valued at $45,000.

40,000,000 lbs. of ice were required to ice the cars when loaded, the ice plant at Braving where they were loaded had a capacity of loading thirteen cars at once, ice was handed 150 miles from the Southern Pacific plant at Colton. The early California Cantaloupe lead the world and are in great demands.

Of the 3,000 cars 2,500 were shipped east the rest remained on the Pacific coast, Los Angles consumed 240 cars, San Francisco 106, others in like proportion, greater New York consumed 750 cars or 25 percent of the entire crop and paid to commission were about $1,500 a day for handling them which put them up to fancy prices.

The above figures are taken from the Los Angles Sunday Tribune of Aug 25th and are reliable. Much more interest might be said of industry but I fear my letter is too long already. Many of the loups consumed in Long Beach are grown at Signal Hill only a few miles northeast of the cities and are very fine flavor and retail at 3 for 5c; 5c; 3 for 10c; 2 for 15c; 10c and up.

THE SEA GULLS HONORED

Unique Monument Raised By The Mormans At Salt Lake City

A monument costing about $40,000 is to be placed on the grounds of the temple at Salt Lake City. Not for the church, the founders and fathers of the sect, but for the birds of the air.

The story is pretty one, and taken from real life; when the Mormans first located in Utah it was an arid valley, and the process of irrigation was a difficult one. They were in desperate straits, but their first crop gave promise of plenty, but the plague of grasshoppers came upon them, and they were seemingly fated for starvation and distress. The green fields were black with the pests, and they knew not which way to turn. Suddenly from the reed marshes of the Great Salt Lake came a host of sea gulls, and swooped down upon them and destroyed them. So grateful were the Mormans, that from that time the laws of Utah have protected these beautiful graceful birds. And now they are to erect this monument as a testimonial of their gratitude. What a lesson this should teach to the present generation of loving-kindness to the birds of the air, and every living thing.

Most disfiguring skin eruptions, scrofula, pimples, rashes, etc., are due to impure blood. Burdock Blood Bitters is a cleansing blood tonic. Makes you clear-eyed, clear-brained, clear-skinned.

Itching piles provoke profanity, but profanity won't cure them. Doan's Ointment cures itching bleeding or protruding piles after years of suffering. At any drug store.

Mistakes of Authors.

The author of "Don Quixote" makes the party at the Crescent tavern eat two suppers in one evening. Scott in one chapter of "Ivanhoe" gives the Christian name of Malvoisin as Richard, subsequently altering it to Philip. Pope makes a weasel eat corn. Kingsley makes John Brumblecombe read the prayer for "all sorts and conditions of men," though in the time of Elizabeth the prayer book did not contain it. Sir Archibald Allison speaks of "Sir Peregrine Pickle" when he means Sir Peregrine Maitland, and the same author translated "droit de timbre" as timber duty, "a bowler," which is only equaled by Victor Hugo's translation of "Firth of Forth," "premier de quatre."

Lions as Watchdogs.

A Rhodesian farmer is reported to have trained two African lions to protect his premises. They act as night patrols, and are keenly on the alert to every sound For a considerable time he had employed dogs, but they were invariably poisoned. He tried the experiment with lions as the result of his knowledge that the "king of the forest" will not touch poisoned food.—London Globe.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE THIRD DEGREE"

"Contrary to all criticisms of 'The Third Degree,'" says one of the New York dailies, "Annie Jeffries, the young wife in the peculiar 'Klein' drama, does not battle alone for her husband's life. Far be it from a single handed combat on the part of Mr. Klein's sweet little character, for at every performance Adele Hughes, who plays the young wife, has from fifteen to eighteen hundred stauch supporters who sob, strain, struggle and smile with her. "As she fights," continues the paper, "so do her supporters." After Howard, her dissipated mate, makes his confession, it is indeed a study to look over the spectators, one would think, to see the earnest expression of the watchers in the orchestra that every man, woman and child in the theatre was married to Howard Jeffries, or his wife, and vitally interested in the outcome, for the spectators are the fighters, mental fighters not material, and fight they surely do."

"The Third Degree" will be presented at the Bradley Opera House next Thursday, September 12, with a capable cast of sterling players and a complete production of special scenery.

Big Bargain Day Set For September 19

MERCHANTS OF TECUMSEH UNITE IN A SPECIAL SALES DAY EFFORT

Thursday, September 19th, is going to be one of the biggest days in the history of Tecumseh. This is no idle assertion, and Tecumseh on that day will have a throng of out of town visitors that will make it look like a bargain day. In fact, that's what it is to be. It will be a combination Bargain Sales Day, a combined effort of the merchants of Tecumseh.

C. P. Woodward, of the Miner & Woodward, of Grand Rapids, organizers of bargain sale days, is here making arrangements for the big sale the date being set as given above. In one sense of the word this is not a new idea, but it is new in towns of this size. In places where sales have been held for the past few months tremendous success has crowned the combined efforts. Judging from such success arrangements were made with the Miner & Woodward firm to inaugurate the system here.

It's a big thing for store patrons. On this day bargains will be offered that will certainly please the public, Bargains that people will eagerly await and take advantage of. It is and advertising scheme, and a good one. The scheme is to boost Tecumseh as a trading point. Instead of putting on a balloon ascension, street fair or something like that, the merchants will put their money in goods to be sold at a bargain It advertises the town, it advertises the stores where the bargains are offered. It gives the merchant a chance to extend his acquaintance. If the people like the bargains, like the stores and stocks, then its better than an even chance that they will come again. That's the way to advertise.

Next week this paper will be chuck full of advertising that will "deelight" you.

THE TRIBE OF POTTAWATAMIES ARE ENTERTAINED.

A Big Powow.

About 25 of the Pottawatinie tribe were entertained last Thursday at the pleasant home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Powell. A picnic supper was served and each and everyone had a fine time, the out of town guests were Mrs. Bert Blood and daughter, Florence, of Toledo and Muriel and Lisle Whittier of Battle Creek.

Lawrence Kerr is spending a few weeks in Onsted, with relatives.

Thomas Dennison who has been spending a week's vacation in town, returned to Detroit Saturday, Mrs. Dennison will spend several weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Elliott.

Attention is called to the published statement of the Tecumseh State Savings Bank in this issue. The statement shows a nice increase in business, and a prosperous condition of the largest and leading bank in Northern Lenawee.

A letter received today from Miss Jessie Smith of Pasadena Cal. renewing her subscription to the Hearld. Miss Jessie was former school girl here and her many friends will be pleased to hear of her success in her school work, she says, "I have pupils from the four upper grades who are misfits in their own classes for various reasons, in my room which is called a special study roam, they have special individual attention and a chance to "make good." There are ten such rooms in the City."

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Saturday afternoon Sept. 7, Miss Marjorie Field entertained a party of 22 little folks, and quite a party of older ones, it being her 9th birthday. Games were played during the after noon, and at six o'clock her mother, Mrs. George Field served a most elegant supper, and the little folks did ample justice to the good things spread before them. And it was with regret that they said goodnight, when it came time for them to return to their homes. The out of town guests were Mrs. John Spafford and Catherine of Manchester, the Mesdames, Elmer and Arthur Camburn, Baron Pennington, the Misses Marian and Wilma and Lamont Camburn of Macon, and Mesdames Robert McCoy, John and Lavern Austin and Wallace Bryan of Tecumseh.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT

While Bert Foor of Franklin township, was driving some chickens from the yard at his home, he picked up a stick and threw it. It struck a wagon near by, and glancing back struck his little daughter, Marian just below the right eye with such force, that the eyeball was pushed entirely out the socket. Dr. Davis was called at once, but little hopes are entertained that she will recover her sight. Mrs. Foor was formerly Miss Alma Waldron of Tecumseh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Waldron. The sympathy of all goes out to the parents for the sad affliction

MRS. HENRY N. OWEN.

CERTAIN RESULTS

Many a Tecumseh Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Tecumseh. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times for the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store and my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it."

(Statement given December 7, 1908.)

A willing Re-Endorsement.

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed on August 29, 1911, he said: I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented. You may continue to use my name as a reference."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other

Antoine Deloaia, Postmaster at Garden, Mich., knows the exact facts when he speaks of the curative value of Foley Kidney Pills. He says: "From my own experience I recommend Foley Kidney Pills, as a great remedy for kidney trouble. My father was cured of kidney disease and a good many of my neighbors were cured by Foley Kidney Pills."

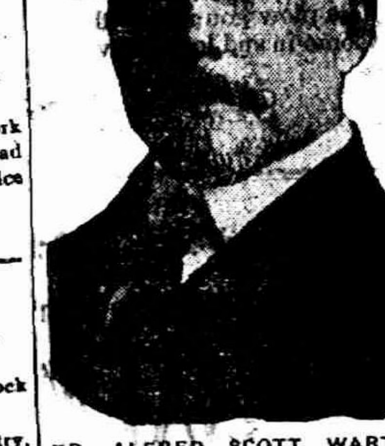
For sale by all Druggists of Tecumseh.

Many Driven From Home

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery and and cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles find quick relief and health returns. Its help in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping-cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

U. A. Smith, Bridgeton, Ind., had kidney trouble for years, and was so crippled with rheumatism he could not dress without help. He started using Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I began to get better at once, and now all my trouble has left me and I do not feel that I ever had rheumatism. I rest well all night and tho' 69 years old, can now do the work of a man of 35 years. I would like to be the means of others getting benefit from Foley Kidney Pills." Refuse substitutes.

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.



DR. ALFRED SCOTT WARTHIN

Dr. Alfred S. Warthin of the University of Michigan is an eminent pathologist and biologist whose scientific achievements are widely known in Europe and throughout the world.

Dr. Warthin has long been an advocate of woman's suffrage and only recently gave utterance to the following:

"I believe absolutely in woman's suffrage and believe that the two sexes represent a biological division of labor, and the race can never be adequately represented in matters pertaining to government without woman's aid in all that pertains to national housekeeping, and that is all that government and politics should be. I believe fully in the partnership of the sexes and that the partnership should be an active one with equal rights for each partner and the opportunity for equal expression of views in all that concerns life. I do not believe that the social evil will ever be controlled until woman has an active participation in municipal and federal lawmaking. I believe that when women have the right to vote the protection of women and children as far as labor conditions are concerned will be brought about, but never as long as men alone make the law."

March of the Dining Hour.

The hour of dining has advanced with the centuries. Froissart mentions waiting on the Duke of Lancaster at 5 in the afternoon after he had supped and was about to go to bed, and the preface of the Heptameron shows that the queen of Navarre dined at 10 o'clock in the morning. From the Northumberland Household Book, dated 1512, we learn that the ducal family rose at 6, breakfasted at 7, dined at 10, supped at 4 and retired for the night at 9. Louis XIV. did not dine till 12, while his contemporaries, Cromwell and Charles II., took the meal at 1. In 1700 the hour was advanced to 2, in 1751 we find the Duchess of Somerset dining at 3, and in 1700 Cowper speaks of 4 o'clock as the fashionable time. After the battle of Waterloo the dinner hour was altered to 6, from which time it has advanced by half hour stages to 8. So that in 400 years the dinner hour had gradually moved through at least ten hours of the day.—London Spectator.

Why Women Are Not RICH.

Man is a millionaire many times over in the possession of blood cells. Woman is not quite so rich, for scientists have proven that the man has five million—the woman only four and a half million to a cubic millimetre of blood.

A decrease in number of red blood corpuscles and a person "looks pale"—in fact, is anaemic, the blood does not get the right food and probably the stomach is disordered.

Dr. R. V. Pierce found years ago that a glyceric extract of golden seal and Oregon grape roots, queen's root and bloodroot with black cherrybark, would help the assimilation of the food in the stomach, correct liver ills and in Nature's own way increase the red blood corpuscles. This medicine he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. By assimilating the food eaten the system is nourished and the blood takes on a rich red color. Nervousness is only "the cry of the starved nerves for food," and when the nerves are fed on rich red blood the person looses those irritable feelings, sleeps well at night and is refreshed in the morning.

J. D. LIVELY, ESQ.

"I was attacked with a severe nervous disease, which was caused by a disordered stomach and liver," writes MR. JAS. D. LIVELY, of Washburn, Tenn., Route 2, Box 33. "All my friends thought I would die and the best physicians gave me up. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and derived much benefit from same. My case had run so long, it had become so chronic that nothing would effect a permanent cure, but Dr. Pierce's medicine has done much for me and I highly recommend it. I heartily advise its use as a spring tonic, and further advise ailing people to take Dr. Pierce's medicines before their diseases have run so long that there is no chance to be cured.

ARIZONA BRONCHOS.

Like the Little Girl With a Curl In the Center of Her Forehead.

When the Arizona broncho wishes to be safe for you and for himself he is the safest thing in the world, and when he wishes to be unsafe life is a merry chance.

I went up and down trails in Arizona which were almost perpendicular and rough and stone strewn too. But there was little danger, for the broncho has not the "ten pound," but the "thousand pound" look. His nose is to the ground, his eyes fastened on the trail, his footstep the most beautifully careful thing the mind can conceive. One foot placed before the other eases and preserves the balance, adjusts the weight for another, and all this wonderful machinery of equipoise, stability and safety you feel working under you like a delicate machine.

Yet this sage pioneer of the trail, with his meticulous care of you and himself, was just a wild range pony, hunted down by the range rider, driven, coaxed or duped into a corral, broken, saddled, bridled and ridden all in one hour; wrenched out of his wildness, having his heart broken and made into a slave while you would eat your breakfast.

He is not a beauty; he is just a mongrel. But his legs and his feet are made of iron and steel, and the work he does over awful trails, in a rough and ragged country, strewn with stones and flints and bowlders and lava and scrub, week after week, month after month and year after year, would spoil the legs of a thoroughbred in three days.—Gilbert Parker in August Metropolitan.

Candidate's Daughter Burned.

Broken Bow, Neb., Sept. 9. — Dr. Grace Taylor, daughter of W. J. Taylor, Democratic candidate for congress in the Sixth Nebraska district, was fatally burned at her home near here by an explosion of gasoline.

GOVERNOR CHASE S. OSBORN.

Governor Chase S. Osborn of Michigan was born in Huntington county, Ind., Jan. 22, 1860, of English, Irish and French descent. After his school days he engaged in newspaper work in Lafayette, Ind., Chicago and Milwaukee, subsequently owning the Florence (Wis.) Mining News and Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) News, and is today one of the owners of the Saginaw Courier-Herald.

Mr. Osborn has for many years been prominent in Michigan politics. He has held the position of postmaster at Sault Ste. Marie, state game and fish warden, commissioner of railroads and regent of the University of Michigan, resigning the latter when he was elected governor in 1910.

He has traveled in every state of the Union and in all countries of Europe, North and South America, in most countries of Asia and Africa, Australia, New Zealand, China, Japan, the Philippines, Siberia, Sandwich Islands, etc.

Wherever he has gone he has been a student of the political and social life of the country. Mr. Osborn has always been interested in things of a scholarly nature and is a member of a number of scientific and other learned societies, the Michigan Press association (of which he is ex-president), and holds the degree of LL. D. from the University of Michigan, Olivet college and Alma college.

It was by his special message to the legislature that the proposed constitution amendment for equal suffrage was considered and submitted to vote at the coming election.

MICHIGAN'S GOVERNOR

Sets Forth His Reasons For Favoring Enfranchisement of Women.

In an address to a mass meeting of suffragists Governor Osborn said in part:

I believe sometimes I have measured governments and mankind by the manner in which they treat their women. You may always judge progress by this standard.

In ages past men looked upon women as their burden bearers, and there are still many who look upon women as good only for some of the less important work.

I have never heard of one single reason against equal suffrage. One thing that has influenced me more than anything else in favor of equal suffrage is the type of the opposition. I have seen at Lansing—and it is true in other places as well—arrayed against the good women of the state all the elements which make for lawlessness, for evil and for hurtfulness to general society. If bad men of the state are arrayed against good women of the state in their fight for equal suffrage I want the good men to help the women.

If equal suffrage can do for Michigan what it has done for Colorado and other states where it has been tried may God grant that it may come to us soon.

There is nothing in this movement to dewomanize woman. You may still be the gentle woman of fine fiber that you have always been. If woman's influence has made for the good of the home and for the good training of children in the years gone by then women should be given a wider scope.

Good men are glad to array themselves under the banner of good women.

I want to put myself on record now and for all time in favor of equal suffrage, and I want you to get all the rest of the men on record to that effect.

There is a new spirit of fairness abroad in the land. I have got to a point of partisanship where I can see a mighty good man in even a good Democrat. Riding on the crest of this spirit is the fairness which is bringing victory to the cause for which so many governors and other good people are working, and I wish you success.

Do you know that women vote in Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Washington and California?

Why not in Michigan?

Do you know that women vote in Norway, Finland, Australia and New Zealand and have partial suffrage in other countries?

Do you know that women can now vote in China?

Vote for the woman suffrage amendment Nov. 5.

BUSY MACCABEES

Spreading the Gospel For Equal Suffrage in Michigan.

The ladies of the Modern Maccabees in Michigan are waging an energetic campaign on behalf of equal suffrage.

There are thirty-eight hives in Detroit alone, and a very able woman, Mrs. Timmony, state deputy, has been instructed to give her whole time to work among these hives.

The sixty-two deputies who are covering the state for the order have been instructed by the supreme commander to visit no town, village or hamlet without speaking on equal suffrage and to hold no meeting without working for the cause.

"Bugs" Raymond Found Dead.

Chicago, Sept. 9.—Arthur ("Bugs") Raymond, one time famous pitcher for the New York Giants and other big league clubs, was found dead in the Hotel Veley in this city.

Strangers In Fez.

"The people of Fez are charming," declares J. F. Legard in the Pall Mall Magazine. "During one's walks or rides through the town it is quite the exception to be spat at, as is often the case in other ultra Mohammedan towns, and the crowd is, on the whole, merely smiling and inquisitive, like a crowd in Naples or any other south Italian town. Now and then some fanatic—generally an epileptic—will try to raise a disturbance and will be gently removed by his friends—the Moors are kindness itself in the face of poverty or affliction—but, except for these and a few casual curses from the old and soured, the Christian dog may pursue his way in comparative peace, provided he does not attempt to enter a mosque or pass the barriers placed in front of those streets leading up to the tomb of Moulai Idriss, the founder and patron saint of Fez."

MRS. CLARA B. ARTHUR.

Mrs. Clara B. Arthur, for ten years past the president or vice president of the Michigan Equal Suffrage association, lives in Detroit and is the mother of one son and two daughters. The son is a graduate of the University of Michigan, and the daughters are freshmen in colleges.

Mrs. Arthur is a well known clubwoman of Michigan and is actively engaged in several lines of altruistic endeavor.

As president of the State Suffrage association at the time of the state constitutional convention Mrs. Arthur headed the effort by which tax paying women were given the ballot on the direct expenditure of public money and the granting of franchises.

WOMEN WANT BALLOT

Not Only to Better Conditions, but to Perfect Their Citizenship.

Having been active in many good works of a public character, there is none who realizes the real value the ballot would be to women more fully than does Mrs. Clara B. Arthur, president of the Equal Suffrage association of Michigan.

She is a charter member of the best known club in Detroit, the Twentieth Century, and she has served as president of the Detroit Federation of Clubs and as director in the State Federation of Clubs.

Mrs. Arthur is secretary of the Detroit Anti-tuberculosis society, is a director of the Detroit Tuberculosis sanitarium and has served on numerous committees which have helped to better conditions for women and children, such as those for juvenile court probation officers, securing appointment of women factory inspectors, women on boards of control in institutions where women were detained and has many times appeared before the legislature in behalf of altruistic causes.

Despite the fact that Mrs. Arthur feels keenly the need of the ballot for women in their effort to improve conditions, she yet says that it is not for this purpose she demands citizenship. She says, "I want the ballot because without it I am classed with aliens and am a perpetual minor; because an unenfranchised person is not a citizen in deed and in truth; because it is humiliating to be in the eyes of the law incapable of expressing an opinion as to whom I want for mayor or governor or president or if as a patriotic citizen I want peace or war. I want the ballot because it is my right and should be my privilege."

GRANGE FAVORS EQUAL RIGHTS

Working Vigorously to Secure Votes For Women.

FARMERS' WIVES WANT BALLOT

See Opportunities to Accomplish Much For the General Good of Society by Taking Interest In Affairs Outside the Home—Equality In the Grange Proves Fitness of Women For Equality In Citizenship.

By IDA L. CHITTENDEN, Lansing, Manager of the Michigan State Grange Equal Suffrage Campaign Committee.

Nearly fifty years have elapsed since the Order of Patrons of Husbandry was first organized. The original idea of this nation wide organization came from Oliver H. Kelly, who will ever be known as the patron saint of the grange. Associated closely with him were William Ireland, John Trimble and Anson Bartlett, also Mr. Kelly's niece, Miss Caroline A. Hall, to whom belongs the credit of women being received into membership in this order with the same rights as men.

So from the first within the ranks of the Patrons of Husbandry men and women have had equal rights and privileges. Always they have indorsed equal suffrage, but it remained for the Michigan state grange to be the first of the state granges to make an aggressive campaign in behalf of this movement.

Endorsing a measure is one thing to finance it and work for its success

MISS IDA L. CHITTENDEN.

Besides her work for the grange, Miss Chittenden is doing effective work to advance the cause of equal suffrage in Michigan.

is another. Some of the leading women of the grange at the state meeting at Kalamazoo in December, 1911, asked that the grange take up this cause with the same aggressiveness that it had exercised in other reforms of state and national importance. This was referred to the executive committee with power to act. At a meeting of this committee in Jackson Feb. 5 the resolution to enter upon an active campaign to get an amendment granting equal suffrage to women submitted to the people of Michigan was adopted without a dissenting vote. The work was assigned to the legislative committee, supplemented by a committee of grange women. Feb. 28 this committee met at the Michigan Agricultural college and organized for work. It was decided to have a conference at an early date with other state organizations to arrange plans. This was held in Lansing March 13, and there were present representatives of various women's organizations. All were enthusiastic and a definite plan of campaign was decided upon.

The extra sessions of the legislature however, made it seem wise to delay entering upon this work until it was known what would be done by the legislature, as it was understood that Governor Osborn would recommend the passage of such a resolution at this time. March 20 the resolution to submit this question to the people in November passed the senate, and March 28 passed the house amid great rejoicing and applause. This was the direct result of the united efforts of the friends of this movement, and it is generally recognized that the grange did its full share toward this satisfactory culmination.

May 8 at an executive committee meeting the grange decided to begin operations at once for the adoption of this amendment in November. The early efforts of the campaign have been an attempt to get the 900 granges in the state organized for work, the establishment of headquarters and the sending out of literature and speakers, but the greatest undertaking has been the compiling of tax statistics of the state showing the number of women paying taxes, the amount of their assessments and the amount of taxes they pay. This should be one of the strongest arguments in favor of giving women the ballot in a nation whose basic principle is "taxation without representation is tyranny."

To have an interest in the things outside the home has proved of inestimable value to women on the farm and will have a still greater influence for good when the husband and wife are equal in the rights of citizenship as well as possessing equal rights in the grange.

It is characteristic of a good man neither to go wrong himself nor to let his friend go wrong

Funny Peasant Notions.

The astronomical lore of the Russian peasantry of the north, center and south of the empire is limited to a knowledge of the existence of the sun and the moon and stars, of three constellations, of the Milky way, of one planet, of comets, shooting stars and meteors. The sun is to all a mysterious and beneficent being.

The moon, covered with ice and snow, is ever in flight from its brother, the sun. Upon its disk is portrayed the murder of Abel by Cain, the latter being done to death with a pitchfork. The lunar rays are malignant, and evil comes to those who sleep unprotected from them. The horns of the moon afford information as to the weather.

The stars are lamps or candles lighted and extinguished by the Eternal. A shooting star is the soul of one just passed away. Comets are heralds of war and famine. No Russian ever forgets that the Napoleonic war followed the great comet of 1811.—Exchange.

Mirage Easy to Be Seen.

The celebrated Fata Morgana, a presentation of natural "moving pictures" on an immense scale which is occasionally seen in the Straits of Messina, is explained by a scientific writer as being a mirage, such as frequently occurs in various parts of the world; "in fact," he says, "one may see a mirage any day by looking through the stratum of air overlying a hot stove, or adjacent to the side of a wall heated in the sunshine." Young scientists will be interested in verifying this statement.

OSCAR S. STRAUS FOR GOVERNOR

Tumultuous Scenes in Syracuse, N. Y., Convention.

Former Ambassador and Cabinet Member Is Unexpectedly Placed in Nomination and Unanimously Chosen.

At Syracuse, N. Y., Friday Oscas S. Straus of New York county, President Cleveland's ambassador to Turkey and President Roosevelt's secretary of commerce and labor, was nominated for governor by acclamation in a stampede of the Progressive state convention.

Mr. Straus, as permanent chairman of the convention, was upon the platform at the time the stampede broke loose. It came like a thunder clap to him. The Prendergast and the Hotchkiss forces for five hours had been engaged in an oratorical battle in the effort to bring about the nomination of their favorite.

Great Straus Demonstration.

John C. Magee of the Fifteenth assembly district, New York county, rushed on the platform, merely nodded to Permanent Chairman Straus and without by your leave, in a voice worn to almost a whisper by hard campaigning in Vermont, addressed the convention and quite unexpectedly placed Mr. Straus in nomination.

Instantly the convention was in an uproar. In a second a stampede was on. Men and women were standing on their seats, waving flags, bandannas, canes, umbrellas, hats and handkerchiefs. The band boomed out with the "Star Spangled Banner" and switched to "Onward, Christian Soldier" which the audience, made up of delegates and visitors, about 5,000, joined in singing. Chauncey J. Hamlin, leader of Erie county, led the way for a march of the standards of the sixty-one counties around the hall. In his wake marched and howled every county in the state.

Mr. Straus Finally Accepts.

Mr. Straus, standing at the chairman's table on the platform, became more than usually pale. He seemed to be dazed. Amid the tumult Mr. Hotchkiss clambered to the platform and without ceremony grasped Chairman Straus' gavel and took command of the convention.

Mr. Hotchkiss planted his hands on Mr. Straus' shoulders and declared he must accept the nomination. General King and others in the group fairly smothered Mr. Straus with demands that he should not resist the command of the convention. This scene had gone on fifteen minutes, when Mr. Hotchkiss stepped to the front of the platform and flashed a big sheet of manila paper on which he had scrawled, "He accepts."

At an evening session the ticket was completed with the following nominations:

For Governor — Oscar S. Straus of New York.

For Lieutenant Governor — Frederick M. Davenport of Oneida county.

For Associate Judges of the Court of Appeals—Carlos C. Alden of Erie and George W. Kirchway of New York.

For Secretary of State—Homer D. Call of Onondaga.

For State Comptroller — General Horatio C. King of Kings.

For Attorney General—John Palmer of Kings.

For State Engineer and Surveyor—Professor O. M. Lelands of Cornell university.

Artemus Ward's Account.

An Ohio man who attended the dedication of a monument recalled Artemus Ward's account of one of these ceremonies: "It was a fine parade, a very fine parade. The marching column was fully a mile and three-quarters long—as was the prayer of Dr. Chaplain, the chaplain."

FLOGGING STOPPED IN STATE PRISON

Method of Punishment in Jackson Prison Is Changed.

Publicity Given Recent Outbreak and Punishment Therefor Stays Hand of Warden Simpson.

Jackson, Mich., Sept. 10.—The publicity given the flogging of the convicts in the penitentiary here has apparently prevented the warden and the board of control from finishing their program.

More than forty led the mutiny which necessitated the calling out of the state troops, yet only twenty-four or twenty-five have been whipped. It was reported that seventeen of the mutineers were thrashed. Members of the militia say preparations were apparently made for the floggings, but that none was punished.

Instead over forty have been chained with leg irons and handcuffs and thrown into solitary confinement. The cells used are partly dark. Two soldiers and one convict who was released from the penitentiary confirmed the report of the new mode of punishment.

MOTORCYCLE KILLS SIX

Score of Others Injured, Some of Them Seriously.

In New York City two well-known motorcycle stars were killed and four spectators are dead and a score injured, several seriously, in the presence of 3,000 persons lined around the big quarter-mile track of the Vailsburg stadium motordrome when Eddie Hasha, known as "The Texas Cyclone," left the track going at the rate of ninety miles an hour and leaped into the bleachers with his engine of death.

Hasha was catapulted from his machine and instantly killed, and Johnny Albright, known as the Brighton Beach motordrome star, was so seriously injured by colloding with Hasha's wrecked machine that he died from his injuries in the German hospital.

All the other dead, and the most seriously hurt, were spectators in the bleachers, who were craning their heads over the guard rails and caught the full force of Hasha's motorcycle.

HUOGHTON—John Aho and Jacob Honkala, two of the miners at the Franklin mine, Hancock, fought a duel with knives for the favor of Minnie Ahola, one of the belles at the camp. Aho called at the Ahola home and found Honkala already there. They fought in the road in front of the girl's home and, before she could summon the neighbors, both men were cut badly about the head, face and body. The men were arrested and their wounds dressed at the county jail.

Pastor Pinned Beneath a Burning Automobile.

At Paulina, Iowa, the Rev. H. Grefe pastor of the Lutheran church in Germantown, Ia., was burned to death before the eyes of his children and several other persons while pinned beneath a wrecked motor car.

The blaze was started from a lantern with which his rescuers were working, after the automobile had jumped from a small bridge, turning over and pinning Mr. Grefe beneath the wreck.

Several persons suffered severe burns in the attempt to raise the burning machine from his body.

DEATH TAKES MRS. M'LEAN

Well Known Women Expires of Pneumonia After Short Illness.

At Bar Harbor, Me., Mrs. John R. McLean of Washington died at her Summer home after being ill of pneumonia a week.

Mrs. McLean survived eleven hours after the arrival of Dr. L. D. Parker of John Hopkins hospital, who was brought from the North Carolina mountains in a special train at a record-breaking speed.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever: nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces,

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY, & Co., Toledo, Ohio,

Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Every man has a lot of old debts due him that he can't collect, and knows he can't collect, and yet talks about them a great deal.

A really effective kidney and bladder medicine must first stop the progress of the disease and then cure the conditions that cause it. Use Foley Kidney Pills for all kidney and bladder troubles and urinary irregularities They are safe and reliable. They help quickly and permanently. In the yellow package.

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

It is possible to make a great reputation with a little sense; a man with a little sense is really quite a genius.

$80,000,000.00 LOST ANNUALLY BY WAGE EARNERS

Dr. Sadler estimates that about $800,000,000.00 in wages is lost annually to the American people as a direct result of colds, Lost time means lost wages and doctoring is expensive. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly. It will stop the cough, and heal and sooth the sore and inflamed air passages. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

There are a thousand things the people ought to do, and although they admit it, they will never do them,

Uncle Ezra Says

"It don't take more'n a gill uv effort to get folks into a peck of trouble" and a little neglect of constipation, biliousness, indigestion or other liver derangement will do the same. If ailing, take Dr. King's New Life Pills for quick results. Easy, safe, sure, and only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

A man should either be able to keep his temper, or be abe to whip the man he is quarreling with.

The Men Who Succeed

as heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success, to-day, demands health. To ail is to fail. It's utter folly for a man to endure a weak run-down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took" writes Chas. B. Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders, and deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters sound and well." Try them. Only 50 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Those riding in automobiles are not as happy and comfortable as those on foot think they are.

Mrs. J. N. Hill, Homer, Ga., has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years, and she says she always recommends it to her friends. "It never fails to cure our coughs and colds and prevents croup. We have five children and always give them Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for a cold and they are all soon well. We would not be without it in our house." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Laugh when a friend tells a joke; it is one of the numerous taxes you must pay.

What We Never Forget

according to science, are the things associated with our early home life such as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, that mother or grandmother used to cure our burns, boils, scalds, sores, skin eruptions, cuts, sprains or bruises. Forty years of cures prove its merit. Unrivaled for piles, corns or cold-sores. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Some people are so strong on talk that they try to pay their bills with it.

T. L. Parks, Murryville, Ga., Route 1, is in his 73rd year, and was recently cured of a bad kidney and bladder trouble. He says himself: "I have suffered with my kidneys. My back ached and I was annoyed with bladder irregularities. I can truthfully say one 50c bottle of Foley Kidney Pills cured me entirely." They contain no habit forming drugs.

For sale by all Druggists of Tecumseh.

Roman Masons and Their Tools.

The excavations at Pompeii and Herculaneum have unearthed masons tools much resembling those in use today and demonstrated the freer use of large tiles, the employment of iron to tie together brick and stone work and the use of a kind of concrete of which lime was the binding medium and finely broken brick a favorite material. The dome of the Pantheon, built in the first century of the Christian era, still testifies to the enduring nature of concrete superstructure, albeit bound with lime and not with cement.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine

Wanted Them Matched.

A homesteader received from the department of agriculture a quantity of dwarf milo maize seed, with a request to plant it and report the result. Here is his report: "Mr Secretary: Dear Sir—I planted your dwarf maize, and it did fine. It was the dwarfest maize I ever saw. But the jack rabbits ate it as fast as it got ripe. Please send another lot of seed and send along a lot of dwarf jack rabbits to match the maize."

A Formidable Feast.

Wentworth Woodhouse has long been famed for its hospitality. On Jan. 7, 1732, Richard Wardman, the steward of Wentworth Woodhouse, writes that "My lord is to have a great diner for all his tenents and some other of his loveing gentlemen, that is parsons and dokters and pothecarys, and none is to be admitted but what has tickitts. I am told they have killed 18 Does, Barons and Spondones. His lordship has got a man to make him three Hunderd duzon of wooden trenchers; he finds him wood, and the man makes them, and when the day is over he is to have them all for his laboure. His lordship has taken a great deal of pains to make a nice calculation how they ar to sit and dine, for it is thought there will be about 8 Hunderd men that day—and a great piece of folly I say."—London Chronicle.

Cheerfulness.

If a person determines early in life that a cheerful disposition is worth having and strives to obtain it and does so that person is a success in a fine sense of the word.

JAVA'S ISLAND OF FIRE.

It Is Really a Lake of Boiling, Bubbling Mud and Slime.

The greatest natural wonder in Java, if not in the entire world, is the justly celebrated "Gheko Kamolka Gunko," or "Home of the Hot Devils," known to the world as the Island of Fire. This geological singularity is really a lake of boiling mud situated at about the center of the plains of Grobogana and is called an island because the great emerald sea of vegetation which surrounds it gives it that appearance.

The "island" is about two miles in circumference and is situated at a distance of almost exactly fifty miles from Solo. Near the center of this geological freak immense columns of soft, hot mud may be seen continually rising and falling like great timbers thrust through the boiling substratum by giant hands and then again quickly withdrawn. Besides the phenomenon of the boiling mud columns there are scores of gigantic bubbles of hot slime that fill up like huge balloons and keep up a series of constant explosions, the intensity of the detonations varying with the size of the bubble.

In time past, so the Javanese authorities say, there was a tall spirelike column of baked mud on the west edge of the lake which constantly belched a pure stream of cold water, but this has long been obliterated, and everything is now a seething mass of bubbling mud and slime.

What Makes a Nation.

I believe there is no permanent greatness to a nation except it be based upon morality. I do not care for military greatness or military renown. I care for the condition of the people among whom I live. Crowns, coronets, miters, military display, the pomp of war, wide colonies and a huge empire are, in my view, all trifles, light as air and not worth considering unless with them you can have a fair share of comfort, contentment and happiness among the great body of the people. Palaces, baronial castles, great halls, stately mansions, do not make a nation. The nation in every country dwells in the cottage, and unless the light of your constitution can shine there, unless the beauty of your legislation and the excellence of your statesmanship are impressed there on the feelings and condition of the people, rely upon it you have yet to learn the duties of government.—John Bright.

A Royal Treat!

WARBA & LUESCHER'S VENETIAN OPERA "THE SPRING MAID" COMING TO TECUMSEH.

Tecumseh theatregoers have indeed a rare treat in store for them next Friday evening September 20 when Werba & Luescher's great Venetian opera, "The Spring Maid" will be seen for one performance at the Bradley Opera House. This is the largest and most expensive production ever seen in Tecumseh, featuring the captivating Russian prima donna Miss Gene Luneska. Miss Luneska appeared for two seasons as prima donna with Anna Held in "Miss Innocence" and one season with Grace Van Studdiford in the "Golden Butterfly."

"The Spring Maid" coming consists of over 60 people and have two car loads of scenery and electrical effects. They carry their own Metropolitan orchestra, including harp,

This company plays nearly all city time, Jackson and Ann Arbor being about the smallest they ever play but were secured for Tecumseh, Mr. Mark does not say what the contract terms are but some idea may be gained from the the fact that the actual expenses of "THE SPRING MAID" are over $700 per day. Adrian don't even get the production which should mean a whole lot to Tecumseh people. "The Spring Maid" is certainly the chance of a life time and the company play here at exactly the same prices as you would have to pay if you saw them in the Valentine at Toledo or the Detroit Opera House in Detroit and carrying their own orchestra assures you that the music and entire show will "go" with the same life and interest that it would in any city they play. See "The Spring Maid" if you don't see another attraction this season.

And Then Silence.

Mr. Grump (with newspaper)—"Here's an odd case—a woman marries one man, thinking he is another." Mrs. Grump—"What's odd about that? Women are doing that all the time."

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

Recent events have proven to the satisfaction of the general public that the County jail is no fit place for an insane person, who for no wrong doing but by sudden disease, has to be confined for safety both to themselves and others. When delicate women are thrust into cells like the most hardened criminals, it is time that something is done, and surely a padded cell will not impoverish our County, even though it may not required twice in a year.

The Crosswell Opera House in Adrian have been redecorated. An improved lighting system installed, new matting, rubber treads, a new fire escape, and those already installed made more complete by the use of doors instead of windows By a ruling of the Council an asbestos curtain, two inch water mains and hose placed on the stage. And now theater-goers will find every thing up to date and safe and comfortable for them.

West Rome Center is pushing the work of installing a furnace and building a tower on their church, and the ladies are busy raising money for a new carpet and interior decorations. Every one is interested and contributions come in freely so no debt will be incurred, and their little church will be neat and comfortable when the work is finished.

Britton ever on the look out for the good of the rising generation, has been redecorating and cleaning their school building, and installed a drinking fountain in place of the old pump. They had every thing in good order for the beginning of the school year, Sept. 2nd.

TENTH MEETING OF METHODIST PIONEERS OF ADRIAN

Adrian Methodists have a regular yearly meeting of pioneers, and Friday, Sept, 6. they celebrated their tenth reunion.

Only about half of the members were present, but the secretary was kept busy reading letters from those who were unable to be present. A pot-luck dinner was served, and the afternoon was given up to the regular routine business, election of officers etc.

What a glorious time Tecumseh Pioneer Methodists might have on a like occasion. Even one of the Old Lady's day would be fully appreciated.

UNITED PLAN FOR BARGAINS BY MERCHANTS

Miner and Woodward of Grand Rapids Organize for Big Sale Day.

Next Thursday, Sept. 19, Tecumseh merchants plan to give the buying bargains in merchandise never equalled in this or in many cities of the state and have united in what is termed "Bargain Day," each dealer to give some one or more money-saving cash bargains on that date

For the past week C. P. Woodward of the adversing firm of Miner and Woodward of Grand Rapids has been in the city, arranging the advertising and making plans for the big event.

Mr. Woodward is warm in his praise of local merchants and their progressive spirit and says on his own personal responsibility that those who overlook the bargain announcements in the daily papers for next Thursday will miss a golden opportunity.

"THE THIRD DEGREE"

The play given at the Opera House last evening, was one of intense interest from beginning to end, and held the audience every moment. The fearful working of the Third Degree was most vividly portrayed and showed the cruel power of hypnotism over those who are easily led by others. The faithful struggle of the young wife and her self abnegation was given with realistic effect. Every character was well sustained. The hard hearted father who pride over came all paternal love, the Captain of Police, with his lust of power, the noble lawyer, whose stern sense of right overcame his love of gain, the wrong doer who took his own life, rather than meet the consequences of his deeds, the woman whom he tortured with his attentions, and who allowed another to suffer in her stead, for love of place and power. Each and every one carried their part without a failure. Mr Mark has surely made good beginning for the season, and has many other good things booked.

OPENING

Of the New Department of

THE WEBSTER ANDERSON CO'S STORE

The stores of The Webster Anderson Company presented a beautiful appearance for their opening yesterday, Huge boquets of blackeyed Susans and goldenrod lent a festive air and the shelves were full of bright new goods.

The east store which is 25x100 is used for the display of ready to wear garments with Miss Foster's Millinery departments in the rear, Large green velvet rugs cover the floor, and cabinets holding the goods, line the walls. One huge affair 60 ft. long is filled with coats as is also another of 20 ft. Two others with glass doors, about 25 ft. each contain light colored and silk dresses, infants wear and shirt waists The room is made brilliant with 30. 100-watt Tungsten lights with short fixtures from the ceiling.

Miss Foster's Millinery department is truly beautiful with the new reed furniture, the many mirrors and elegant display of fall and winter hats. On the second floor of the east building they have added a new department that of dressmaking under the charge of Mrs. Fred Briegel. This lady has gained a splendid reputation in her business since coming to Tecumseh and the Anderson's are most fortunate in securing her for their new line.

The shelves of the west store are lined with the latest designs in dress goods, domestics and all yard goods. Also here can be found the hosiery, underwear and dress trimmings.

The basement department where can be found a good line of china, glass and enamel ware is in charge of Miss Harriett Teachout.

The second floor of the west store is used for carpets, rugs etc. while it is on this floor that Miss Lida Burton has charge of the alteration room. Their fall consignment of carpets and rugs is larger and of a more varied line than ever.

The firm are receiving many congratulations on the true beauty of their stores and certainly not many far larger towns in Michigan can present the assortment of goods or more courteous treatment than can be found in The Webster Anderson Co.'s store.

LOWERY—WESTERMAN

A most charming wedding was that of Thomas A. Lowery of Ann Arbor, and Miss Flora Westernman, at the Broad street M. E. church in Adrian, Thursday morning, at 10.30. Everything in nature conspired to make the occasion a pleasant one.

The many guests assembled at the church at the time appointed, and were favored with some delightful music while waiting, Schubert's Serenade being rendered in a very pleasing manner. This was followed by a vocal solo by Wilbur Westerman, a brother of the bride. Suddenly the mellow strains of Lohengren's wedding march announced the coming of the bridal party

The bride on the arm of her father, and attended by her matron of honor and two bridesmaids, the two flower girls and ring bearer, was met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man. Rev. Wakefield of Morenci, assisted by Rev. Perrin of Adrian, pronounced the words that made them man and wife, the ring service being used. The bride was charming in a gown of white Crepe Meteor with court train and bridal veil, and carried a shower boquet of roses and lillies of the valley. The matron of honor wore white, and the bridesmaides and flower girls yellow. The little ring bearer was dainty in white.

During the service the soft strains of the prayer from Loghengren blended with the solemn words of the ceremony As the bridal party turned to leave the altar, the organ pealed forth the notes of Mendelssohn's wedding march.

After the ceremony the company adjourned to the home of the bride's parents, where an elegant wedding breakfast was served. The bride and groom leaving later for a trip on the St. Lawrence river, stopping at numerous points of interest.

The numerous beautiful presents attested to the high esteem in which the couple are held by their many friends

Mr. Lowery is an old Tecumseh boy, and his friends congratulate him on this occasion. The bride also has made many friends in Tecumseh, during her frequent visits with her aunt, Mrs. A. B. Harding and others Mr. and Mrs. Lowery will be at home in Ann Arbor after Nov 1st, at 115 North Thayer street.

Plymouth Binder Twine

SAVES TIME AND GRAIN

Twine is a small item, but good twine saves a lot of expense in harvest time. Every time your machine is stopped the delay costs you money. Time in harvest season is always valuable, and sometimes extremely precious on account of the condition of weather or grain. Be sure you use the best twine,—PLYMOUTH TWINE. Then you will be safe from the annoyances, delays, expenses, which ordinary twine causes. Plymouth Twine works perfectly in every machine. More of it is made and used every year than any other kind, because it is known to be the best and has been for years. Binds more sheaves with less expense, no knots, no breaks, and is guaranteed full length and extra strength. Get Plymouth Twine from the local dealer. Look for the wheat-sheaf tag.

CERTAIN RESULTS

Many a Tecumseh Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Tecumseh. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times for the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store and my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it."

(Statement given December 7, 1908.)

A Willing Re-Endorsement.

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed on August 29, 1911, he said: I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented. You may continue to use my name as a reference."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Antoine Deloaia, Postmaster at Garden, Mich., knows the exact facts when he speaks of the curative value of Foley Kidney Pills. He says: "From my own experience I recommend Foley Kidney Pills, as a great remedy for kidney trouble. My father was cured of kidney disease and a good many of my neighbors were cured by Foley Kidney Pills."

For sale by all Druggists of Tecumseh.

Many Driven From Home

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery and and cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles find quick relief and health returns. Its help in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping-cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

U. A. Smith, Bridgeton, Ind., had kidney trouble for years, and was so crippled with rheumatism he could not dress without help. He started using Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I began to get better at once, and now all my trouble has left me and I do not feel that I ever had rheumatism. I rest well all night and tho' 59 years old, can now do the work of a man of 35 years. I would like to be the means of others getting benefit from Foley Kidney Pills." Refuse substitutes.

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

IOWA PROGRESSIVE TICKET

John L. Stevens of Boone Named for Governor, at Head.

At Des Moines, Iowa, with John L. Stevens of Boone as their nominee for governor, Iowa Progressives in convention here put a third party state ticket into the field, after overcoming opposition to the plan by a vote of nearly five to one.

The speech of Colonel Roosevelt interrupted the state ticket nominations, but after he had left the hall the following were named: Lieutenant governor, E. G. Allison Oneida; auditor, C. F. Meyers, Elkader; treasurer, N. F. Baker, Lucas; railroad commissioner, Ira Nichols, Iowa Falls; secretary of state, H. A. Morey of Waverly.

The platform indorses that of the national convention, reasserts the belief in popular rule and declares that the "Progressive party is here to stay."

OHIO PROGRESSIVES

Convention Nominates Arthur L. Garford for Governor.

At Columbus, Ohio, amid great enthusiasm the Progressive party convention nominated Arthur L. Garford of Elyria, O., for governor. The nomination was made by acclamation, no other name being presented for the honor.

A platform indorsing the one drawn by the Chicago convention was adopted. The nomination of Mr. Garford and the adoption of the platform were the only business transacted during the morning session, all other nominations being suspended until Governor Johnson of California had addressed the delegates.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

ESCANABA — As the direct result of a collision of two motorcycles near this city, Miss Elsie Broderson of this city is dead; Jacob Enbevore of Bark River, is fatally injured, and Jack Broderson and William J. Clearmo of this city are suffering from severe bruises. All were rendered unconscious and Miss Broderson remained so until she died. Both motorcyclists carried lights, but the weather was very foggy, and as the accident occurred at a dip in the road, it is supposed that both machines were going at such high speed that their drivers were unable to stop when they sighted each other a few feet apart.

BATTLE CREEK—An official offer of $1,000 reward was made by the heads of the Nichols & Shepard company for the arrest of the persons who attempted the destruction of the large attempted the destruction of the plant. The vigilance of the night watchman, who discovered the fire set in the dry kiln, and his activity in extinguishing the flames, saved the big plant. The incendiaries are supposed to be men about the city who have petty grievances against officers of the company.

HOW TO PRESERVE YOUTH AND BEAUTY.

One great secret of youth and beauty for the young woman or the mother is the proper understanding of her womanly system and well-being. Every woman, young or old, should know herself and her physical make up. A good way to arrive at this knowledge is to get a good doctor book, such for instance, as "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," by R. V. Pierce, M. D., which can readily be procured by sending thirty-one cents for cloth-bound copy, addressing Dr. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y.

The womanly system is a delicate machine which can only be compared to the intricate mechanism of a beautiful watch which will keep in good running order only with good care and the proper oiling at the right time, so that the delicate mechanism may not be worn out. Very many times young women get old or run down before their time through ignorance and the improper handling of this human mechanism. Mental depression, a confused head, backache, headache, or hot flashes and many symptoms of derangement of the womanly system can be avoided by a proper understanding of what to do, in those trying times that come to all women.

MRS. WILLIAMS.

MRS. G. H. WILLIAMS, of Lynnhaven, Va., wrote: "It is six years since my health gave way. I had female trouble and all the doctors (I employed three) said I would die. I was not able to do my work, had to hire someone all the time. Finally, I read in the papers about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and decided to try it. I had not taken but one bottle until I found it had done me good. I took, in all, five bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and two of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and now I am able to do all my housework, and have gained fourteen pounds. I advise all women who suffer from female trouble to try your 'Favorite Prescription.' It's the only medicine on earth."

ENLARGE ROUND HOUSE

Michigan Central Makes Changes in Extensive Construction Work.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 9.—The Michigan Central railroad changed the plans of the $500,000 construction work now going on in this city so as to increase the capacity of the roundhouse and other buildings one-third more than the original plan called for.

In addition to the new roundhouse, which will be increased to a forty-stall house, instead of thirty as originally planned, there will be a new coal station, clinker pits and master mechanic's office. The new machine shop will be larger than at first planned, owing to the increased capacity of the new roundhouse.

BANKERS TO SLEEP ON SHIP

Detroit Plans "Floating Hotel" for Visitors at Convention.

Detroit, Sept. 7.—Plans have almost been completed for the reception and entertainment of the delegates to the national convention of the American Bankers' association in Detroit next week.

The local committee in charge announced that the excursion steamer City of Detroit III had been chartered as a "floating hotel" for the bankers' benefit during the convention. It is planned to have the boat steam up the river each night and anchor somewhere off Belle Isle, where watery breezes and quiet are expected to mingle.

LANSING—An important conference involving all of the roads of the lower peninsula has been called by the railroad commission for Sept. 18. The commission aims to revise all the class rates now in force. According to State Expert Darwin, the rates of the railroads have not been revised in twenty years, and are not suitable to present-day conditions. They are too high in many cases, and too low in others.

NO CHICAGO CAR STRIKE

Companies Agree to One Arbitration Board Asked by Men.

Complete surrender by Chicago surface car lines to union demands made practically certain the peaceful settlement of the wage and hour controversy between the Chicago City Railway company and the Chicago Railways company and their 10,000 employes.

In the last minutes of the twenty-four-hour period which the union chiefs gave the traction heads to come to their terms, amicable arrangements were made in Mayor Harrison's office on methods of arbitrating the difficulties through the medium of one board.

Officials of the elevated railway employes' union notified President B. I. Budd of the Chicago Elevated Railways company, which operates all the elevated lines, that the unions could not accept the proposed contract offered to them by the companies.

GRAND RAPIDS — As a direct result of rumors afloat in the Polish section of this city, Fr. Krawkoski personally investigated a mysterious sickness which broke out in the family of Martin Pecynski and which later resulted in the death of Sophia, eleven years old, then called in the coroner. The priest went to the house and found the little girl in great pain and violent at times. He picked her up and held her in his arms. In that position she died a few minutes later. The father and a son, Frank, seventeen years old, are both deathly sick. The father lays the cause of sickness to pork which was eaten for breakfast.

CHEBOYGAN — During a terrific storm a bolt of lightning struck the new Cheboygan hotel, passing down the flagpole and tearing two holes in the roof. Guests were shocked and badly frightened. No one was seriously injured.

REPUBLICAN GAIN IS EVIDENT IN MAINE

Democratic Tidal Wave of Two Years Ago Ebbs.

Three Republican Congressman, and Possibly Four, Are Returned from Old Pine Tree State by the Election.

Republican gains throughout Maine show that William T. Haines has been elected over the present Democratic governor, Frederick W. Plaisted, and that three, and possibly four, Republican congressmen have been elected, as against two at the last election.

Republican Congressmen Gain.

In the First district Congressman Asher C. Hinds ran considerably ahead of the ticket and probably has won over his Democratic opponent, Michael T. O'Brien. In the Second Congressman McGillicuddy and his Republican opponent, William B. Skelton, ran neck and neck, the latter leading slightly, with about half the district to be heard from.

Democratic Congressman Samuel W. Gould apparently has been defeated in the Third district at the hands of Forrest Goodwin, and in the Fourth district Republican Congressman Frank E. Guernsey is more than holding his own with Charles Mullen, the present mayor of Bangor.

The vote, with twenty-eight towns missing, was: Haines, Rep., 70,072; Plaisted, Dem., 66,515. Two years ago the vote for governor was: Fernald, Rep., 64,672; Plaisted, Dem., 73,425. The missing towns two years ago cast 751 votes for the Republican candidate and 846 for the Democratic candidate.

The New Legislature.

The new legislature will stand on a joint ballot 94 Republicans and 78 Democrats, with ten districts yet to report. The state senate will be made up of 22 Republicans and 8 Democrats, with one district missing. The house will be composed of 72 Republicans and 70 Democrats, with nine districts missing.

This majority will be sufficient to elect former Congressman Edwin C. Burleigh of Augusta as United States senator to succeed Obadiah Gardner, who was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator William P. Frye, Republican.

There is no longer any doubt but what Hinds, Guernsey and McGillicuddy have been re-elected to congress, though with reduced pluralities. Forrest Goodwin is the other Republican congressman elected.

Progressives Keep Hands Off.

A feature that made possible the election of Haines is the fact that the Progressives, who are admittedly strong in this state, did not oppose him, instead there being a solid Republican force against the Democrats. Nor did the Progressives come into the state prior to election day in the fight for the national ticket. They agreed with the Republican state committee to stay out of the state until after the election and it is highly probable that their absence from the state carried considerable strength to Haines.

Another feature of the battle was the fact that the Republicans who deflected to Plaisted two years ago did not stay under his banner this year.

FAST TIME IN THE AIR

Vedrines Travels 124.8 Miles in 70 Minutes 56.85 Seconds.

Racing under a blazing sun near Chicago at a rate of more than 105 miles per hour, Jules Vedrines, world's champion airman, won the Gordon-Bennett international trophy at Clearing and will carry back to France the emblem significant of the aviation classic of the age.

His time for 200 kilometers, 124.8 miles, was 1 hour 10 minutes 56.85 seconds.

Maurice Prevost, another member of the French team, completed the course in 1 hour 13 minutes 10.82 seconds.

ARMY FLYERS KILLED

Two British Officers Lose Lives When Aeroplane Collapses.

At Stevenage, England, two British army officers lost their lives in flying. Captain Patrick Hamilton had taken Lieutenant Stewart as a passenger in his biplane.

The two officers had flown a considerable time when a strong wind sprang up and one of the wings of the aeroplane collapsed. The machine fell from an altitude of 250 feet and was destroyed. The bodies of the officers were found in the wreckage.

WANTS TO AID FARMERS

United States Will Show Them How to Farm.

Will Put Twelve Experts in State If Offer Is Accepted—Meeting in Detroit, Sept. 18.

East Lansing, Mich., Sept. 7.—The federal government wants to take the farmers of the state under its wing and show them how to farm. To that end, it appealed to the state board of agriculture to co-operate with it in the matter of putting field men to work in specific districts of the state to carry the work to the farmers first hand. The state board has called a meeting for Detroit, Sept. 18, to which the representatives of the various county boards of superviosrs and business men's clubs are invited.

The government proposes to put about twelve men in the state under the supervision of an expert. It will probably expend $20,000 yearly in the work.

W. J. Spillman, who is associated with the farm management investigations of the bureau of plant industry of the department of agriculture, came to Lansing with the proposed contracts by means of which this co-operation can be made possible. If the state board accepts, it means that a man who will have his headquarters at the college will be selected to be in direct charge.

At a recent meeting of the board the contracts were rejected because by an oversight the college was not named as one of the parties to each contract. This has been remedied in the new papers, which are now in the hands of the Michigan authorities.

BIG PLOWING CONTEST

First of Its Kind in United States at Michigan State Fair.

Detroit, Sept. 10. — The Michigan Agricultural and Industrial Exposition has added a great plowing contest between tractors to the state fair program. The contest will be on a big farm adjoining the Michigan state fair grounds. Demonstration will be conducted daily at such hours as are convenient to the fair visitors. The equipment in use in the contests and demonstrations will be suitable for the small as well as the large farm.

In addition to plowing the ground the land will be made ready for seeding and doubtless the seeding will be finished upon at least a part of the ground as a part of the demonstration. It is believed this contest will draw the attention of the entire farming world and the manufacturing world at large owing to its importance in these days when tractors are coming more into use on the farm.

WHEAT YIELD REPORTED POOR

Average Per Acre Is Only Ten Bushels in Michigan.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 9.—The crop report of the secretary of state, shows that the average yield of wheat for the year was but ten bushels, the lowest in ten years.

The average yield of oats is thirty-two, which compares favorably with the average. The other grains are in average condition, and the potato crop is the best in years. Peaches are in a deplorable state, owing to the damage done to trees last winter by storms.

Twenty-Sixth Nears Home.

Brighton, Mich., Sept. 9.—Five hundred soldiers of the Twenty-Sixth Infantry, U. S. A., with nineteen army wagons, passed through here, en route from Ludington to Detroit.

Evil spreads as necessarily as disease.—Eliot.

PRISON FARMING IS URGED

Plan of Warden Fuller of Ionia Approved by Governor.

Ionia, Mich., Sept. 10.—The board of control of the Ionia prison approved Warden Fuller's action in securing an option on 217 acres of land adjoining the reformatory farm. The board has also enough other land in view to give the Ionia reformatory a fine farm of 500 acres.

Governor Osborn approves the plan and would increase it to 1,000 acres, while Warden Fuller believes that if the legislature will approve the special appropriations to be asked for, the institution can be self-supporting.

Boy Hurt by Runaway.

Chesaning, Mich., Sept. 10.—Clifford Mandell, thirteen, sustained a severe laceration of the scalp when a team of horses which he was driving, attached to a land roller, became frightened and ran away.

Mirage Easy to Be Seen.

The celebrated Fata Morgana, a presentation of natural "moving pictures" on an immense scale which is occassionally seen in the Straits of Messina, is explained by a scientific writer as being a mirage, such as frequently occurs in various parts of the world; "in fact," he says, "one may see a mirage any day by looking through the stratum of air overlying a hot stove, or adjacent to the side of a wall heated in the sunshine." Young scientists will be interested in verifying this statement.

REPORT OROZCO TAKEN IN TEXAS

Rumor Is In General Circulation, but Not Confirmed.

WOULD MEAN END OF REVOLT

Rebel Commanding Officer Said to Have Been Pursued Across Border by Mexican Federals and Arrested by Americans.

Washington, Sept. 16.—Unofficial advices were received here that General Orozco had crossed the border into the state of Texas and had been captured by Captain Mitchell, U. S. A.

General Steever, commanding the American forces at El Paso, telegraphed the war department that this rumor had reached him, but that he was unable to confirm it. He added that he had sent reinforcements to Marfa, Tex., where Captain Mitchell is located.

Think Revolution Will Collapse.

The report caused a great deal of commotion here. It is the general belief here that if the report be true, and Orozco is in the custody of the United States army that the collapse of organized revolution in the north of Mexico is at hand.

According to report of General Orozco's capture he was driven across the border by federals who pursued him and his force after a hot engagement.

Dispatches to the state department gave no sign of any change in the Mexican situation. Ambassador Wilson reported that great uneasiness prevailed in the capital over what today may bring forth. He also reported that he is taking steps looking to the ascertaining of the whereabouts of John Devine, an American, reported sentenced to death by rebels.

Des Moines Sails for Mexico.

The United States cruiser Des Moines sailed from Guantanamo, Cuba, for Tampico, on the east coast of Mexico. The Des Moines is to make a series of visits along the coast, stopping at several Mexican ports for friendly calls.

General E. Z. Steever, commanding the department of Texas, with headquarters at Fort Bliss, later was positive in his statement that the rebel leader has not been made a prisoner by his troops. He received messages to the effect that a man supposed to be the elder Orozco who is a rebel colonel, had been captured, but he had not been identified. The United States troops, General Steever says, have captured nobody whom they believe to be the revolutionary leader, and have no advices that the Mexicans have made such a capture.

TWO KILLED IN WRECK

Passenger Car Crashes Into Work Engine in Cincinnati Yards.

Cincinnati, Sept. 9.—Two men were killed, another fatally and several persons seriously injured when Baltimore and Ohio passenger train No. 20 ran into a work train at Sixth and State streets of this city.

The two dead men and the man who is mortally hurt were not passengers on the train, according to the railroad officials, and the police are of the opinion that the dead men were on the work train when the accident occurred.

LELAND—During a remarkably heavy rain storm in this section, the cemetery at Good Harbor, a hamlet south of this resort, was almost completely washed out by the rushing waters. Graves were undermined and coffins and bones of many persons long buried there were torn from their resting places and hurled like driftwood down the hillside and through deep gullies into a swamp, a mile away.

FEUD CLANS GATHERING

Boyces and Sneeds Assemble Following Murder.

Amarillo, Texas., Holds Two Crowds of Deadly Enemies and Trouble Is Expected.

Amarillo, Tex., Sept. 16.—The clans of the Boyces and the Sneeds are gathering here as the result of the killing of Al Boyce by John B. Sneed here Saturday afternoon. Al's three brothers, Lynn, Will and Henry Boyce, are here and they wired for a number of other relatives and friends to hasten to Amarillo. Henry Boyce is president of a bank at Dalhart.

Joe Sneed, John's brother, and J. H. Sneed, the assassin's uncle, both rich, also have arrived. J. T. Snyder, father of Mrs. Lena Sneed, with whom Al Boyce eloped and which event set in motion the series of tragedies, is expected to arrive today from Roswell, N. M. He is a millionaire cattleman and during Sneed's trial for the killing of Captain A. G. Boyce in Fort Worth, Snyder supported Sneed and declared his daughter insane. J. H. Bowman, Sneed's brother-in-law, of Plano, also will arrive today.

With a score of members of the feudal families here, city and county officers have established a strict surveillance to prevent any outbreak.

Poor, Asks Grave in River.

Napoleon, O., Sept. 9.—"Nothing to live on, nothing to bury me. Leave me in the bottom of the river," read a note left by Isaac Boyd, aged eighty, whose body was found in the Maumee river.

SEES MORE PROSPERITY

President McCrea of Pennsylvania Railway Optimistic.

Thinks Nation Is on Eve of Entering Even More Happy Times Than at Present.

Pittsburg, Pa., Sept. 16.—Prosperity that will eclipse anything the nation has ever enjoyed, is what James McCrea, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, sees in the future. Asked what he thought of the business situation Mr. McCrea said

"Prosperity—why, it is here. Everybody can see that. The pulse of the whole country is beating to the rythm of happier times. And we are just entering the new era of prosperity."

Of the prospect for a car shortage, Mr. McCrea says:

"So far as the outlook for the whole country is concerned it would be impossible to predict. But for the Pittsburg region I will promise the supply of cars will be ample to move the great tonnage created here.

"Farmers have not had such bumper crops" he continued, "in years. If there are storage facilities in their own bins, or in their own elevators, for the bounteous crops—and I think there are this year—another factor in car shortage is removed. However, regardless of any car shortage, our national prosperity is on the boom and in my opinion will continue for a long period."

Your real influence is measured by your treatment of yourself.—Alcott.

FLOGGING IS STOPPED

Method of Punishment in Jackson Prison Is Changed.

Publicity Given Recent Outbreak and Punishment Therefor Stays Hand of Warden.

Jackson, Mich., Sept. 9.—The publicity given the flogging of the convicts in the penitentiary here has apparently prevented the warden and the board of control from finishing their program.

More than forty led the mutiny which necessitated the calling out of the state troops, yet only twenty-four or twenty-five have been whipped. It was reported that seventeen of the mutineers were thrashed. Members of the militia say preparations were apparently made for the floggings, but that none was punished.

Instead over forty have been chained with leg irons and handcuffs and thrown into solitary confinement. The cells used are partly dark. Two soldiers and one convict who was released from the penitentiary confirmed the report of the new mode of punishment.

FLINT—Isaac Welch and Morris Parkhurst, who are members of the city fire department, were seriously hurt when two fire motor trucks collided while responding to an alarm of fire. One of the fire trucks was flagged at the Pere Marquette crossing of Saginaw street, while a switch engine was passing. The other apparatus, traveling at great speed, crashed into the rear end of the first which had stopped at the crossing.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars or any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY, & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.
Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Every man has a lot of old debts due him that he can't collect, and knows he can't collect, and yet talks about them a great deal.

A really effective kidney and bladder medicine must first stop the progress of the disease and then cure the conditions that cause it. Use Foley Kidney Pills for all kidney and baladder troubles and urinary irregularities. They are safe and reliable. They help quickly and permanently. In the yellow package.

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

It is possible to make a great reputation with a little sense; a man with a little sense is really quite a genius.

$80,000,000.00 LOST ANNUALLY BY WAGE EARNERS

Dr. Sadler estimates that about $800,000,000.00 in wages is lost annually to the American people as a direct result of colds, Lost time means lost wages and doctoring is expensive. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly. It will stop the cough, and heal and sooth the sore and inflamed air passages. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

There are a thousand things the people ought to do, and although they admit it, they will never do them.

Uncle Ezra Says

"It don't take more'n a gill uv effort to get folks into a peck of trouble" and a little neglect of constipation, billiousness, indigestion or other liver derangement will do the same. If ailing, take Dr. King's New Life Pills for quick results, Easy, safe, sure, and only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

A man should either be able to keep his temper, or be abe to whip the man he is quarreling with.

The Men Who Succeed

as heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success, to-day, demands health. To ail is to fail. It's utter folly for a man to endure a weak run-down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas. B. Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders, and deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well," Try them. Only 50 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Those riding in automobiles are not as happy and comfortable as those on foot think they are.

Mrs. J. N. Hill, Homer, Ga., has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years, and she says she always recommends it to her friends. "It never fails to cure our coughs and colds and prevents croup. We have five children and always give them Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for a cold, and they are all soon well. We would not be without it in our house." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

Laugh when a friend tells a joke; it is one of the numerous taxes you must pay.

What We Never Forget

according to science, are the things associated with our early home life, such as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, that mother or grandmother used to cure our burns, boils, scalds, sores, skin eruptions, cuts, sprains or bruises. Forty years of cures prove its merit. Unrivaled for piles, corns or cold-sores. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Some people are so strong on talk that they try to pay their bills with it.

T. L. Parks, Murryville, Ga., Route 1, is in his 73rd year, and was recently cured of a bad kidney and bladder trouble. He says himself: "I have suffered with my kidneys. My back ached and I was annoyed with bladder irregularities. I can truthfully say, one 50c bottle of Foley Kidney Pills cured me entirely." They contain no habit forming drugs.

For sale by all Druggists of Tecumseh.

STRIKING MINER SHOT BY TROOPS

Early Morning Battle on Cabin Creek, West Virginia.

MARTIAL LAW IN OPERATION

National Guardsmen and Strikers Have Lively Clash—"Mother" Jones Held Responsible for Much of the Disorder.

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 9.—As a result of fighting between national guardsmen and striking miners near Oakley, on Cabin Creek, Samuel Altman, a miner, is dead, and several miners are wounded, while a number of others have been arrested by the troops. The soldiers suffered no fatalities.

Slain in Morning Attack.

For several nights the pickets at Oakley have been fired on by strikers and Altman was killed in an early morning attack on the soldiers. He was seen running and, upon his refusal to halt when ordered to do so, was shot dead. Fearing other attacks because of the killing, reinforcements have been rushed to Oakley. The scene of the shooting is at the junction of a ravine and Cabin Creek, making it possible for a number to conceal themselves in the woods.

"Mother" Jones Is Blamed.

"Mother" Jones is said to be largely responsible for the disorder in the field.

Additional companies of guardsmen have arrived in the strike zone and now every guardsman in the state is on duty.

MAC VEAGH'S PLAN OPPOSED

Nagel Seeks to Prevent Him Abolishing Ports of Entry.

Washington, Sept. 9. — Secretary MacVeagh's treasury reorganization plans, which provide for elimination of several ports of entry and collectors in places where collection of customs has been maintained at a loss to the government, met with an obstacle.

It became known that the secretary of commerce and labor, Mr. Nagel, demanded that some of these ports be continued for the purpose of carrying on navigation regulations. Congress gave the secretary of the treasury the right to abolish any of these offices and ordered him to report at the next session.

A FORTUNATE BLUNDER.

The Result of Putting a Couple of Wires in Wrong Terminals.

A large number of the world's greatest inventions have been the result of some accidental union of forces, the nature of which the person who started them neither understood nor suspected. The working of dynamos at long distances apart when properly connected was discovered by accident.

A scientific journal says: "Soon after the opening of the Vienna exposition. In 1873, a careless workman picked up the ends of a couple of wires which be found trailing along the ground. He fastened them in the terminals of a dynamo, to which he thought they belonged, while they were really attached to another dynamo that was running in another part of the grounds.

"The dynamo to which he fastened the wires was not running, but as soon as the wires were placed in its terminals it revolved as if a steam engine was driving it. The workman was amazed. The engineers and electricians were astonished by the discovery that a dynamo electric machine (turned by steam power) would turn another similar machine a long distance away if properly connected to it by electric wires. Thus originated one of the most revolutionary applications of electricity."

The fact that power can be transmitted for miles by electric wires is one of the most important factors in modern civil engineering achievements.

Foiled.

The lovers whispered together before the doors of her father's hangar, planning the last details of their elopement.

"Hurry, dearest," he urged. "We will wheel out your runabout monoplane and together we'll fly away on the wings of the night, nevermore to be separated!"

"Wait," she exclaimed. "I have a better plan. We will run it out and hide in the old stable; then we will walk to the trolley and papa will never suspect us."

They were hardly half a mile on their way down the road when from overhead came the roar of the triple propellers of the racing monoplane as papa dashed out into the darkness in hot pursuit.—Puck.

Bit by Bit.

"Dashington seems to have finally made a conquest of the Scadmore girl. Wonder how it all came about?"

"The first time she saw him she gave him her eye, the next time they met she gave him her arm, it wasn't long before he was holding both of her hands, soon after that he won her heart, and she lost her head, and gave herself to him completely."

Raisin Valley Seminary

ONCE MORE TO BECOME A SEAT OF LEARNING

Purchased by Rev. Howard Moore Who Will Install a Friends Bible School.

Rev. Howard Moore, a former pastor of the Friends church at Raisin Valley but now of Ypsilanti, has purchased the old Raisin Valley Seminary and once more it will be used for educational work.

This Seminary was founded in 1850 by The Friends Quarterly Conference of Adrian, the governing body of the Friends church in this section with many endowments by philanthropic members. Moses Comfort giving $3000.

This school was kept open until 1908 though at times facing bankruptcy and fighting financial difficulties. The free educational advantages in the city and town high schools drew away those who had been its support and its doors were closed.

No distinction was ever made as to religious belief among the students so that they led a good worthy life they were always welcome and many can trace the foundation of their education to this school.

That it is to be opened again for school work will give great satisfaction to those who have been interested in the seminary for so many years.

FLOWERS FOR THE OLD SOLDIERS.

A pretty feature at the National G. A. R. encampment in Los Angeles, last week was the band of young girls with their arms full of cut flowers darting in and out among the old soldiers, scattering their blossoms at their feet and that of others who went about with lemonade to quench their thirst.

It is estimated that about 7,000 veterans were in line and these graceful loving attentions were appreciated by each and everyone.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to express our thanks to our many friends who were so kind to us in this, our time of sorrow over the loss of our little one, for the beautiful flowers and the loving words of sympathy.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Priest,
Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Priest.

W. D. HAYWOOD ARRESTED

I. W. W. Organizer Charged with Conspiracy at Lawrence, Mass.

Boston, Sept. 16.—William D. Haywood, general organizer of the Industrial Workers of the World, was arrested here on a charge of conspiracy in connection with the big textile strike at Lawrence last winter. The arrest was made after Haywood had delivered a speech on Boston common in which he urged a general strike as a protest against the imprisonment of Ettor and Giovannitti at Lawrence.

Reports are current here that a general strike in all Massachusetts mills is to be called by the I. W. W. on Sept. 30, the day that Ettor and Giovannitti are to be placed on trial as alleged accessories to the murder of an Italian woman during a riot at Lawrence.

RICH CHICAGOAN MURDERED

Widow Writes that Guide Killed Joseph R. Bickerdike in Mexico.

Chicago, Sept. 16. — Word was received here of the murder of June 19 of Joseph R. Bickerdike, formerly a wealthy resident of this city, at San Anras, Lower California, by Juan Rees, a guide. Rees and fourteen companions later were shot down by soldiers.

The information was contained in a letter written by the victim's wife, Mrs. Sarah L. Bickerdike. Rees and his companions seized all the firearms in the camp, after taking several hundred dollars from Bickerdike's clothing, and fled to the mountains. They were followed by soldiers, who finally overtook the outlaws and killed them.

Italians Advance Into Interior.

Rome, Sept. 16. — The Italian advance from Derna to the interior has been begun. General Reicoli's column occupied the heights east of Aronne, which dominate the plain of Kasveleben, and the road to Sidi Ariz, the headquarters of Enver Bey, the Turkish commander. In the skirmishing the Italians lost three killed and ten wounded.

Blindness Prompts Suicide.

New York, Sept. 16. — Having lost the sight of his right eye and feeling the approach of total blindness in the failing sight of his left eye, A. P. Tannert, once a prosperous importer of woolens, cotton and other fabrics, put a bullet in his head while riding in a taxicab in Central park and died shortly afterward.

The First Mountaineer.

A Munich paper has been searching the records of history to discover who were the first mountain climbers. It gives the palm to Moses for his ascent of Mount Sinai and rules out Noah for his ascent of Mount Ararat because he made it in a boat. There is sufficient evidence to show that the ancients thought mountain climbing sheer madness. No one in the time of Horace or Polybius wanted to go climbing for a summer holiday. A Chinese emperor in the seventh century was the first to make climbing fashionable in the east, but the first true tourists in Europe seem to have been Dante, Petrarch and Leonard. Then came the Emperor Maximilian I., who used to hunt in the mountains near Innsbruck, and after him Conrad von Gesner and Josias Simler explored the Swiss mountains. But climbing for pleasure such as we know it today was not thought of until quite recently.

Too Costly.

"According to this paper," said Mrs Naggs, "widows make the best wives."

"I don't doubt it, my dear," replied Naggs, "but nevertheless I don't feel justified in shuffling off at the present moment merely for the sake of making a good wife of you."

AMUSEMENTS

"THE SPRING MAID"

My advice to my patrons is—"See 'THE SPRING MAID' if you don't see another attraction this season."

I can and do personally guarantee "THE SPRING MAID" to be the largest and best attraction of any kind ever in Tecumseh. It is worth every cent you are asked to pay for it even if you get the highest priced seats and you will understand when you know that the daily expense of the company is over $750. Even after the first advance agent had been here and arranged the scale of prices, the best that could possibly be arranged, the following telegram was received from Werba & Luescher, the owners in New York:

Just received schedule from Adrian. Your capacity impossible would lose $300 playing your town with every seat sold. Must cancel 'Spring Maid' Have notified K & E. Save all printing material for instructions from Adrian. Sorry to disappoint you but can't be helped.

Signed, Werba & Luescher.

but after several telegrams had been sent back and forth I received the following wire:

"All right you are the doctor-Hope you make good."

Signed, Werba & Luescher.

and Tecumseh got the attraction instead of Adrian. By the way these telegrams are on file at Hay's Bakery if you care to read them.

Arrangements had already been made to play my date in Adrian as you can see by the piece which appeared in the Adrian Telegram, issue of Sept. 10 and corrected in Friday's issue, first page. The date for "THE SPRING MAID," Friday Sept 20 was held for Tecumseh by as close a deal as ever was made between a producing company and a local management and I hope the patrons of the house will appreciate and help Tecumseh "make good."

Respectfully,
Fd. L. Mark, Mgr.,
THE BRADLEY.

OUTING FOR THE LITTLE FOLK.

At a suggestion of Mrs. R. N. Lowe to a few friends that it would be a nice thing to do to give an outing to some children that otherwise would not have the privilege. Friday morning saw two auto loads of children starting out on a trip to Sand Lake for a three days outing.

Mrs. N. A. Howland furnished the cottage, Mrs. P. W. A. Fitzsimmons, Mrs. F. D. Wood furnished the autos. Among those who co-operated with these were Mesdames F. S. Anderson, L. G. North, Eugene Harris, Harry Moore and Mrs. J. Moore.

Mrs. Lottie Rowe was in care of the crowd and judging by the shouts and laughter as they left town there were a happy lot of youngsters.

Every available inch of room in the autos was filled with melons, vegetables, chicken, meat, bread, cakes, cookies etc enough to last a week. Bathing suits and everything needful were also provided and if they did not have a happy time it was no fault of the ladies who so kindly planned this outing.

Hardworking Dollar.

"I noticed a statement in an eastern paper the other day that has disquieted me a good deal," said a Cleveland man recently. "The item called to my attention the fact that it takes a dollar at the usual rate of interest more than two years to earn a dime. You can see the effect. Every time I spend a dime I think of that toiling dollar spinning away in the dark somewhere. The dime I spend means more than two years of steady application, and yet I let it go as if it were of too small value to be at all considered. Why, it takes a dollar more than a year to earn 5 cents! Think of that when you slip the next nickel across. It really makes me feel uncomfortable. I wish I hadn't read the stupid thing."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Subsidence of the Bermudas.

It is contended that the Bermuda islands are merely the remnant of an island, very much larger than the present entire group, which has sunk into the ocean. The original island, it is asserted, had an area of 300 or 400 square miles, whereas the Bermudas of today are only about twenty square miles in area. Within a comparatively recent period, according to Verrill, the Bermudas have subsided at least 80 or 100 feet. Their base is the summit of an ancient volcano, while their surface is composed of shell sand drifted into hills by the wind and consolidated by infiltration.—Harper's.

The Largest of Their Kinds.

The greatest bank in the world is the Bank of England; the largest library is the National in Paris, containing nearly 3,000,000 volumes; the largest theater is the Paris Opera House, covering three acres; the largest bronze statue is that of Peter the Great in St. Petersburg, weighing 1,100 tons; the biggest stone statue is in Japan, forty-four feet high; the largest college is in Cairo, with over 10,000 students and 310 teachers.

When Ships Were Built in the Woods.

In colonial days the shipping for our home trade and for sale abroad was built chiefly in the district of Maine and in New Hampshire. These two colonies built rather more than one-half the entire American tonnage in the days immediately preceding the Revolution. The older ports could not compete with the new settlements amid the timber. When the great trees had been exhausted on the river banks gangs of shipwrights went a mile or two into the forests and here on the uplands would build a vessel of 100 tons or more, mount her on strong sledges of timber, hitch on a team of 200 oxen and drag it in one steady pull over the snow to the frozen surface of a navigable stream. Such a team of oxen would be a quarter of a mile long, and it took the teamstership of a major general to start them all at once. It was called "raising them," and this work once done nothing must stop them till the ship rested on the ice.—Boston Globe.

Solid Gold.

For many years the term "solid gold" has been a commercial misnomer. Some of the ancient Roman jewelry as well as that of the renaissance period was indeed made of pure gold, worked up by hand with the crudest of tools, but since the old day there has been a constantly increasing employment of alloys, for the reason that jewelers found that the harder the gold was rendered by good alloys the greater its wearing qualities and the more secure, therefore, was the setting of the gems it contained.—Argonaut.

The Hard Part First.

"I hear you've got a government job now," one man said to another.

The other answered gayly:

"That's what."

The first man gave an envious sigh and asked:

"Is it hard work?"

"Not after you get it," was the reply.

Divided Nest.

A North Westmoreland (England) farmer recently came across a very unusual sight. In the course of his rounds through his fields he found a nest with 25 eggs in it. The large number was not the only marvel, for on examining the eggs, he found that 15 of them belonged to a pheasant, and the remaining ten to a partridge. The pheasant, as the stronger bird, was the probable intruder.

CERTAIN RESULTS

Many a Tecumseh Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Tecumseh. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich, says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times for the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store and my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it."

(Statement given December 7, 1908)

A willing Re Endorsement.

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed on August 29, 1911, he said: I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented, You may continue to use my name as a reference."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Antoine Deloats, Postmaster at Garden, Mich., knows the exact facts when he speaks of the curative value of Foley Kidney Pills. He says: "From my own experience I recommend Foley Kidney Pills, as a great remedy for kidney trouble. My father was cured of kidney disease and a good many of my neighbors were cured by Foley Kidney Pills."

For sale by all Druggists of Tecumseh.

Many Driven From Home

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery and and cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles find quick relief and health returns. Its help in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping-cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

U. A. Smith, Bridgeton, Ind., had kidney trouble for years, and was so crippled with rheumatism he could not dress without help. He started using Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I began to get better at once, and now all my trouble has left me and I do not feel that I ever had rheumatism. I rest well all night and tho' 59 years old, can now do the work of a man of 35 years. I would like to be the means of others getting benefit from Foley Kidney Pills." Refuse substitutes.

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

GEORGE S. DOUGHERTY

New York Officer Who Arrested Two Long-Sought Gunmen.

GUNMEN ARE CAPTURED

Forty Letters and Postcards Seized by Police.

"Lefty Louie" and "Cyp the Blood" Are Surprised and Arrested in Brooklyn Flat.

New York, Sept. 16.—The arrest of "Lefty Louie" Rosenberg and "Cyp the Blood" Horowitz was so swiftly executed that the fugitives did not have time to destroy forty letters and postcards they had received while in hiding at 756 Woodward avenue, Brooklyn.

Five headquarters detectives ransacked the apartments where Rosenberg and Horowitz were captured. They even tore off the wallpaper.

Deputy Commissioner Dougherty admitted that the correspondence found was of the utmost importance to the prosecution. The letters and postcards are in the hands of the police, but Acting District Attorney Moss demanded that they be turned over to him.

The two gunmen, so long sought for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, were arrested in company with their wives and a visiting pickpocket in a flat which they furnished a month ago. When covered with the revolvers of the police their only comment was:

"Put up your guns; we won't make no trouble."

TRAP SID ALLEN AND HIS NEPHEW

Leader of Gang and Edwards Caught in Des Moines.

GUNPLAY ENDS LOVE DREAM

Detectives Trail Girl to Des Moines, Where She Was to Wed Wesley Edwards—Both Ready to Return to Virginia.

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 16. — Sidna Allen, leader of the Allen clan, which shot up the Carroll county courthouse at Hillsville, Va., March 14, killing Judge Massie and others, and his nephew, Wesley Edwards, are manacled in cells at the city hall, as a result of love affairs which led detectives to them.

Will Waive Requisition.

Both have announced their willingness to return to Virginia without requisition.

Edwards, for the love of whom Miss Maude Iroler of Mount Airy, Va., had innocently led detectives to Des Moines, was captured as he was returning to his rooming house, after having worked all day with a paving gang.

Just as he boarded the street car, detectives and officers surrounded it. Edwards was trying to escape by crawling through the front of the car when the officers caught him. The arrest of Sidna Allen was effected earlier in the day.

Letter Clue to Trail.

A visit by Edwards to Miss Iroler in her Virginia home about a month ago and the accidental loss of a letter put the detectives on the trail. The fugitives had been in Des Moines since April 28.

Allen, under the name of Tom Sayre, worked as a carpenter and Edwards, under the name of Joe Jackson, was employed with a city paving gang.

Allen was arrested at the home of John Cameron at Eleventh and Locust streets, where he and his nephew had been rooming, by Detectives Baldwin, Lucas and Mundy of Roanoke. The arrest occurred a few minutes after Miss Iroler stepped into the Cameron home to meet Edwards, whom she was to wed at once, according to an arrangement made when he visited her in Virginia.

How Allen Was Taken.

Detective Lucas was at her heels. Allen was in an upper room. When informed that visitors wanted to see him, he came downstairs. As he did so Detective Lucas covered him with a revolver and asked him to surrender.

Allen hesitated, then threw up his hands, remarking as he did so: "I guess I'm your man."

GOVERNOR WILSON ENROUTE

Speaks at Sioux Falls Tuesday and at Columbus, O., Friday.

Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 16.—"I am getting keen enjoyment out of these trips," said Governor Wilson when seen on board his special car, the "Magnet." "I enjoy coming into close personal touch with the crowds. I have always enjoyed it." One of the important speeches of the trip will be at Columbus on Friday, where he will open the Ohio campaign and talk on "The Abandoned Issues," which is the title he says he has given the speech.

"Have you noticed," he asked, "that the real issues—the tariff and the trusts—have been practically abandoned by my opponents?"

An addition to the schedule was announced by the governor to include Sioux Falls, S. D., where he will speak Tuesday.

TYPHOID KILLS FIVE

Many Others Become Ill After Trip on Illinois Steamer.

Rock Island, Ill., Sept. 16.—Following an excursion on the steamer G. W. Hill between Clinton and Davenport in July, five deaths of passengers from typhoid fever have been reported, while the number of cases of intestinal trouble and typhoid so far reported among the passengers is twenty-five.

Families of the deceased have retained attorneys, and Coroner Kellogg of Clinton county has been called upon to make an investigation.

PANA MINE STRIKE ENDS

Operaters and Workmen Reach Agreement, Says Official.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 16. — Duncan McDonald, secretary treasurer of District Twelfth (Illinois) of the United Mine Workers of America, announced that the strike of the 500 miners at the Pana mines has been settled, the operators having granted the demands of the miners, who return to work today.

The miners had asked for certain concessions which the operators declined to grant.

HOW TO PRESERVE YOUTH AND BEAUTY.

One great secret of youth and beauty for the young woman or the mother is the proper understanding of her womanly system and well-being. Every woman, young or old, should know herself and her physical make up. A good way to arrive at this knowledge is to get a good doctor book, such for instance, as "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," by R. V. Pierce, M. D., which can readily be procured by sending thirty-one cents for cloth-bound copy, addressing Dr. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y.

The womanly system is a delicate machine, which can only be compared to the intricate mechanism of a beautiful watch which will keep in good running order only with good care and the proper oiling at the right time, so that the delicate mechanism may not be worn out. Very many times young women get old or run down before their time through ignorance and the improper handling of this human mechanism. Mental depression, a confused head, backache, headache, or hot flashes and many symptoms of derangement of the womanly system can be avoided by a proper understanding of what to do, in those trying times that come to all women.

MRS. WILLIAMS.

MRS. G. H. WILLIAMS, of Lynnhaven, Va., wrote: "It is six years since my health gave way. I had female trouble and all the doctors (I employed three) said I would die. I was not able to do my work, had to hire someone all the time. Finally, I read in the papers about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and decided to try it. I had only taken but one bottle until I found it had done me good. I took, in all, five bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and two of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and now I am able to do all my housework, and have gained fourteen pounds. I advise all women who suffer from female trouble to try your 'Favorite Prescription.' It's the only medicine on earth."

Friday the relatives of Mrs. Jeanie Kyle of Escanaba, who has been spending the summer here, planned and carried out a complete surprise for her at the home of her sister, Mrs. Charles DuBois. Mrs. Kyle expects to leave soon for her home in Escanaba, and was indeed surprised when her brothers and sisters and other relatives came laden with good things to eat for their dinner. Every one being in the best of spirits and enjoying themselves so completely, the day passed altogether to quickly. The guests from away were Miss Nannie Kyle and Mrs. Myrtle Rheinhart of Tecumseh, and Miss Limerick of Milan.

The Sunday school picnic of the Christian church which was held Saturday afternoon, was a success in every detail, though the rain in the forenoon kept some away. On account of the dampness they were unable to go to the woods as was planned, but was held on the lawn at John Britton's. Lawn swings and hammocks furnished amusement for the children, and the older ones enjoyed a social good time. Every one bringing baskets filled with good things to eat, making the supper a great success, covers being laid for about one hundred twenty-five. The guests from away were Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Roberts of Tipton.

CANAL TO OPEN IN FALL OF 1913

Panama Ditch to Receive Traffic Before Expected Time.

CHANGE ANNOUNCED BY MEYER

Warships to Be There and Special Trains Will Convey Sailors of Atlantic Fleet on an Inspection Trip.

Washington, Sept. 16.—The Panama canal is to be opened to traffic in the fall of 1913. This statement was made officially at the navy department with an announcement that the Atlantic fleet would be assembled at Colon this winter before the water is turned in. The navy's estimate as to the time of opening is based upon the latest report from the army engineers.

To View Canal Details.

Secretary Meyer, after consulting with the isthmian canal commission, discovered that construction work on the canal had progressed so far that unless action was taken immediately there was a probability that the men of the fleet would have no opportunity to examine the connecting link between the two oceans before it was in operation. The visit of the fleet will include railroad trips for the men throughout the canal zone.

While there has been much speculation and a number of prophecies concerning the early opening of the canal, the navy department was the first to announce the surprising fact officially. The date for the open originally was set for Jan. 1, 1915, and engineers for some time had doubted if the engineering difficulties could be overcome to permit completion of the work by that date.

Waterway Fifty Miles Long.

The remaining work is said to offer few obstacles. The entire length of the canal from deep water in the Atlantic to deep water in the Pacific is about fifty miles. Its length from shore line to shore line is forty miles. The estimated cost of the canal is $375,000,000. The force actually at work is about 35,000 persons, and of these about 5,000 are Americans.

In passing through the canal from the Atlantic to the Pacific a vessel will enter the approach channel in Limon Bay, which extends to Gatun, a distance of seven miles. At Gatun it will enter a series of three locks and be lifted eighty-five feet to the level of Gatun lake.

Through Culebra Cut.

The vessel may steam at full speed through this lake for a distance of about twenty-four miles to Bas Obispo, where it will enter the Culebra cut. It will pass through the cut, a distance of about nine miles, to Pedro Miguel.

There it will enter a lock and be lowered a little more than thirty feet to a small lake, and will pass through this for one and a half miles to Miraflores. There it will enter two locks and be lowered to sea level and pass out into the Pacific.

VETERANS ELECT BEERS

TWELVE SAILORS DROWN IN LAKE

Terrible Tragedy at U. S. Naval Training School.

PERISH 30 FEET FROM SHORE

Foundering Boat Anchored and Youths Leap Overboard, but Are Beaten Back by Wind and Raging Water.

Chicago, Sept. 16. — Twelve boys, recruits at the United States naval training station at North Chicago, lost their lives in a Lake Michigan tragedy which in many respects has no parallel. They were able, all but one of them, to swim, and yet they were drowned within thirty feet of the shore.

Out of the twenty-nine men and boys who set out for a pleasure sail only seventeen bodies have been recovered showing signs of life. Over these two pulmotors worked steadily for hours in the hope of reviving them. The boys who recovered after the use of the pulmotor number only four.

Petty Officer Stockman is believed to have been drowned while trying to save others.

Hero May Be Saved by Pulmotor.

Chief Gunner's Mate William Negus started for shore carrying a boy who could not swim. He lost his charge, dived, and did not reappear until two hours later, when his body was taken from the water 600 yards north of the scene of the tragedy. He was apparently dead, but under the pulmotor he showed signs of life after half an hour. It is believed that his life will be saved.

William Stanley, one of those saved, told a dramatic story of the tragedy.

"We left the station about a quarter to two in the afternoon," he said. "We were not ordered out, but were given permission to take the sail. The water was exceedingly rough, and most of the boys were so new to water experience that they became helplessly seasick after we had gone perhaps half a mile from the shore.

Boys Become Seasick.

"William Negus was in command. He saw that with half the boys seasick and helpless it would be impossible to handle the boat as it should be handled, so we put in toward shore. We had a big boat, about twenty-four feet long, with a mainsail and jib. We hauled down the sails to make things more snug and present less surface to the storm. Then we took to the oars, such of us as were able to use them.

"There was a lot of water in the boat, and more of it coming in all the time. We were in danger of being swamped at any moment. But Negus thought he could save the boat as well as all the people in it.

"When we were within about thirty feet of shore he dropped anchor. Then he went overboard to see how deep the water was. It was only about up to his nose—if he had been level. But the heavy waves hurled him in water four or five feet deep.

"He climbed back into the boat then. It was plain we would have to swim for it. Negus called out to ask if there was anybody aboard who could not swim. One boy said he couldn't.

"So Negus took that boy—I don't know who he was—on his back and started for shore, calling for the rest of us to follow. I was one of the last to quit the boat. I saw Negus swim a few strokes toward the shore and then he seemed to be in trouble. His arms went out crazily and he went down.

Horrible Struggle in Water.

"He disappeared only for a moment and then he came up and didn't have the boy with him any more. It looked as if a big wave had snatched the boy from his arms.

"Negus wouldn't go to shore without the lad. He dove into the water again—and I didn't see him any more.

"All around the boat the water was alive with boys trying to get ashore. It was a horrible struggle. They didn't seem to make any headway at all against the waves and the wind.

"Pretty soon I saw it wasn't any use to stick to the boat and I jumped as far toward shore as I could and then tried to swim. There was nothing doing. I couldn't get ahead. But finally I hit something and somebody dragged me out of the water."

STRAUS QUITS CHAIRMANSHIP

Van Hise of Wisconsin Elected in His Place on Wage Board.

New York, Sept. 16.—Oscar S. Straus, nominee of the Progressive party for governor of New York, announced his resignation as chairman of the board of arbitrators which has under consideration the increased wage demands of the engineers of fifty eastern railroads.

He remains a member of the board, however. Dr. Charles R. Van Hise, president of the University of Wisconsin, was elected as chairman to succeed Mr. Straus.

Fatally Shot Over Cards.

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Sept. 16.—James Evans was fatally shot by Goldie Edwards during a quarrel over a card game in a rooming house. Edwards escaped. Both are negroes.

BOAT LINES ARE INCLUDED

Railroad Commission Assumes Jurisdiction Over Illinois Vessels.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 9. — Jurisdiction over all boat lines in Illinois doing an infrastate business has been assumed by the Illinois railroad and warehouse commission.

A decision to this effect was rendered in the case of J. W. Barwell against the Hill boat line. The commission decided that boat lines shall charge no higher rates than class A railroads.

SECRETARY KNOX

Special U. S. Ambassador to Funeral of Late Japanese Emperor.

SECRETARY KNOX

NATIONS JOIN IN OBSEQUIES

Funeral Services for the Late Emperor of Japan.

At Tokio, Japan, the funeral ceremonies for Emperor Mutsuhito, posthumously known as the "Emperor of the Era of Enlightment," began amid surroundings in which century old rites and costumes were mingled with modern military display.

Official representatives of all countries had come to Tokio to participate in the colemnites. Among them were several princes representing reigning houses. The list included Philander C. Knox, secretary of state of the United States, who was accompanied by Ransford E. Miller, chief of the far eastern section of the state department at Washington; Rear Admiral Alfred Reynolds, United States navy, and Brigadier General John J. Pershing, U. S. A.

Members of the regular foreign diplomatic body were present in uniforms.

CADILLAC—Ari Wilson, a resident of Lake City, county agent of Missaukee county, has been acquitted by a jury in his second trial on a charge of being unduly intimate with a thirteen-year-old girl. He was found guilty in his first trial and was sent to Jackson prison for thirteen years. The supreme court reversed the decision and ordered a new trial. On practically the same evidence Wilson was acquitted.

FEUD CLANS GATHERING

Boyces and Sneeds Assemble Following Murder.

Amarillo, Texas., Holds Two Crowds of Deadly Enemies and Trouble Is Expected.

The clans of the Boyces and those of the Sneeds are gathering at Amarillo, Texas, as the result of the killing of Al Boyce by John B. Sneed here Saturday afternoon. Al's three brothers, Lynn, Will and Henry Boyce, are here and they wired for a number of other relatives and friends to hasten to Amarillo. Henry Boyce is president of a bank at Dalhart.

Joe Sneed, John's brother, and J. H. Sneed, the assassin's uncle, both rich, also have arrived. J. T. Snyder, father of Mrs. Lena Sneed, with whom Al Boyce eloped and which event set in motion the series of tragedies, is expected to arrive today from Roswell, N. M. He is a millionaire cattleman and during Sneed's trial for the killing of Captain A. G. Boyce in Fort Worth, Snyder supported Sneed and declared his daughter insane. J. H. Bowman, Sneed's brother-in-law, of Plano, also will arrive today.

With a score of members of the feudal families here, city and county officers have established a strict surveillance to prevent any outbreak.

HARVESTER CASE IS UP

Government Is Seeking to Dissolve the Big Corporation.

At Chicago Monday the fight of the government to dissolve the International Harvester company was staged when the suit filed by the United States under the Sherman anti-trust law began before an examiner.

The government charges the International Harvester company controls at least 90 per cent of the trade in the United States in harvesters or grain binders, 75 per cent of the mowers and more than 50 per cent of the binder twine and that it has advanced prices to the "grave injury of the farmer and the general public." In the answer filed by the company it denied all charges of restraint of trade, monopoly and unfair business practices.

GEN. NOGI AND WIFE TAKE THEIR LIVES

Commit Hari-Kari That They May Follow Mikado.

Captor of Port Arthur Makes Away with Himself at Close of Emperor's Funeral in Tokyo, with Countess at Side.

At Tokyo, Japan, General Count Marasuke Nogi, supreme military councilor, and his wife, the Countess Nogi, committed suicide following the religious exercises in connection with the death of the emperor, Mutsuhito.

According to the meager information available, General Nogi and his wife died by hari-kari, the old Samurai form of suicide by the sword. Both were descendants of the old clans of two-sword men, and belonged to the old school of philosophy, in spite of their adoption of modern ways.

There is much speculation as to whether the act was merely one of personal devotion or whether the distinguished couple had been chosen to follow the spirit of the emperor as attendants.

Was Captor of Port Arthur.

General Count Nogi was a national hero in Japan. It was he who captured Port Arthur from the Russians in 1904 and assured the success of his country in the battle of Mukden. The count was born at Hagi, in the Province of Choshu, in 1849, and was the eldest son of Maretsugu Nogi, a Samurai of the Choshu clan.

During the Saigo rebellion Nogi fought bravely at the battles of Yamagauchi and Tawarazaka and was wounded, and after the rebellion was suppressed he was made a lieutenant colonel.

He commanded the first brigade of infantry in the China-Japanese war and captured Port Arthur in one day.

On the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese war in 1904 General Nogi was appointed commander of the third army. His forces took 203-Meter Hill after terrible slaughter, and also destroyed the Russian squadron in the port. General Nogi personally received General Stoessel's proposal to surrender Port Arthur.

The Countess Nogi was a daughter of Yuchi Sadayaki, a Samurai of the Kagoshima clan.

Hero of Battle of Mukden.

Nogi was the most prominent figure of the battle of Mukden, when in a maneuver he turned the right of the Russian army, gaining a signal advantage.

General Nogi was created a baron in 1895 and count in 1906.

Adachi Kinnosuke, a Japanese writer, in a sketch of General Nogi, says:

"General Nogi is the type of soldier upon which the ideals of the elder days of the Samurai would look down with pleasure. He is peculiar in his conceptions of the life of a soldier."

Another said of him:

"When at the front General Nogi makes even the devils cry, but in his home his commands are not even heeded by the horses or dogs."

TRAVERSE CITY—The following officers were elected at the recent business meeting of the Northern Michigan Association of Maccabees: President, Frank F. Smith; vice president, George E. Harvey; secretary, M. B. Holley; treasurer, W. H. Umler, all of Traverse City. Next year's meeting will be held in this city. The president was authorized to appoint a committee to draw up new by-laws which will allow for extension work in the future. The lodges will attempt to keep up to a mark of 200 new members per month for the next six months. The city is thronged with visitors from every city in the association. The street parade was pronounced by the grand officers to be the best in the history of the organization.

MAY TELL THEIR SIDE

Railroad Men to Explain Action in Recent Strike.

Nine Suspended G. T. Conductors Summoned to Montreal by Head of Road.

Port Huron, Mich., Sept. 14.—From a reliable source it has been learned by officials in this city that the nine Grand Trunk conductors who were recently suspended from their runs between Port Huron and Chicago and Detroit and Chicago have been notified to appear before President Chamberlain of the Grand Trunk system in the near future.

The conductors who were called into Detroit by Superintendent Cunningham and then suspended are Fred Topping, George B. Outwater, Martin B. Welch, John H. Leahy, Charles C. Rice and Martin Carey of this city, L. A. Hastings of Battle Creek and Harry Harris and Angus Campbell of Detroit.

It is said that at the time they were suspended, President Chamberlain was not aware of the action that had been taken. It is understood that the official's object in calling the men to Montreal is to give them an opportunity to state their side of the case. All of the men were identified with the recent strike of conductors and trainmen on the Grand Trunk, and it is claimed that their suspension is a result of being prominent in the strike.

SHOOTING STILL A MYSTERY

Michigan Guardsman at Jackson Prison Tries to Assume Blame.

Jackson, Mich., Sept. 18.—So many conflicting stories have been told concerning circumstances immediately preceding the fatal shooting of John Elsy, a church sexton, by a national guardsman near Jackson prison that it is considered probable that the local and state authorities will not attempt to fix the blame until after the inquest, which has been set for Wednesday.

Captain Frank Blackman of Company I, has declared that he believes shots he fired at Elsy caused the latter's death. He alleged that Elsy had attempted to get firearms from members of the militia guarding Jackson prison and after an argument attempted to assault a soldier. Blackman says he fired to protect the guardsman, intending to shoot low, but his hasty aim brought fatal results.

Elsy for some time had been employed as sexton for a Catholic church. The pastor declared that so far as he knew Elsy, the latter was quiet and anything but quarrelsome.

HOTEL FIRE IN DETROIT

Washington Baseball Players Assist in Getting Out Guests.

Detroit, Mich., Sept. 16.—Walter Johnson, Groome, Gandil, Milan, Laporte and other members of the Washington baseball club played a large part in helping to rescue several scores of men and women caught in the Cadillac hotel when fire swept the lower floor.

Smoke filled the stairways and corridors, making it almost impossible for the men and women to grope their way to the fire escapes, and the ball players, hastily aroused with the others, went to their assistance. Although the fire was confined to the lower floor, some of the women fainted on the upper floors and were carried down the fire escapes by the ball players.

ALMA—During a remarkably severe electrical storm the barn of C. E. Noles, southeast of Alma, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground, as was a granary beside it. Seventy-five tons of hay, six horses and a cow were burned in the barn and 2,000 bushels of oats in the granary. The loss totals about $6,000 with little insurance.

THREE-YEAR-OLD BOY STRUCK BY TRAIN

Narrow Escape of Little One on Vicksburg Sidetrack.

Lad Is Knocked Down Between Rails and Under Cars, but Is Not Seriously Hurt.

Battle Creek, Mich., Sept. 16.—The three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Dent of Vicksburg had a narrow escape from death under the wheels of a G. R. & I. switch engine there.

A crowd of youngsters was playing on the siding that runs to the Lee paper mills. The switch engine had finished its switching and was returning to the main track over a long winding track when the children were playing on the track. Little thinking they would remain there, the engineer did not slacken speed, but whistled for the children to get off the track and all did except the Dent child. Conductor Bennett, standing on one of the two cars which the engine was pushing, yelled for the lad to lie down, but the child didn't hear. The engineer applied the brakes but as the air wasn't coupled it was useless to try to stop the train, and it sped along until the car hit the child, knocking him down between the rails.

Conductor Bennett swooned as he gazed on what he supposed would prove a fatal accident. Persons who rushed to the spot soon saw that the child was not badly injured, being only bruised and scratched on the back of the head.

TRAIN KILLS THREE WOMEN

Muskegon (Mich.) Church Workers Carried 500 Feet to Death.

Muskegon, Mich., Sept. 17.—Three women collecting provisions for a church supper were killed when a train crashed into a rig in which they were riding. The victims were Mrs. Ole Reagler, Mrs. Gertrude Witt and Mrs. Adolph Tureck. Mrs. Reagler probably was instantly killed. The other women died in a hospital.

The accident occurred at a local crossing and the engine carried the victims and debris about 500 feet before it came to a stop.

EIGHT SAILORS DIE IN LAKE MICHIGAN

Terrible Tragedy at U. S. Naval Training School.

Foundering Boat Anchored and Youths Leap Overboard, but Are Beaten Back by Wind and Raging Water.

Eight boys at United States naval recruits at the United States naval training station at North Chicago, lost their lives in a Lake Michigan tragedy which in many respects has no parallel. They were able, all but one of them, to swim, and yet they were drowned within thirty feet of the shore.

Out of the twenty-nine men and boys who set out for a pleasure sail only twenty-one bodies have been recovered showing signs of life. Over these two pulmotors worked steadily for hours in the hope of reviving them. The boys who recovered after the use of the pulmotor number only four.

Petty Officer Stockman is believed to have been drowned while trying to save others.

Hero May Be Saved by Pulmotor.

Chief Gunner's Mate William Negus started for shore carrying a boy who could not swim. He lost his charge, dived, and did not reappear until two hours later, when his body was taken from the water 600 yards north of the scene of the tragedy. He was apparently dead, but under the pulmotor he showed signs of life after half an hour. It is believed that his life will be saved.

William Stanley, one of those saved, told a dramatic story of the tragedy.

"We left the station about a quarter to two in the afternoon," he said. "We were not ordered out, but were given permission to take the sail. The water was exceedingly rough, and most of the boys were so new to water experience that they became helplessly seasick after we had gone perhaps half a mile from the shore.

Boys Become Seasick.

"William Negus was in command. He saw that with half the boys seasick and helpless it would be impossible to handle the boat as it should be handled, so we put in toward shore. We had a big boat, about twenty-four feet long, with a mainsail and jib. We hauled down the sails to make things more snug and present less surface to the storm. Then we took to the oars, such of us as were able to use them.

"There was a lot of water in the boat, and more of it coming in all the time. We were in danger of being swamped at any moment. But Negus thought he could save the boat as well as all the people in it.

"When we were within about thirty feet of shore he dropped anchor. Then he went overboard to see how deep the water was. It was only about up to his nose—if he had been level. But the heavy waves hurled him in water four or five feet deep.

"He climbed back into the boat then. It was plain we would have to swim for it. Negus called out to ask if there was anybody aboard who could not swim. One boy said he couldn't.

"So Negus took that boy—I don't know who he was—on his back and started for shore, calling for the rest of us to follow. I was one of the last to quit the boat. I saw Negus swim a few strokes toward the shore and then he seemed to be in trouble. His arms went out crazily and he went down.

Horrible Struggle in Water.

"He disappeared only for a moment and then he came up and didn't have the boy with him any more. It looked as if a big wave had snatched the boy from his arms.

"Negus wouldn't go to shore without the lad. He dove into the water again—and I didn't see him any more.

"All around the boat the water was alive with boys trying to get ashore. It was a horrible struggle. They didn't seem to make any headway at all against the waves and the wind.

"Pretty soon I saw it wasn't any use to stick to the boat and I jumped as far toward shore as I could and then tried to swim. There was nothing doing. I couldn't get ahead. But finally I hit something and somebody dragged me out of the water."

VERMONT REPUBLICANS LOSE

Said to Lack 14 Legislative Votes of Electing Governor.

That the indications now point to the failure of the Vermont state Republicans, falling fourteen short of gaining a majority for their candidate for governor in the legislature, is the contention of Charles H. Thompson, the Progressive manager in the Green Mountain state, who has sent a telegram to the Massachusetts headquarters of the third party.

Mr. Thompson states that eleven counties complete give Fletcher, the Republican candidate, 72 votes in the legislature; Metzger, Progressive, 66, and Howe, Democrat, 45.

STOP SUNDAY BASEBALL

Ypsilanti People Will Ask Governor Osborn to Interfere.

Ypsilanti, Mich., Sept. 16.—A petition addressed to Governor Osborn is being circulated here in reference to Sunday baseball. The petition asks the governor to use his influence and support in suppressing Sunday baseball. Almost 900 signers have affixed their signatures to the petition.

Two arrests were made under an ordinance prohibiting Sunday amusements and in both cases the jury acquitted the defendants. Later another arrest was made under the same ordinance in reference to keeping open a theater on Sunday and a third acquittal was had by a jury under the same ordinance.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY, & Co., Toledo, Ohio,

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Every man has a lot of old debts due him that he can't collect, and knows he can't collect, and yet talks about them a great deal.

A really effective kidney and bladder medicine must first stop the progress of the disease and then cure the conditions that cause it Use Foley Kidney Pills for all kidney and bladder troubles and urinary irregularities They are safe and reliable. They help quickly and permanently. In the yellow package.

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

It is possible to make a great reputation with a little sense; a man with a little sense is really quite a genius.

$80,000,000.00 LOST ANNUALLY BY WAGE EARNERS

Dr. Sadler estimates that about $800,000,000.00 in wages is lost annually to the American people as a direct result of colds, Lost time means lost wages and doctoring is expensive. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly. It will stop the cough, and heal and sooth the sore and inflamed air passages. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

There are a thousand things the people ought to do, and although they admit it, they will never do them,

Uncle Ezra Says

"It don't take more'n a gill uv effort to get folks into a peck of trouble" and a little neglect of constipation, billousness, indigestion or other liver derangement will do the same. If ailing, take Dr. King's New Life Pills for quick results. Easy, safe, sure, and only 25 cents at C A. Wright & Son's.

A man should either be able to keep his temper, or be abe to whip the man he is quarreling with.

The Men Who Succeed

as heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success, to-day, demands health. To ail is to fail. It's utter folly for a man to endure a weak run-down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas. B. Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders, and deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well," Try them. Only 50 cents at C. A. Those riding in automobiles are not as happy and comfortable as those on foot think they are.

Mrs. J. N. Hill, Homer, Ga, has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years, and she says she always recommends it to her friends. "It never fails to cure our coughs and colds and prevents croup. We have five children and always give them Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for a cold, and they are all soon well. We would not be without it in our house." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

What We Never Forget

according to science, are the things associated with our early home life, such as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, that mother or grandmother used to cure our burns, boils, scalds, sores, skin eruptions, cuts, sprains or bruises. Forty years of cures prove its merit. Unrivaled for piles, corns or cold-sores. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Some people are so strong on talk that they try to pay their bills with it

T. L. Parks, Murryville, Ga, Route 1, is in his 73rd year, and was recently cured of a bad kidney and bladder trouble. He says himself: "I have suffered with my kidneys. My back ached and I was annoyed with bladder irregularities. I can truthfully say, one 50c bottle of Foley Kidney Pills cured me entirely." They contain no habit forming drugs.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR NEIGHBORING VILLAGES

The First Baptist Church in Adrian has began improvements by painting their roof and steeple further improvments will come later.

In Hudson recently a poor demented young man was the means of giving a most refreshing bath to a carload of porkers. As the freight train pulled into the station on the Lake Shore road, he gave orders to the crew to "uncouple the carload of hogs, and run it up to the water tank where they can have some water thrown over them." He represented himself as being an United States Officer and criticised them sharply telling them they should relieve the suffering of the animals without the order of the law.

Needless to say they obeyed and the hogs at least appreciated the shower bath. But you can imagine their feelings when they found out that their "boss" was a poor Maniac who was later arrested and cared for.

Saline High School has introduced a very pleasing feature, a series of stereoptican lectures, which will be given during September, October and November. The first lecture for September is "The Grandeur of the Rockies" not a bad idea for Tecumseh to consider.

MAN VERSUS NATURE.

Marvels That Are Wrought Through Synthetic Chemistry.

Nature, we may reflect, has a hard time in competition with the chemist. Her slow, laborious processes are one by one being superseded.

Her most delicate perfumes, which she dishes to us in drops, are made by the gallon in the laboratory. The infinite delicacy of her tints we stimulate from a material so unromantic as coal tar. We squeeze a cellulose product through a tiny hole, and we have the silk of the silk worm. We transform trees into paper and educate the world. We imitate the precious stones which Nature has produced by gigantic forces in upheaval, and the only difference, as was stated in our courts recently, is that the artificial product is more perfect than the real. Now the chemist takes starch, an unromantic material enough, and makes of it that rubber on which the wheels of the world go round.

In the course of his experiments man discovers a cheap method of making acetone, an essential of our modern high explosives. Somehow or other all man's experiments lead ultimately to the explosive, which again shows how we reverse processes, for, while Nature begins all her work with an explosion, man works up to the explosion as the highest expression of his conquest.—Westminster Gazette.

BEHEADING IN SIAM.

First the Victim Is Fed, Then Tired Into Giving the Signal.

An execution in Siam is an extraordinary business, according to a correspondent of the Chronique Medicale. The doomed man, awakened at dawn, is led in chains to the temple, where candles are lit around him. He is exhorted to think of nothing to disassociate his mind from mundane affairs and is given the best meal of his life, the menu being carefully chosen according to the social status of the criminal.

There are two executioners. One is hidden in some brushwood, while the other, dressed in vivid red, conducts the criminal to the place of sacrifice, bidding him be seated on banana leaves "in order to be entirely separated from earth."

The condemned man is then put into position, awaiting the ax. Earth is put in his ears. For two hours or more nothing happens. Siamese law demands that the criminal shall bow his head voluntarily to the ax. This he does finally from sheer exhaustion, and immediately headsman No. 2 rushes from his hiding place and does the rest. The executioners are then sprayed with holy water and otherwise purified from contact with the victim's soul.—Paris Cor. New York World.

FOR A BUSINESS TRAINING

The Business Institute, Detroit, Offers Unexcelled Facilities

To prove the necessity for a thorough business education for our young men and women needs no argument in these busy days. No better place in Michigan can be found in which to acquire a knowledge of business practice, book-keeping and stenography, than The Business Institute, which occupies an entire building at 163 to 169 Cass Avenue, Detroit, The location is central, and the system of teaching is up-to date in every particular. The school is the largest in the State. The opportunities in a manufacturing and commercial center like Detroit give preference to the Institute as the school to select. Detroit business firms testify to the efficiency of its students, having sent over 1,500 employment calls to the Institute during the past year. Visitors to the Institute will be cordially welcomed, and we advise all who can do so to treat themselves to an inspection of this model school. The Institute catalogue will be sent free to all interested, on request.

CARD OF THANKS.

For the many kindnesses and favors to us both during mother's illness and death I wish to thank every body, especially the members of the Presbyterian church, the Research Circle, the Monday Club, I appreciate it all more than words can express.

ENGLAND'S GUINEA HABIT.

They Have No Such Coin There, Yet Still They Use It.

Strangers in foreign countries always find some difficulty in getting used to the current coinage. In England they find themselves up against quite a number of problems, not the least of which is the guinea, and the difficulty is not lessened by the fact that the guinea is practically obsolete as a coin of the realm. The English physician's fee is always calculated as so many guineas, and the same thing holds good at a sale of pictures or whatnot at Christie's salesrooms.

The guinea is a gold coin current for 21 shillings sterling, or about $5, but it has not been coined since the issue of the sovereign in 1817.

The guinea habit has been defended by some subtle dealers on the ground that it obfuscates the "foreign visitors to British salesrooms." On the other hand, those astute cambists have been known to growl at a few thousand sterling added to the price of a valuable picture by the adhesion to the guinea style of bidding. The story runs that the guinea was so called from the pieces struck from the bullion captured by Sir Harry Holmes in 1666 from 160 Dutch sail in Schelling bay, the bullion being from Guinea. But Shakespeare has an earlier play on the word when he mentions "guinea hen" in "Othello" as regards the auction usage of the guinea. There can be little doubt that it is a survival of the times when the extra shilling was treated as a five per cent commission, payable by the buyer. Double commissions are, however, now obsolete.—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Few Hints to Housewives.

How to Dress a Chicken.—Use soft materials such as batiste or mull and arrange simply. If a spring chicken, white is the most suitable color.

How to String Beans.—Use a strong thread and sufficiently large needle. Do not fail to knot the thread before beginning the task.

How to Preserve Peaches.—Treat the same after marriage as before. This simple recipe has never been known to fail.—Harper's Weekly.

Books.

I would prefer to have one comfortable room well stocked with books to all you can give me in the way of decoration which the highest art can supply. There is no greater blessing that can be given to a family than a love of books.—John Bright.

Here's a Pointer.

If a man gets on his knees and implores a woman to marry him the chances are he will remain in that position for the rest of his life if she accepts.—Atlanta Journal.

Moved and supported that the request for a gas franchise be referred to the Village attorney for investigation and report at the next regular meeting of the council.

Motion carried.

The following resolution was offered:

Resolved, That the Common Council of the Village of Tecumseh does hereby require that a new sidewalk be constructed along that portion of the south line of Patterson street in this village which lies along and adjoining the north line of that parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, Lenawee County and State of Michigan, and described as follows:

Bounded north by Patterson street, east by Evans street, south by Rogers lot, west by alley.

Said walk to be 4 feet in width, on the established grade, of Portland cement, sand and gravel.

The trench shall be excavated to a depth of 10 inches at least below the established grade except for driveways and street crossings when the depth shall be at least 12 inches below the established grade.

The foundation shall consist of clean cinders or gravel entirely free from clay, thoroughly rammed to a thickness of at least of 6 inches, except for driveways and street crossings which shall be at least 8 inches.

On the foundation shall be laid a concrete filling, thoroughly rammed to a thickness of 3 inches.

The concrete shall consist of not less than one part cement to six parts of clean, sharp sand or gravel

On the concrete filling shall be laid a finishing layer one inch thick, consisting of one part cement and two parts of very clean, sharp sand. The said finishing layer shall in all cases be finished with a granular surface with a wooden float

To secure a true line for the edges of the walk 2x4 stripes shall be solidly staked down parallel to grade and on the true line of the walk, these strips to be removed when the walk is finished for use.

The concrete filling shall be tamped throughly till the water comes to the surface, then the finishing layer shall be immediately spread on in thin coats thoroughly rammed into the concrete, each coat being trowled until the water appears on the surface, the top surface being only trowled sufficiently to leave it smooth. The foundation shall be thoroughly wet while being rammed,

The joints for the blocks shall be made in the concrete, and then in the finishing layer directly above those in concrete.

Only Portland cement shall be used in the construction of walks and shall be in every respect the equal of the best grades of German Portland cement. The concrete filling shall be made from the same cement as the finishing layer.

And the owners and occupants of said lots and premises are hereby required to do the necessary grading therefor and to construct said sidewalk according to the provisions of this resolution, under the supervision of the street commissioner, said walk to be completed within 10 days from personal service, upon the owner or occupant of said described land, of a copy of this resolution, and in case of any default in the construction and completion of said walk, as herein directed, the street commissioner is hereby ordered to have said walk constructed, and payment therefor shall be required of the ower of said above described land, and the expense thereof assessed and levied upon said land in the same manner as other taxes.

Moved and supported that the resolution be accepted and adopted,

Ayes; Service, Elliott, Daisher, Gillespie. Nayes none

Motion carried.

On motion council then adjourned.

Herbert S. Temple,
Village Clerk.

THAT KITCHEN SHOWER.

Not to be out done by the girls, Earl Rector invited in a party of young folks Wednesday evening to meet Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dickenson. Music and mirth prevailed from their coming until their going and also went with them homeward, Refreshments were served during the evening and in lieu of a better place, Fred was served on the woodbox, after this part of the program was carried out, Fred was requested to open the box and the many articles of kitchen furnishings he found, convinced him that a shower was indoors instead of out as had been the case through the day.

Each one present thinks Earl a fine entertainer and that showers of this kind are enteresting as well as refreshing.

Hercules Bed Springs

FOR REAL, RESTFUL REST

The Spring That Never Sags.

The coil spring used are of the finest oil tempered steel—each coil is rivited at the base and connected at the top by six tiew ires. As a result, Hercules Springs are not noisy, and cannot get noisy.

The frame construction of Hercules Springs is extremely strong, made of steel angles, instead of the usual iron bands so easly buckled. Either one or two sections, as desired.

Hercules hangers are ajustable to different widths, and any Hercules Bed Springs can be used on either wood or metal bed steads with equal satisfaction.

Sleep on the Hercules Springs for 30 nights.

If you don't agree with us that it is the best spring you ever slept on, we will refund your money,

Hercules Bed Springs are guaranteed for all time. The guarantee tag is attached to every spring.

BARGAIN DAY.

Bargain Day dawned upon us cold but clear, and every one was hoping that it might be pleasant throughout the day, but just at noon a high wind with a frosty breath, was followed by a cold disagreeable rain that was not at all encouraging.

But despite all this, the merchants report a fine trade in almost every department, and have decided that a genuine bargain day will be a desirable feature for future consideration. The whole program was not carried out owing to delays in the arrival of material our White Way was almost as dark as Erubus, consequently the band did not play. The dance in the evening also was thinly attended, but those who were there had a most enjoyable time.

J. C. BARNEY.

J. C. Barney of Des Moines Ia died in Buffalo N. Y. Thursday Sept. 19th, his remains will arrive in Tecumseh today. Mr. Barney will be remembered by many as the brother-in-law of Merritt and Myron Conklin and Mrs. Frank Wellinger.

He has been in poor health for some time, but his death was quite unexpected. Mrs, Barney is quite ill at her home in Des Moines and daughter, Maude is in the hospital having undergone an operation recently.

The time for the funeral services has not been settled owing to the uncertainty of the arrival of the body and also of the friends from Iowa.

CERTAIN RESULTS

Many a Tecumseh Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Tecumseh. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times for the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store and my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it."

(Statement given December 7, 1908.)

A Willing Re Endorsement.

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed on August 29, 1911, he said: I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented. You may continue to use my name as a reference."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Antoine Deloaia, Postmaster at Garden, Mich., knows the exact facts when he speaks of the curative value of Foley Kidney Pills. He says: "From my own experience I recommend Foley Kidney Pills, as a great remedy for kidney trouble. My father was cured of kidney disease and a good many of my neighbors were cured by Foley Kidney Pills."

For sale by all Druggists of Tecumseh.

Many Driven From Home

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery and and cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles find quick relief and health returns. Its help in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping-cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

U. A. Smith, Bridgeton, Ind., had kidney trouble for years, and was so crippled with rheumatism he could not dress without help. MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

LANSING—Four of Michigan's state departments, the executive, attorney general's, board of health and the fish, fire and game warden's, are being bombarded with appeals from people residing on the Raisin river to stop the wholesale slaughter of fish in the river. It is the contention that the fish are being killed by the refuse which the Continental Sugar company of Blissfield is dumping into the river. Complaints came from Dundee and Deerfield principally. The reports received say that the fish are being killed by the wagon load and that they dot the surface of the water so extensively that it is a menace to health.

HILLSDALE—About four or five weeks ago Paul Ward and wife adopted the two-year-old son of Mrs. Cyrus Dickinson because she said she was going to get a divorce from her husband and wanted the child to have a good home. Later the Dickinsons moved to Elkhart. The stepfather came for a visit with the child and Ward allowed him to remain all night. In the morning he asked permission to take the child downtown to get some candy. He was allowed to do so but instead left on a train with the child. He was caught when the train reached Elkhart.

LANSING—Making a strong claim that the Chicago and Northwestern and the Soo line railroads were seeking to eliminate competition in the mining fields by refusing them permission to run across their tracks. representatives of the Gogebic and Iron County railroad appeared before the state railroad commission and asked it to force the companies to give the necessary permission The Gogebic and Iron lines are situated south of the other lines and they wish to run spurs across to the mines, north of the three lines.

SAULT STE. MARIE—Henry Hendrickson, who is seven years old, lies in the hospital, shot through the stomach, and is not expected to recover. He and Cecil Osterman, twelve years old, were playing in a vacant lot when young Osterman found an old 22-caliber rifle. Securing a cartridge, the Osterman boy attempted to force it into the rusty gun with a stone. The cartridge exploded and young Hendrickson, standing in front of the rifle, received the bullet in the stomach.

EVART — Lee Piere, a youth seventeen years of age, was drowned in the Muskegon river. He and three companions were in the river bathing and became nearly exhausted fighting the currents. Young Piere called for help and Voller, one of his companions, went to his aid. After a heroic effort Voller got the drowning man within ten feet of shore when his own strength gave out. The others managed to save Voller but Piere was lost.

LANSING—According to the views of Commissioners Mershon and White, the state tax commission is little perturbed by the action of the Kalamazoo citizens in appointing a committee to fight the proposed increase in their assessments. They took the action, it is said, at a meeting and threaten to use legal proceedings if possible. Their action follows a mass meeting which they held to protest against the increase.

ELECTIONEERING WON BRIDE

Former Kalamazoo Man Will Wed Girl He Worked to Elect.

Kalamazoo, Mich., Sept. 16.—His campaign to elect Miss Emily Carder president of the graduating class of Kalamazoo college in 1910 has resulted in Floyd C. Wilcox, a former Kalamazoo youth, winning Miss Carder as a bride. The announcement is made that the couple will be married this week, and after spending a year in New York city, where Wilcox is attending school, they will go to China as missionaries.

Miss Carder is a popular Kalamazoo girl and the announcement of her plan to accompany Mr. Wilcox came as a great surprise to her friends.

Are the Fly and Mosquito Dangerous?

The fly, with spongy feet, collects the invisible germs of diseases, spreads them over our food and poisons us with typhoid and cholera. The mosquito with its bite injects into our veins malaria and yellow fever. The bacteria of consumption, or grip, are everywhere present for us to breathe into our lungs. The blood which flows through our veins and arteries is our protection. It should contain healthy red and white blood corpuscles—capable of warding off these disease germs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood medicine and alterative made entirely without alcohol, a pure glyceric extract of bloodroot, golden seal, Oregon grape root, queen's root, mandrake and stone root, which has enjoyed a good reputation for over forty years. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

M. MAGUIRE, ESQ.

"About forty years ago while in Newark, New Jersey, I had chills and fever," writes MR. MICHAEL MAGUIRE, of National Military Home, Kans. "I went to Kansas City and in the spring of 1871 the chills and fever returned. Doctors and everything I tried failed to do me good. Finally I saw Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery advertised. I took one bottle of it and the chills vanished. In about a year afterward I felt them coming back so I got another bottle and have never had any symptoms of fever or ague since. That is all of twenty years ago, for I had the chills about twelve years before I started to take 'Golden Medical Discovery.'"

TRINIDAD'S CURIOUS LAKE.

Its Mass of Asphalt With Its Islands and Its Eddies.

The asphalt lake at Trinidad occupies a depression of about 114 acres and is probably the center of an extinct volcano. It is a lake in most senses of the word, for there are well defined shores and islands scattered through it at intervals, and the surface is in constant motion. There are also movements which may be ascribed to currents and eddies. The center of the lake is about a foot higher than the edges, this relation being maintained, although the lake as a whole has been lowered by the constant removal of material from it.

The depth of the deposit is not accurately known, but the lake fills up quickly when the surface is removed. The surface is not level, but is composed of irregular tumescent masses of various sizes. As the spaces between are always full of water, these masses are prevented from coalescing. The softer part of the lake constantly evolves gas, which consists largely of carbon dioxide and sulphureted hydrogen, and the pitch, which is honeycombed with gas cavities, continues to exhibit this action for some time after its removal from the lake.

The asphalt from Trinidad in its fresh state can be picked up and molded without soiling the hands. The substance is pulled apart on the surface with picks, and the pieces are carted away to the ships. In the bay of Cardenas, Cuba, asphalt is drawn up from the bed of the sea through eight or nine feet of water.—Harper's Weekly.

RIDDLES OF THE UNIVERSE.

A Scientist Says Science Really Knows Very Little.

I have been asked to define the word "energy." I cannot. Suppose that I should be asked. "What is the cause of light moving with the incessant specific speed of 186,383 miles during each successive second of time?" I would be utterly unable to reply. First, I cannot think of the cause of this unthinkable velocity. How answer? The fact is, science does not know what anything really is.

Electrons are the vanishing points. They are on the limit of knowledge, of even hope, of thought. All are agreed that they are electricity, but that does not help in the solution of any riddle of the universe.

It does not seem possible that science will come to an end in any attempt at explaining. Some new discovery surpassing all others may yet be made. Really, such a discovery must be made or science will come to an impenetrable wall, for we cannot at present think of mind, life or an electron. How progress or advance in search of anything if we are unable to think of it? This is a gloomy outlook, but just now it appears to be hopelessly impossible to discover any fact as to what mind, life and electricity are.

I have printed during thirty years that the human mind is illimitable in its powers, but I may be obliged to finally admit that it cannot find what itself is—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

An Artist's Feat.

One of the most remarkable and most artistic of twenty-four hours' records stands to the credit of Sir Edwin Landseer, who had promised a picture for the spring exhibition of the Royal British institution in 1845. On the day before the opening he was found standing in front of an untouched canvas. "I shall send that to the institution tonight, a finished picture," he declared to the astonished messenger who had been sent by the hanging committee to see if the promised picture was ready, "and have consequently given orders not to be disturbed." True to his word, Landseer put the finishing touch to his canvas and dispatched it to Pall Mall that very evening, and as "The Cavalier's Pets" it was one of the greatest successes of the exhibition.

Antiquity of Gloves.

How early did mankind think of the convenience of the fingerless glove? Little was said of gloves in ancient times, but in most cases it is obvious that they had fingers. Those worn by the secretary of the younger Pliny, used when he visited Vesuvius, so that he might keep on jotting down notes in spite of the cold, must have been fingered, no less than those of the glutton in Anthenaeus, who wore gloves at table so that he might handle the meat while hot and get in advance of his bare handed fellow diners.

Not Right at All.

"Have you anything to say before sentence is pronounced against you?" asked the judge.

"The only thing I'm objecting to," answered the convicted burglar, "is bein' identified by a man that kept his head under the bedclothes the whole time. That's not right at all."

The Schoolmaster

By Bryant C. Rogers

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

There had been talk for a year or more among the residents of Laurel Cove, high up on the Cumberland range, that a school for their children ought to be opened, with a "reg'lar schoolmaster" at the head, and the thing was an accomplished fact at last. An old log barn had been remodeled, the schoolmaster had arrived, and Laurel Cove was congratulating itself on the boom.

"I don't reckon this yere Cove will ever be as big as Raleigh or Nashville," observed Uncle Jim Henderson, the leading man of the hamlet, "but what I'm sayin' is that we've made a right smart beginning to see the dirt fly."

The schoolmaster was a bachelor of thirty. He had been picked up cheap. He had tried preaching, peddling and two or three other occupations and made a failure of each. One to look at him would know that he was shiftless and had no ambition, but Laurel Cove wasn't expecting any great shakes of a schoolmaster—not for awhile anyhow. The name of the pedagogue was Jed Baker, and the school committee had arranged that he should board with the Widow Carson. That's where the committee made a mistake that had serious results. In the first place, the widow already had another boarder in the person of young Tom Beardsly, who got out ties for the railroad and intended to marry her. In the next, there was another widow in the Cove—a Mrs. Martin, who at once became jealous of the other and was determined to raise a row.

Hardly had the schoolmaster opened his "show" and began teaching A, B, C when there was a conspiracy on foot. Tom Beardsley saw a possible rival in him and determined that his school should be a failure.

Mrs. Martin felt that she had been slighted, and she went to planning how she could get him to her own cabin. Mrs. Carson admitted that the schoolmaster was shacklety, but as he was "eddecated" she felt that she could marry him and aid him to make a career.

The school ran along for a couple of months and everybody was pleased. Aside from teaching his pupils that twice five is ten, and that "d-o-g" spells dog, Jed made the announcement that the world was round and that there was more water than land on this globe. Also, that the Chinese ate rats, and that England was entirely surrounded by water. Uncle Jim Henderson was ready to admit about the "d-o-g," but he took exception to the land and water question and privately advised the schoolmaster to go a little slow.

"I hain't sayin' that you hain't right about it, mind you," he remarked, "but you see we have had so mighty little to do with land and water, and such a heap to do with coonskins around yere, that it's gwine to take time. My son Bill was sayin' that you told the scholars the other day it was ninety-three million miles to the sun."

"That's what it is," replied Jed.

"Who measured it?"

"It has been measured by the astronomers."

"And who be them?"

"Men who study the sun, moon and stars."

"What did they measure with?"

"Instruments, Uncle Jim."

"Better let it drap, Jed," said the old man with a shake of his head. "It may be ninety-three million miles to the sun, but you can't find anybody around these diggins who'll believe it's over half a mile and you don't want to git up and be fussin' about it."

Two landlookers got into trouble at the Cove and there was shooting. Among the witnesses were the schoolmaster and both widows, and one day they had to appear at a town in the lowlands to give testimony. Previous to this the Widow Martin had had two or three talks with Tom Beardsly, the tie contractor, and had sowed the seeds of jealousy in his mind. He had also seen with his own eyes that his landlady was more or less struck on the schoolmaster. The latter had on two or three occasions spoken highly of the Widow Martin, and this had huffed the Widow Carson. There was rancor in three human hearts and something was to follow.

The witnesses were absent from their homes for two days, and they had scarcely returned when a band of revenue men came up on the mountain and raided a still that had been in operation over two years. While the officials walked directly to the still, proving that they must have had information in advance, the alarm had been given and they made no arrests. The capture and destruction of the still was sufficient, however, to set Laurel Cove ablaze. Some one had blabbed. There was a traitor in the camp.

It was Uncle Jim Henderson who figured it out that some information must have fallen from one of the three witnesses who went down to court. They were examined and each indignantly denied it. It was then that Tom Beardsly came forward and told of having seen the schoolmaster in secret conversation with a man in a livery stable. Jed did not deny the conversation. He had been asked by a man from the North who was looking up coal lands to investigate certain lands as far as he could and report. He had the man's address, but as it was in his own handwriting it condemned rather than cleared him. It couldn't be proved that he was guilty, but it was felt by all that he had at least been indiscreet, and it was determined to administer a proper punishment and send him from the Cove.

Had the proofs been sufficient Jed Baker would have been put to death. As it was, the punishment was to be a whipping and banishment. He had been sized up for a man without "sand." It was believed that he would cringe and weep like a woman. They looked to see him go white and fall on his knees and beg for mercy even as the punishment was announced. He had astonished the Cove by his calm demeanor during the examination. He astonished it again by saying:

"You can whip me and you can drive me out, but you cannot make an informer of me. The charge is false."

"Who could it have been if not you?" was asked.

Jed shook his head and stared at the blank wall and made no answer. At 8 o'clock that evening he was tied to a tree and whipped and cast loose and told to disappear before sunrise. There were those who felt sorry for him, but all felt that the punishment was due.

After being cast loose he sat down on a log for an hour with his head in his hands. While he was sitting there the widow Carson was going about in her cabin with tears in her eyes. Tom Beardsly came in to tell her of the whipping, and she detected the exultation in his tones. Then she instantly remembered a thing or two. He had been in town during the two days she was. She had noticed him in company with a man she believed to be an official of some sort. In passing the hotel she had caught a fleeting glimpse of him as he dodged out of sight. Her woman's intuition helped her to a conclusion in a moment, and wheeling on the young man, she exclaimed:

"Tom Beardsly, you did it—you did it!"

"You must be crazy," he replied.

"You did it, and I know you did. What did ye have agin him? How has he ever harmed you?"

"Don't talk nonsense, widder. I'm tellin' you here and now that I've been thinkin' a heap of you for a right smart while back, and—"

"Tom Beardsly, who give the still away?"

"Thinkin' a heap of you, widder, and right now I'm askin' you to be my wife. You know how I'm fixed, and —"

The women of the Cumberland shoot as well as the men. They do not hunt bears and wildcats, but they kill squirrels and game birds. The widow's shotgun stood in a corner of the room. She walked over and lifted it up and wheeled on Tom to say:

"Not another word from you! Out you go! You was jealous and you did it!"

He went without a word. Ten minutes later she was kneeling beside the man who had been whipped and saying:

"Oh, Jed, but you never gave the still away!"

"No," he whispered.

"It was Tom."

"Mebbe."

"And you knowed it all the time."

"Mebbe."

"But why didn't you say so? Why did you take the whippin'?"

"Kase—kase I thought you loved him and you two was gwine to marry!"

Then another woman knelt down and, with tears running down her cheeks, she said:

"Jed, I didn't hear that they was gwine to whip you 'till it was all over. If I had heard I would have told the men that I give the still away. I would have lied to save you. I'm axin' your pardon, Jed. I'm sayin' that I am the sorriest woman on all this yere mounting."

Jed put a hand on the shoulder of each woman and rose up with painful effort. He realized that both loved him. One knew the truth—the other would have lied for him.

"Goodby," he said, as he moved off into the dark woods.

He had been whipped in public. He had been disgraced forever in Laurel Cove. And on the door of the humble schoolhouse next morning Uncle Jim Henderson affixed a padlock and then wrote in quaint characters in chalk:

"This skule is out."

Out of Place.

Joseph Pennell, the distinguished etcher and equally distinguished biographer of Whistler, was asked, at a reception at the Penn club in Philadelphia, why he and his brilliant wife did not go out in society more.

The question Mr. Pennell answered with an anecdote.

"A famous author," he said, "attended a dinner party at a very smart house in Grosvenor square. Through all the chatter and champagne drinking and laughter of this dinner party the author sat silent, ill at ease, a kind of sheepish and embarrassed grin spoiling the wonted dignity of his countenance.

"'I expected him to be so very amusing,' a fashionable beauty complained to the hostess afterwards, 'but he never opened his mouth. What on earth was the matter with him?'

"'Well, you see,' the hostess answered, 'he can only talk sense!'"

What Jane Said.

"Did you hear the satirical reply Jane Sharp made to Tommy Gilder?"

"No, what was it?"

"He said, 'It wouldn't be my money you would marry me for, would it?'"

"And what did Jane say?"

"She said: 'What awful conceit!'"

THE STEARNS & FOSTER MATTRESS

Facts you should know about a mattress before you buy one

Mattresses look very much alike, but there is the greatest difference between them.

The softness, elasticity and durability of cotton-felt mattresses depend on the length and quality of the fibres of the cotton used and the way they are laid.

Many mattresses sold as the best cotton-felts, are made from short-fibre cotton that has no life at all.

It is the quality of the cotton, the long, strong fibres, and the special "web-process" of laying them, that give Stearns & Foster Mattresses their perfect comfort and wonderful life—the reason why there are more sold than any other made.

They never lump; never need remaking. They are made in four grades—a mattress to suit every purse.

Come in. Let us show them to you; let us unlace this opening at the end of the mattress,—show you exactly what is inside. We'll be glad to do it, whether you are ready to buy or not.

This mattress is just another example of the excellence of our stock throughout. New goods are arriving daily.

REPORT CONFIRMS HIGH FOOD PRICE

Commissioner of Labor Makes Exhaustive Inquiry.

Everything Else In List of Articles Investigated Has Gone Up in Price in Last Year—Sugar Varies Least.

Investigation into high cost of living for ten years past, conducted by the commissioner of labor, which was extended into thirty-two states and covered fifteen of the principal food products and coal has just been completed.

The investigation was made in industrial centers and the commissioner believes covers two-thirds of the articles that enter in workingmen's necessities. The report shows that fourteen of the fifteen food articles covered by the article were quoted at higher prices on June 15th, 1912, than they were a year before, while ten of the articles had advanced in the last ten years more than 50 per cent over the average retail prices for the period 1890-1899.

Sugar Most Stable Product.

During the last decade prices of potatoes changed most and sugar the least. Their advances were 11.9 and 8.5 per cent respectively. During the last year becon, which decreased just one-tenth of one per cent, was the only one of the fifteen principal articles of food that showed a decline in price, while nine of the fifteen advanced more than 10 per cent, varying from 2.4 per cent for milk to 18.6 per cent for round steak. Of the fifteen only eggs, butter, milk and sugar were lower, but the price of three of these four is normally lower during summers than during winters.

Specimens of the statements of merchants follow:

New York—Meats in general are so high that if prices continue much longer will be obliged to close up business. Have already lost about $200 since advance in prices.

Chicago—Jobbing price on flour has advanced 80 cents per barrel, and unless there is a decline in the near future retail prices will advance.

Would Suspend Business.

Remarks of merchants accompanying the price reports for May 15 told the same story. These are examples:

Boston—Probably this is the lsat month we will be in the provision business. The high prices of meats are driving us out. We have been in business fifteen years, but must get out before we are put out."

Indianapolis—"Owing to the high prices of feed the milk supply this months is the lowest for May on record. Meat prices have made a sharp advance owing to the scarcity in the medium grades of meat, and we have been compelled to handle higher-priced meats."

Milwaukee—"We were compelled to raise our price of beef because of the raise in the wholesale price."

ROADS EARN $2,873,279,987

Slason Thompson Reports 1912 Gross Highest Ever Attained.

Earnings of railroads in the U. S. in the fiscal year ended June 30 are figured by Slason Thompson of the bureau of railway news and statistics at $2,873,279,987. This is the highest gross ever attained, and shows a 1.9 per cent gain over last year.

At the same time the operating ratio rose from 68.63 to 69.26 per cent, with the result that net was below that of 1911. On the estimated value of the roads, with 248,000 operated mileage, at $20,000,000,000, this net figures 3.81 per cent earned. Had maintenance charges been up to the amount that colud have been expected under normal advance net would have shrunk $100,000,000 further.

LAKE CURRENTS ARE CHANGED

Cold Water Along the Shore Affects the Growing of Michigan Fruit—Exhaustive Investigation to Be Made.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 23.—Investigation has been started by State Land Commissioner Huntley Russell, which is expected to result in the state of Michigan bringing suit in the United States courts to enjoin any further operations in connection with the deepening or enlarging of the Chicago drainage canal.

The commissioner is getting from the local United States engineers' office facts pertaining to lake levels and the change in currents which, it is said, have been brought about by the drainage canal.

Within the next few days he will make an exhaustive investigation to determine the effect the enlarging of the canal will have upon the fruit belt in western Michigan.

The step proposed by the state interests fruit growers from St. Joseph to the tip of the lower peninsula.

They claim that before the construction of the canal the warm currents in Lake Michigan were to the northward along the eastern coast, and that after the canal's completion a cold current was brought down the same coast from Lake Superior, materially affecting fruit growth and removing much of the protection of winter blasts.

YOUNG MAN'S BODY FOUND

No Marks of Violence and Nothing to Establish Identity.

Marshall, Mich., Sept. 24.—A young man, apparently about 28 years old, was found dead in the Lake Shore depot in Homer. There had been no one in the depot for some time and when the ticket agent came in he found the man's body lying upon the floor. There were no marks of violence or signs of a struggle. Nothing was found to give a clue to the man's identity.

He wore a new suit of dark blue clothes, new shoes, new derby and apparently new linen. A bottle of sugar coated pills was found in his vest pocket, but an analysis showed that they were a mild laxative. The man had light hair and appeared to be of rugged build.

GALLOWS BOY RELEASED

Pleads Guilty of Forgery and Is Freed on Probation.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 23.—Pleading guilty to forgery, Otto Gallow was released on two years' probation by Judge Collins. The probation orders that he refund the $5 obtained when he forged a check on his employer, George McIntosh. While the case was in police court it was discovered that a forged check had been passed on George Karpus, of Columbus avenue.

Gallows denied that charge, and later Mr. Karpus informed Judge Collins and Assistant Prosecutor McCormick that he did not think Gallow was guilty, although he had originally identified him as the person for whom he had cashed the check.

G. O. P. TICKET IN MICHIGAN

Candidates Chosen at the Detroit Convention.

MARTINDALE RENOMINATED

Contests for Other Places on the Ticket—Convention Noted for Spirited Oratory by Numerous Speakers.

Detroit, Sept. 24.—To complete the State ticket, in addition to the nominations for governor and lieutenant governor decided at the August primaries, the State Republican convention assembled here today with a full attendance of delegates and the galleries well filled with spectators.

The convention was called to order by Alex. J. Groesbeck, chairman of the Republican state central committee, who in a short and spirited speech, introduced Patrick H. Kelley, of Lansing, candidate for congressman-at-large, as temporary chairman. Mr. Kelley followed with a speech of about an hour's duration that was frequently and enthusiastically applauded.

The reports from district caucuses were submitted and recess taken until 2 p. m.

Upon reassembling, Amos S. Musselman was introduced as the Republican nominee for governor. He was given a hearty ovation, and spoke briefly, thanking the party for the nomination conferred upon him. He also declared that he desired to have his position fully known and understood, and that he will vote for President Taft and the entire Republican ticket.

Lieutenant-Governor Ross was introduced and spoke briefly, also expressing his gratitude for renomination.

Warren G. Harding, former lieutenant-governor of Ohio, was introduced and his speech added to the enthusiasm of the convention.

The temporary organization was made permanent and nominations proceeded.

For secretary of state, Frederick C. Martindale was renominated, receiving 1,043 votes to 422 votes for Coleman C. Vaughan, of St. Johns. Martindale's nomination was made unanimous.

For state treasurer, John W. Haarer, of Ann Arbor, present deputy state treasurer, Albert C. Kingman, of Battle Creek, and John M. Perry, of Osceola county, were presented. Haarer was nominated on the first ballot. The vote was: Haarer, 743; Kingman, 432; Perry, 292.

For auditor-general, after the roll call showed he was far in the lead, O. B. Fuller was renominated over Dr. Arthur W. Scidmore, of Three Rivers.

For attorney-general, Grant Fellows, of Hudson, was nominated without opposition.

For commissioner of land office, A. C. Carton, of Iosco, was named by acclamation.

For supreme justice, short term, Judge Joseph H. Steere was nominated without opposition.

For supreme justice, full term, Frans Kuhn, former attorney-general, now serving as supreme justice by appointment, was unanimously nominated without opposition.

The platform emphatically endorsed the administration of President Taft.

Alex. J. Groesbeck was unanimously elected chairman of the state central committee.

MABRAY AID IS GUILTY

Council Bluffs Man Admits He Was Party to Fraud.

At Council Bluffs, Iowa, H. K. Robine, formerly a barber of this city, pleaded guilty in the federal court to having been a party to swindling operations aggregating $10,600, in which J. C. Mabray and his associates were principals. Judge Smith withheld sentence

Robine admitted having solicited Ralph Mattingly of Nashville, Tenn.; B. Nelson Pratt, Toledo, O., and E. Z. Alsbaugh, Terre Haute, whose losses respectively were $3,000, $4,000 and $1,600 all on fake wrestling matches.

D. C. Moore, alleged to be a partner of Mabray and one of the "millionaires," was brought to trial after a two years' fight against extradition from California. Moore took his case to the United States supreme court, the final judgment of which forced him to stand trial.

Moore's trial will be the last of the alleged ringleaders of the Mabray swindlers, whose peculations aggregate $2,000,000.

INDICT N. C. DOUGHERTY

Former Head of Peoria Schools Held on Forgery Charge.

Grand Jury Finds True Bills for Theft of Funds From the Educational System.

Chicago, Sept. 25. — Newton C Dougherty, former superintendent of schools at Peoria, who served six years in the penitentiary at Joliet was arrested in the offices of his attorneys, Ullman, Hoag and Davidson who then secured a writ of habeas corpus returnable Oct. 7. Bail was set at $5,000.

Peoria, Ill., Sept. 25.—Fifteen indictments against Newton C. Dougherty, former head ofthe schools of Peoria, were returned by the grand jury which has been in session three weeks.

The true bills charge forgery.

The embezzlement charge, which it was said the evidence found warranted, has become outlawed. Judge Worthington fixed the bond at $800 for each, or a total of $12,000.

A young woman's dream led to an investigation that resulted in the discovery of a serious flaw in the Dougherty indictments.

Miss Lillian Adams, private secretaryto State's Attorney Schools, was the young woman who had the dream. For several days she has been directing a corps of assistants in the compilation of the blank indictments and she dreamed that the indictments were faulty.

She remembers nothing about the dream except that. In the morning when she entered her office in the courthouse, she took up the indictments and began to read them. She soon found the error.

On a great many of the true bills to be voted against the former school man the final charge had been omitted, the words "against the form of law prescribed, etc.," having been overlooked in the great rush of the last week.

She at once informed the state's attorney.

BAY CITY — Mrs. Helen Coman, who is owner of the Wolverton house, announced that a Cleveland wholesale grocery firm had secured an option on the building and that the Michigan Central railroad is to be extended by the property. The Wolverton has been used in recent years as a cheap lodging house It was the first hotel built in this section of Michigan.

GRAND RAPIDS — William Culpher, in attempting to become peacemaker during a quarrel between Forrest Hampton and his sweetheart Miss Freddie Walters, of Detroit, both negroes, was slashed across the abdomen by Hampton who used a razor. His condition is critical. Hampton was arrested, charged with attempting murder.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sonud or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces,

We will give One Hundred Dollars or any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY, & Co., Toledo, Ohio,

Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Every man has a lot of old debts due him that he can't collect, and knows he can't collect, and yet talks about them a great deal.

A really effective kidney and bladder medicine must first stop the progress of the disease and then cure the conditions that cause it Use Foley Kidney Pills for all kidney and baladder troubles and urinary irregularities They are safe and reliable. They help quickly and permanently. In the yellow package.

For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

It is possible to make a great reputation with a little sense; a man with a little sense is really quite a genius.

$30,000,000.00 LOST ANNUALLY BY WAGE EARNERS

Dr. Sadler estimates that about $800,000,000.00 in wages is lost annually to the American people as a direct result of colds, Lost time means lost wages and doctoring is expensive. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly. It will stop the cough, and heal and sooth the sore and inflamed air passages. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

There are a thousand things the people ought to do, and although they admit it, they will never do them,

Uncle Ezra Says

"It don't take more'n a gill uv effort to get folks into a peck of trouble' and a little neglect of constipation, biliousness, indigestion or other liver derangement will do the same. If ailing, take Dr. King's New Life Pills for quick results, Easy, safe, sure, and only 25 cents at C A. Wright & Son's.

A man should either be able to keep his temper, or be abe to whip the man he is quarreling with.

The Men Who Succeed

as heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success, to-day, demands health. To ail is to fail. It's utter folly for a man to endure a weak run-down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas, B. Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders, and deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well," Try them. Only 50 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Those riding in automobiles are not as happy and comfortable as those on foot think they are.

Mrs. J. N. Hill, Homer, Ga., has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years, and she says she always reccommends it to her friends. "It never fails to cure our coughs and colds and prevents croup. We have five children and always give them Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for a cold, and they ore all soon well. We would not be without it in our house." For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

What We Never Forget

according to science, are the things associated with our early home life, such as Bucklen's Arnica Salve, that mother or grandmother used to cure our burns, boils, scalds, sores, skin eruptions, cuts, sprains or bruises. Forty years of cures prove its merit. Unrivaled for piles, corns or cold-sores. Only 25 cents at C. A. Wright & Son's.

Some people are so strong on talk that they try to pay their bills with it

T. L. Parks, Murryville, Ga., Route 1, is in his 73rd year, and was recently cured of a bad kidney and bladder trouble. He says himself: "I have suffered with my kidneys. My back ached and I was annoyed with bladder irregularities. I can truthfully say, one 50c bottle of Foley Kidney Pills cured me entirely." They contain no habit forming drugs.

AN OLD CORRESPONDENT HEARD FROM

Chicago, Ill.,
Sept. 22, 1912.

Editor Herald:

I wonder if any one has missed the Franklin correspondence? a year has passed since it was broken off. A little year but—sitting on the grass near the lake front today and watching a flock of bird-men manovering over head, I thought of old Michigan and the dear people in Lenawee county

Our little party had left Madison park, with the mile of new made land in Lincoln park as its objective point. We had planned to leave the car down town, and walk along the lake front viewing the buildings in course of erection, the splendid mansions of the rich including the massive stone residence of Mrs. Potter Palmer, and on into the park returning by boat to Grant park. But after leaving our car we found the great throng of people to interesting to leave.

We were now on Michigan avenue in front of the Art Institute and were attracted by the figure of a tall Arab dressed in native costume. He turned to the left after passing the building and joined a group of three other Arabs who were sitting on the grass, one of these had removed his slippers and sat cross-legged with bare feet and ankles, and one great toe very conspicuous. They formed a picturesque group, so tall and straight with their curiously turbaned heads and native dress. They were soon rolling cigarettes, and a youth with adamantine nerve approached and made motions that he too wanted a smoke, one of the Arabs at once passed the fellow materials for a cigarette. These Arabs with the glitter of cold in their eye, belonged to the company who are playing in "The Garden of Allah" in the near by Auditorium theater.

Then we went to the Art Institute which is always open and free on Sundays. We hastily viewed some beautiful marbles and plaster casts, glanced at some of the great pictures and wonderful tapestries and other art treasures gathered here, went up and inspected briefly some charts and views of Greater Chicago as it will appear when the new plans materialize, which will be some years hence. As we were passing an open window, we heard the hum of an air moter and caught a glimpse of the strange craft as it spead by and we sought the open.

There were four of them in the air: at least two of them. Wright's and one a Curtis, There was a good breeze stirring and the monoplane which has wonderful speed but is not so independent of the air currents were slower to take flight. However one soon appeared and made a splendid flight. Some of the spectators referred to this machine as "the bug." It resembled more nearly a fish with wings, Presently another monoplane appeared not so handsome, but of lighter build.

Did you ever watch a hawk high on the wing, patroling a meadow for his dinner? round and round he flies in ever widening circles until at last he disappears in the distance. You would have thought of the hawk if you had watched these man-birds.

Indeed it seems unbeliveable to you while you look, the perfect control of the machine, the ease with which they turn, the instant response of the senseless thing to the master's touch, the awful glides straight down hundreds of feet through the air, the machine apparently upset, the man likely to fall, down, down until when you stand breathless and parallzed with terror, the machine serenely rights herself and sails on her happy way.

Not the least interesting part of the show is the people, thousands of them They are packed in Grand park within the pay line, and on Michigan avenue from below the Art Institute up to 12th street there are crowds all the way, and they overflow the balconies and even the roofs of the tall buildings. There are people from all ranks, family groups, little Italian children with their queer dress. Many are sitting or lying on the ground and some are soundly sleeping They do not seem a great majority, intensely interested in the air ships, Chicago has been treated to a sight of so many of them that even now the first novelty is wearing off Truly we live in a wonderful age.

Mrs. A. B. Wisner.

Have You Noticed These?

An Inventor in America has earned the thanks of all who have been seeking after a really sanitary form of kissing. In certain parts of that great country, when young ladies go to parties and places where they kiss, they are provided with a sterilized ivory ring. mounted on a silver handle. This is interposed between the kisser and the kissee, and the resulting sensation is known as "pasteurized pleasure," or "germless joy."—London Answers.

SEACOCK IS FOUND OPEN

Sinking of Pe-To-Se-Ga Seems Not an Accident.

Traverse City, Mich., Sept. 21.—The steamer Pe-To-Se-Ga, which has been sunk at the Hannah & Day dock since Saturday, has been raised. The cause of her sinking was found to have an open seacock connecting the suction pipe with the pony pump.

It is not known how the cock could have been opened, unless some one who intended to sink the boat, as everything was properly closed when the engineer left the night before. Only slight repairs will be necessary before the boat is placed in commission again. Her first run will be to Charlevoix.

ONE DAY ONLY
8 A. M. TO 6 P. M.

This Institute, composed of a group of regularly graduated physicians and surgeons, licensed, legally associated under the laws of the State of Ohio, sends at its own expense these eminent medical specialists in order to introduce the newest methods and discoveries in medicine and surgery such as the system of treatment under X ray, Violet ray, Finsen ray, Hydrotheraphy, Etc., to give to those who call on the above date, consultation, examination, advice and all medicines required to complete a cure, absolutely free. These specialists will diagnoise your case and give you the benefit of their skill and medical knowledge free.

There is in this case no experimenting or guess work at your expense. You will be told whether you can be cured or not. If your case is curable they will put you under treatment immediately; if incurable they will give you such advice as may prolong your life. Their treatment always gives quick relief, and ultimately positively cures. Being prepared to cope with each individual case the human system is thoroughly cleansed of the disease in a natural and direct manner, and improvement is noticed at once; even the worst cases are treated without any inconvenience to the patient or the pursuing of his or her daily vocation.

If you are improving under your family physician, do not come and take up their valuable time, as they absolutely refuse to treat any one who is under the care of the local physicans. They wish besides to give each patient plenty of time and their undivided attention, but can not listen to long stories not pertaining to your trouble. They have discarded the old methods and remedies used for ages by the medical world, and which it would be folly to depend upon any longer, for they are not known to cure, as thousands die, depending on them for relief. The following list of diseases only are taken under treatment, to wit: Diseases of the Nervous System, Heart, Stomach, Lungs, Kidney, Catarrh, (purlent or dry), Consumption. Epilepsy, Deafness Diseases of Women, Tumors, Pseudo Cancers, Piles, of a Chronic Nature only. They treat Deafness by an entirely new method, and hearing in many cases is restored at once. Catarrh in all its varied forms, like other diseases if once taken under treatment, is cured permanently to remain so and to never return. It matters not whom you have seen, or with whom treated, do not fail to call, as a visit will cost you nothing, and may restore you to health, or even save or prolong your life, as thousands of persons will testify by unassailable testimonials in all parts of the country. If you suspect Kidney Trouble, bring a two ounce bottle of your Urine for chemical and microscopical analysis.

REMEMBER:—The free offer is during this visit only, and will not be repeated. Persons commencing treatment upon their future visits will be required to pay, but not one cent will be asked from those commencing treatment during this visit for any medicine necessary to effect a cure, irrespective of your position in life, or those who come on above date. Whensoever, or by whom wanted, a positive guarantee to cure will be given under their system of treatment. Those having long standing and complicated disease, who have failed to get well and become discouraged, are particularly invited to call.

NOTICE:—Married ladies without their HUSBANDS, and minors without their FATHERS, will positively not be admitted to consultation unless accompanied by one of their local physicians

AMUSEMENTS

LYMAN H. HOWE AT THE BRADLEY OPERA HOUSE

It would be impossible to exaggerate the importance of an entirely new conquest in motion photography to be depicted by Lyman H. Howe at the Bradley Opera House on Wednesday October 2. It consists of a triumphant reproduction of nature's own colors, thereby fulfilling the highest destiny of animated photography. Because of it, Mr. Howe's exhibition makes a stronger appeal than ever to the cultured mind as it represents the highest form of artistic animated photography that has yet been attained. It transforms Mr. Howe's Travel Festival into a symphony of colors that is as true to nature as the form and motion of the scenes presented. This applies particularly to a gorgeously picturesque series of Paris. Whoever you may be, whatever things attract you, you will find these varied scenes of the restless energy and incessant activity of Parisian life thoroughly exhilarating. For Paris is everything to everybody. At every turn new visions of wondrous beauty or historic places vibrant with human interest, are unfolded. Magnificent Paris is revealed in one continuous panorama of moving color. The scenes of the busy boulevards, pulsating ceaselessly with joyous life are especially stimulating. The sight seeing excursion takes the audience from the full life-tide flowing through the Place de l'Opera to the impressive tomb of Napoleon I, and from historic Notre Dame to imperial Versailles and its wonderful fountains

A thrilling hydroplane race with an 800 horse power motor boat at Monte Carlo; the whaling industry; "Our friends, the bees;" a ferocious attack on a horse by an enraged lion during which the equine is saved only by the dead sure aim of a hunter at the crucial moment when the lion is making a terrific leap at his intended victim, and the burial of the Maine are only a few of the many other features included in the program.

"THE ROSARY"

"The Rosary," Rowland and Clifford's theatrical success, which will be seen at the BRADLEY next Thursday October 3rd tells a story of a modern Garden of Eden in which the serpent enters in the form of a rejected suitor, who wrecks the home and happiness of a married couple by playing upon the jealousy of the husband. There is diffused throughout the drama a remarkable air of purity, faith and hope from the opening scene, which pictures the happy couple about to celebrate their second marriage anniversary, and surrounded by all the creature comforts of modern civilization to the last act when the twain broken in health and fortune and wrecked by jealousy come like two weary children at the feet of the old priest who had fathered them through out their troubles. In the days of their prosperity they had built a chapel for their old friend the priest, and in their adversity they come back to the little edifice one Sunday morning, just as the chimes send their music rolling through the valley. The story is interestingly told, and with a cast comprising Frank Kilday, Reginald Korr, Harry Price, A. C. VanSlyke, Florence Wright, Eleanor Rells, Nettie DeCoursey, Henry Garron and others, and with scenic effects that are brilliant, the production is worth attending.

RAPID TRANSIT

Three young men on motor cycles made a brilliant entry into Tecumseh Wednesday afternoon. One of them who claimed to be Roy McClure of Detroit evidently "took no note of time" and fell into the hands of John Smith who introduced him to Justice Hoomer as one who had set to fast a pace.

Pleading guilty to the charge he paid the fine and costs, $7.40, imposed upon him and departed in a more leisurely way than that in which he came.

The Coal Situation.

Owing to the severe winter the surplus stock of Hard Coal was used up, then came the strike which lasted two months, when the mines started to work again there was only 60% of the miners ready, it took some time to get the mines working full time, the result that there is a shortage of over 9,000,000 tons, it will take several months to work off this shortage.

The Independant mines are in a position to offer rather prompt shipment just now but the situation will grow steadly worse until after the first of the year.

You can depend upon high priced Hard Coal. If you have not made arrangements for your supply up to Jan. 1st. you better do so at once or you may be forced to use some other coal.

Nearly all soft coals and cokes have advanced their prices to be in sympathy with the hard.

Place your orders with us and we will fill them.

Have your Clock cleaned at Gaston & Son,

Earl Brisban had a bad encounter with the burner under the coffee urn in Hay's Bakery Monday, the gasoline exploded and burned him about the face singing his eyebrows and hair. A physician soon made him comfortable and he is at work again.

Mrs Emily Hall was the recipient of a most lovely lot of dahlias last week, from Mr. Frank Hall of Geneva, N. Y. Mr. Hall has over 150 varieties from those of only four petals to those whose petals are so many that one can not count them. Those received by Mrs. Hall are in all shades of red, yellow, pink, bronze, white bronze shaded, and perfect in every detail. Those who accepted Mrs. Hall's kind invitation to see these flowers were more than repaid for any effort they may have made to go to her home in Brownville, and those who did not, can but regret it.

Pleasant Valley Teas

50 60 80 ¢

You'll say it's the best cup of tea you ever tasted when you try Pleasant Valley.

They have a delicate flavor and at the same time brace the tired nerves.

Our Coffees

are of equal merit to the Pleasant Valley Teas.

We have four brands.

Nero - - 30c
Marigold - 32c
Tzar - - 35c
Pleasant Valley 40c

Tzar Coffee is especially recommended. It has a smooth, rich flavor and its fragrance is, in itself, a great factor in the sale of it. The aroma, which is a sign of freshness, is retained by reason of the air-tight packages in which Tzar Coffee is delivered to you. Why not order a trial of Pleasant Valley Tea and Pleasant Valley Coffee and get into the habit of using the best?

Electric Weld Wire

Fall is the time of the year to put up wire fence and Pittsburg Electric Weld fence the best kind to put up. No knots to slip or catch horses tails, no loose wires, no bulging out, no rusting like the ordinary fences. Pittsburg fence is made right, of open hearth process wire. You cannot slip the knots. The fence stretches straight, as tension, is even and a new preparation is used to make the fence practically rust proof. If you are intrested in the best you will buy Pittsburg and get it for less money than you would have to pay for others.

FENCE ANCHORS

We have fence anchors to keep fence down between posts and and to save posts. They sell at 5c each and are worth double.

CERTAIN RESULTS

Many a Tecumseh Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Tecumseh. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

W. W. Shurtz, Kilbuck St., Tecumseh, Mich., says: "I have taken Doan's Kidney Pills at different times for the past ten years and they have always given me relief from distressing symptoms of kidney complaint. I have obtained my supply of Doan's Kidney Pills from Wright & Son's Drug Store and my experience has been so satisfactory that I willingly give this public account of it."

(Statement given December 7, 1908.)

A willing Re Endorsement.

When Mr. Shurtz was interviewed on August 29, 1911, he said: I am only too willing to endorse Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know that they act as represented. You may continue to use my name as a reference."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Antoine Deloaia, Postmaster at Garden, Mich., knows the exact facts when he speaks of the curative value of Foley Kidney Pills. He says: "From my own experience I recommend Foley Kidney Pills, as a great remedy for kidney trouble. My father was cured of kidney disease and a good many of my neighbors were cured by Foley Kidney Pills."

For sale by all Druggists of Tecumseh.

Many Driven From Home

Every year, in many parts of the country, thousands are driven from their homes by coughs and lung diseases. Friends and business are left behind for other climates, but this is costly and not always sure. A better way—the way of multitudes—is to use Dr. King's New Discovery and and cure yourself at home. Stay right there, with your friends, and take this safe medicine. Throat and lung troubles find quick relief and health returns. Its help in coughs, colds, grip, croup, whooping-cough and sore lungs make it a positive blessing. 50c. and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by C. A. Wright & Son.

U. A. Smith, Bridgeton, Ind., had kidney trouble for years, and was so crippled with rheumatism he could not dress without help. He started using Foley Kidney Pills and says: "I began to get better at once, and now all my trouble has left me and I do not feel that I ever had rheumatism. I rest well all night and tho' 59 years old, can now do the work of a man of 35 years. I would like to be the means of others getting benefit from Foley Kidney Pills." Refuse substitutes.

GRAND RAPIDS—While it was traveling forty miles an hour the local police auto collided with a street car being driven by a student motorman. Chauffeur Frank Powers and Conductor Madigan of the auto were hurled thirty feet but escaped serious injury.

Arabian Snuff.

Snuff in Arabia is not used as it is with us, although one occasionally sees a snuffer, but the snuff is ordinarily made into a pill of about the size of a robin's egg and is placed between the lower front lip and the teeth. This manner of using snuff is common among the laboring class, and almost every coolie that is met in the street has his lower lip pushed out by a ball of snuff behind it. Arabian snuff is prepared out of the ordinary powdered tobacco, unrefined sugar and potash.

A Famous Bell.

On the watchtower of the Vela, at the Alhambra, Spain, there is a silver toned bell which the Moslems rang as a signal to let on the water in the gardens and the fountain in the city below. Its sound can be heard at Liga, thirty miles away. The maiden who strikes it is sure of a husband before the year is out and of a good one if she rings loud enough. On certain fete days it is lively for the bell.

SUICIDE MOST TRAGIC

Man Jumps from Height for a Moving Picture Film.

At Berlin, Germany, a man nemed Buettner jumped from the top of the famous Column of Victory in the Tiergarten and was instantly killed. The column is 245 feet high.

Buettner had agreed with a bioscope concern to make the jump with a parachute from the summit of the column. The operators of the moving picture machine were all ready, and a crowd was watching when Buettner ascended the staircase.

He lost no time in making the jump from the top. The parachute failed to act. He came down like a stone, and was dead when the onlookers reached the spot.

The police, who allowed the performance, claim the man committed suicide, as an examination showed that the parachute was worthless, and it was also learned that Buettner had tried to kill himself two weeks ago over a love affair.

RICHMOND—At a special election to consider the proposition of selling the village electric lighting plant to the Eastern Michigan Edison company for $18,000 the question carried almost unanimously, 204 yeas and 11 nays. This will give the village twenty-four-hour lighting service, and day power, offering big inducements to manufacturing enterprises to come to Richmond. The change will be made by Oct. 1.

SOUTH HAVEN—The lives of more than 100 passengers of the Michigan Central train from Kalamazoo were endangered by Reynold Ischer, a thirteen-year-old Chicago boy, when he threw open a switch one-half mile from the station here. The passenger train, running twenty-five miles an hour, ran onto a side track from which a train of box cars had been moved one hour before and no damage resulted.

GRAND RAPIDS—A new destructive pest which threatens the apple orchards of western Michigan, has been discovered here. The insect is brown in color, very small and has two sets of wings. It bores a fine hole in the tree, beginning its work at sundown and always on the southeast side of the tree near the base, and sips the sap. Various poisons have been tried but without effect.

WOMEN TAKE NOTICE!

A man cannot understand the torture and suffering many women endure uncomplainingly. If the majority of men suffered as much pain and endured with patience the weakening sicknesses that most women do, they would ask for immediate sympathy and look for a quick cure.

Many women have been saved from a life of misery and suffering by turning to the right remedy—Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—a remedy which is safe to take because containing no narcotics, alcohol or injurious ingredients. It is an alterative extract of roots, made with pure glycerin, and first given to the public by that famous specialist in the diseases of women—Dr. R. V. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y.

MRS. HESSHIMER.

MRS. LIZZIE M. HESSHIMER, of Lincoln, Neb., 530 "O" St., says: "I send a testimonial with much pleasure so that some suffering woman may know the true worth of your remedies. I was a great sufferer from female troubles but after taking one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which a friend advised me to take, I found myself very much improved. After taking three more bottles, and using two boxes of Dr. Pierce's Lotion Tablets, I found myself on the road to recovery. I was in poor health for five years but now I am cured.

"I hope all women suffering from female weakness will give Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription a fair trial.

A congregation without a minister, and a minister without a congregation: such was the situation of the two Macon churches last Sunday afternoon. The Rev. Weld of Tecumseh who had an appointment at the Presbyterian church and who did not get the message that the appointment had been taken up, came to fill his engagement, and found a closed church; but seeing that the Methodist congregation were without a minister kindly offered to preach to them. All the people of both congregations who stayed at home missed a fine sermon.

Miss Mary Morden was home the first of the week on account of illness.

B. S. Scudder was an over Sunday visitor in Detroit and also attended the Republican convention.

MOOSERS ARE OUSTED BY THE REPUBLICANS

National Committee Turns Out Seven Roosevelt Men.

Four Are Summarily Expelled and Three Others Invited to Resign—No Protests from Ejected Men Are Expected.

At New York four of the members of the Republican national committee who favor Colonel Roosevelt for president were expelled by the committee at its meeting at the Hotel Manhattan. Three others who are for Roosevelt were allowed to resign. In each case, the accusation was disloyalty to the party and President Taft.

Four Ousted Without Ceremony.

The four peremptorily ousted are:

California—Russ Avery of Los Angeles, to be succeeded by a man selected by a committee of three.

New Jersey—Borden D. Whiting of Newark, succeeded by Ex-Governor Franklin D. Murphy, the choice of the state committee.

North Carolina—Richmond Pearson of Asheville, to be succeeded by Ex-State Committeeman E. C. Duncan, the choice of the state committee.

West Virginia—William S. Edwards of Wheeling, successor to be indicated by the state committee.

The committee selected Charles A. Spiess as successor to Solomon Luna of New Mexico, who is dead.

Three Allowed to Resign.

The three whose resignations were accepted are:

Oklahoma—G. C. Priestley of Pottleville, succeded by J. A. Harris.

Ohio—Walter F. Brown, succeeded by Sherman A. Granger, nephew of General W. T. Sherman, and the choice of the state committee.

Minnesota — J. A. Carswell of St. Paul, successor to be indicated by the state committee.

The Californian, Russ Avery, sent a telegram of resignation in which he told Mr. Hilles that "there is no more Republican party in California." In place of letting him resign the national committee "fired" him. This was done by unanimous vote of the committeemen and proxies of all except thirteen states.

Bit of Housecleaning Done.

It was cheerfully stated that the committee has got rid of all its "bad blood" and can now go ahead in solid formation to elect President Taft. The cases were presented one at a time. None of the offenders were present and no protests were received. It was believed that all of the ousted committeemen would acquiesce in the decision.

PLAN TO MERGE PHONES

Bell Company and Opponents in Their Usual Jangle.

State Board Not Apprised of Court's Action, Declares Commissioner Hemans.

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 21.—The Detroit telephone squabble bids fair to remain in litigation for some time. Two suits are now pending with a view of preventing the merger of the Michigan State with the Home telephone and the other companies doing business in the vicinity of Detroit. Despite this, Attorney James O. Murfin, representing the American Telephone & Telegraph company, says that the merger of the Detroit companies is to be consummated immediately.

He says copies of the temporary injunction secured by Edward McGill, of St. Louis, a stockholder in the Home company, were not served on the Bell people, and that the lower court refused the application of the Grass Lake people for an injunction.

Attorney Samuel Kelley, representing the petitioners in the two injunction suits, takes another view of the matter, and says the Bell company will be playing with fire if it consolidates the two companies. He says the time for an appeal in the Grass Lake case has not yet expired, and that he intends to appeal the case to the supreme court as soon as possible. He says the McGill case was only started against the officers of the Home company and railroad commission because the stockholders had no interest in the Bell company, and would have no ground for including them. The McGill case has not been heard before Judge Collingwood yet.

The opponents of the merger say they will take the matter into court again if the merger is put through. This would make three suits pending in the matter.

CHARLOTTE—Harry W. Ferris, of Lansing, who is thirty years old, was sentenced to one to ten years at Ionia. Ferris pleaded guilty to an attempted assault on thirteen-year-old Emma Rieder, of that city, the offense being committed in this county.

$70,000 Loot Taken.

About $70,000 in currency is said to have been stolen from a Louisville and Nashville train Wednesday between Pensacola and Flomaton, Ala. News of the robbery did not become known until now.

The Cross on the Moon

By JOHN H. WARNACK

The governor sat in the library of his beautiful new home, his head bowed in deep thought, while through his great heart surged conflicting emotions like warring waves in time of storm. He had just been visited by the mother of Jim Turner, the man who at 6 o'clock that evening was to be hanged for the murder of his father. The governor had remained apparently calm during the interview, but the woman's visit had shaken his nerves, had made him question the justice of the law and caused him to doubt his own judgment.

"Governor," the woman had said, "if Jim Turner dies tonight, the soul of an innocent man will whisper into the ear of God the story of a legalized murder. My son was accused of taking the life of his gentle father, my husband. He has been tried before the courts of this state, and has been pronounced guilty by a jury of twelve ignorant mountaineers; but the evidence produced against him is almost entirely circumstantial, and before God I swear that my noble boy is innocent. I would gladly give my own life to be able to absolutely prove his innocence and to take the unearned stain from the name of Turner in this state."

He was called the pardoning governor, and his political enemies had made the most of the fact that already during his brief tenure of office he had robbed the gallows of four men who, under the law, had been condemned to death. A pardoning governor, yes; a merciful man, surely; a leader whose heart was as great as his mind—but was he allowing his brain and his heart to be ruled by a moral weakness? Was he going to pardon this man who had been sentenced by the judge to be hanged by the neck until he was dead, for the murder of one of the best-loved citizens of the state? He had only thirty minutes in which to decide.

He reviewed all the evidence in the case. Turner and his father were last seen together strolling through the woods, during the early autumn. The son came home alone, and an hour afterward his father's body was found, half-covered by leaves. A bullet had pierced his heart, causing instant death. The young man, Jim Turner, had returned home with a rifle which he and his father had taken with them into the woods. On the day previous to the murder, if murder it was, the young man had threatened to leave his home on account of a misunderstanding which had arisen between him and his father. That was all, but was it not enough? What further evidence was necessary to prove young Turner's guilt? And yet, why did he not leave the rifle by the side of his father's body in order that the coroner's jury might return a possible verdict of suicide? On the other hand, how could it have been suicide, when no weapon was found by the dead man? Who else could have committed the crime, if not his son? The elder Turner had not had an enemy in the country. He was a generous man, and one of the mildest and most forbearing. Could some one have shot him accidentally? This could not be, for the shot had been accurate. Surely it was premeditated. The bullet had entered the heart, passing entirely through that organ, and the clothing over the wound was powder-burned, therefore the shooting must have been at close range. Yet the young man had been seen and spoken to when he and his father had entered the woods—and he had returned with the rifle! And Turner was no fool. This was the puzzling part of the affair. Surely, or at least possibly, there was another explanation, if it could be found. However, the courts had given the accused man the benefit of every plausible doubt, and still he had been found guilty.

Suddenly the governor lifted his head and looked out through the window screen at the early rising moon. Did his eyes deceive him? What was this he saw? Across the great orb, extending above and below it, shone a brilliant cross, the emblem of Calvary, the sign of the death of one who had pardoned his crucifiers.

The governor was not superstitious. Again and again he looked in wonderment. The cross still shone clearly across the yellow moon.

"Mary," he called suddenly, and almost immediately his beautiful daughter stood in the doorway.

"Where have you been, child?"

"On the veranda, star-gazing, or rather moon-gazing. The moon is lovely tonight, don't you think?"

"Yes," said the governor, "it is beautiful."

"It never seemed so golden," she went on. "How soft and sweet the night is! Can't you come out a while with me, father?"

"In a few minutes, perhaps, dear—not just now. I only wished to know where you were. I had not seen you for such a long time, almost three hours."

Her rippling laughter floated back to him as she skipped from the room.

"She did not notice it," said the governor to himself. "It seems to be there only for me. What does it mean? Is it an optical illusion, I wonder? Why didn't Mary see it, too?"

The sign of the cross! What had it not meant to the world! It spelled redemption. The idea associated itself in his mind with the thoughts of the condemned man. Turner's innocence was conjectural, but absolute proof of his guilt had not been established. Was it not better to pardon a man, even though he might be guilty of the basest of crimes, than to send to his death an innocent man? Anyway, if he was guilty, he might yet atone in this world for his crime by a life of service to his fellow-men. If he did not, then the account must be settled between him and his maker at the final reckoning.

And still the cross shone down on him. It seemed to steal all the golden radiance of the moon to flash directly into his tired eyes. Suddenly he arose and walked quickly to the telephone.

"Hello, Central," he called feverishly. "Give me 8260, please. Hello, county jail? This is the governor. I wish to speak to Sheriff Harvey at once. Yes, yes. Hello, that you, sheriff? Yes, this is the governor. Yes, I want to speak of Jim Turner. Everything ready, you say? Have it all stopped now. Jim Turner does not die tonight. I'll be down in about an hour. Yes. All right, good-by."

The governor wiped the perspiration from his brow, drew a deep breath and walked back to his chair where he sat silently for a quarter of an hour, half-surprised at his own actions, yet regretting nothing.

"Pahdon me, sah, but Mistah Kress [illegible] to see you, suh."

"Show him in, Charley."

A well-dressed man almost rushed into the room.

"Governor," he exclaimed, "I've just received a telephone message to the effect that a revolver with a note tied to the handle was found this morning in the Turner woods, in a small ditch, under a bunch of leaves. The note was written by old man Turner, who committed suicide. He was not murdered by Jim Turner, his son. The note spoke of heart trouble, and evidently the fear of death from the disease had driven the old man insane. It's too late, I know. It is nearly half-past 6 o'clock now. An innocent man had been hanged tonight."

"No innocent man has been hanged," calmly replied the governor. "I reprieved Jim Turner an hour ago."

The visitor gasped. His eyes opened widely, and he sprang across the room and grasped the governor's hand excitedly. For a few minutes the two men talked together. Then they both prepared to leave the room for the county jail.

"By the way, governor," said Kress, as they started out of the library, "did you ever notice from this room the strange effect produced by that screened window? I remember having noticed it when I built the house. See that big cross on the moon? I suppose it is the manner in which the wires on the screen are crossed that produces the effect. See, it makes a perfect cross. Isn't it peculiar?"

"I noticed it," calmly said the governor. Then, as the full realization of what it meant to Jim Turner and his mother and to his own peace of mind, rushed over him, he added under his breath: "Thank God, I noticed it!"

POLICE FIGHT MOB

Street Cars at Superior, Wis., Are Wrecked and Burned.

At Superior, Wis., Friday a mob of 5,000 strike sympathizers destroyed thousands of dollars of street railway property and seriously injured many nonunion street car employes.

The first attack on street cars resulted in the burning of six cars and a battle with the police, in which more than thirty persons were injured, none, it is thought, fatally.

Following this battle the mob stormed the company's barn on Fourth and Ogden avenue.

The police were powerless. Sheriff Edward McKinnon was ordered to swear in deputies to preserve order and save human life.

Previous to this time every policeman on the force, specials and regulars, was enlisted on night service, but thousands of men and boys paraded the streets in wildest disorder.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

LANSING—The following Michigan companies filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state: Currier Auto company, Detroit, $6,000, L. G. Currier, W. S. Gordon and A. E. PORT HURON—Because his wife frequently purchased cookies at 22 cents per pound and fed them to a star boarder, Herbert L. Hastings filed a cross-bill for divorce in circuit court. That is one of the charges made by Hastings in his answer to his wife's suit for divorce. Considerable interest is manifested in the case. Mrs. Hastings brought suit against her husband some time ago, alleging cruelty and requested that the court grant her alimony. Hastings in his cross-bill alleges that when Samuel Dickerson came to his home as a boarder his wife fed him delicacies.

EATON RAPIDS — While she was at work with a washing machine on the porch at her home, a short distance south of this city, Mrs. Melvin Auton, wife of a prominent farmer, was stricken with paralysis and fell from the porch to the ground, pulling the tub and washing machine over onto her as she fell to the floor. The injury sustained in the fall in addition to the paralytic stroke, makes Mrs. Auton's condition extremely critical. She has regained consciousness only for a few moments at a time since she was stricken.

WRESTLER KILLS GIRL

Thomas H. Davies Shoots Miss Lucille May in Vincennes.

Man Who Had Been Jilted by Actress Is Arrested and Hangs Himself in Jail Cell.

Vincennes, Ind., Sept. 23.—Miss Lucille May, a beautiful seventeen-year-old singer with the Knickerbocker stock company, which closed a week's engagement here Saturday night, was shot and instantly killed shortly after midnight by Thomas Harry Davies, of Chicago, who, as Harry Hecter, posed as a catch-as-catch-can wrestler and ex-middleweight champion of England.

Davies came to Vincennes Saturday morning from Chicago and dogged Miss May's footsteps, once entering a street car and threatening to kill her. Later, at a theater, she became tangled in her lines when Davies appeared in the audience and attempted to get on the stage. Davies was forcibly ejected.

Just as Miss May and her mother sat down to a midnight lunch at the Savoy restaurant Davies entered and fired four bullets into her head and body. A cartridge jammed in the barrel prevented Davies killing himself as he turned the pistol toward his head. Davies was arrested within a block of the shooting and just before daylight succeeded in committing suicide in jail by hanging himself with a towel. A letter from Miss May dated Sept. 2, disclosed that she had jilted him because she discovered he had a wife and daughter in Pennsylvania.

MONSTER WHALES.

A Dozen Men Might Stand Upright In the Blue's Big Mouth.

Specimens of the blue or sulphur bottom whale weighing seventy-five tons and measuring eighty-seven feet have been known. The mouth is sufficiently large to permit ten or twelve men to stand upright in it, but the throat measures only about nine inches in diameter.

The "finback," closely related to the blue whale, has been called the "greyhound of the sea," for its long, slender body is built on the lines of a racing yacht, and the animal can equal the speed of the fastest steamship.

The "humpback" is the most interesting of our large whales, because of the fact that its habits are more easily studied than are those of other members of the family.

But most extraordinary of all is the square nosed sperm whale. Instead of having plates of baleen, this whale carries a row of twenty to twenty-five heavy teeth on each side of the lower jaw. These fit into sockets in the roof of the mouth and assist in holding the giant squid and cuttlefish on which the enormous animal feeds. The squid seldom gets away from the warm currents; hence the sperm usually remains in the tropics and in the gulf of Japan streams.—London Family Herald.

KING AND CZAR TO PART PERSIA

Territory to Be Divided Between England and Russia.

MUSCOVITES WANT TEHERAN

Sazonoff and Grey Conduct Negotiations for Their Governments—Some British Papers In Opposition.

London, Sept. 23.—The practical division of Persia between Great Britain and Russia appears almost assured as a result of the conferences which Sergius Sazonoff, the Russian foreign minister, has had with British statesmen. All the newspapers which are in the closest touch with the foreign office, praticularly the Times, looked upon recently as Sir Edward Grey's mouthpiece, are forecasting this arrangement and are apparently preparing the public mind for it. The necessity of preserving order in the intereste of trade is the principal reason advanced.

Discuss Details of Division.

The Manchester Guardian and other liberal papers oppose the project bitterly. The Guardian says: "The foreign office, although not ordinarily oversolicitous about trade interests, knows well how to quote them for its own ends."

Since the signing of the Anglo-Russian convention of 1907 for the maintenance of Persia's independence and integrity, and incidentally for the division of the country into British and Russian spheres of influence, there has been a steady growth of this influence and a corresponding shrinkage of independence in Persia. The exact division of territory will not be easy. The Russian papers claim Teheran. If the emperor gets the capital Great Britain's share will be decidedly the smaller value.

Loss of "Buffer" State.

Some of the liberal papers bewail the disappearance of Persia as the "buffer" state and foresee a great increase in the British military establishment when the British-Russian boundary is drawn across the middle of what is now Persia.

Nowhere is the outcome of the conference between Sir Edward Gray and M. Sazonoff awaited with greater interest than in the capitals of the Balkan states, as it is believed that they have a vital bearing on the crisis in the near east, the gravity of which, unless the powers induce Turkey immediately to introduce reforms in Macedonia, all are agreed upon.

Hundreds of Gallons of Whisky Run In Gutters.

Pharmacy Board Chairman Raids Petersburg Drug Stores and Soft-Drink Places.

Petersburg, Ind., Sept. 23.—State Chairman Cassiday, of the Indiana pharmacy board, made more business for the officers here when he decided that it was his duty to see that the [illegible] cated in raids Friday should be dumped into the gutters surrounding the square.

A crowd of 500 watched the destruction of $500 worth of fine whisky and it took two men thirty minutes to remove the liquors from the jail to the curbing. Cassidy declares that his fight against blind tiger drug stores has just begun and that by the time he gets through there will not be so many pharmacist licenses in Indiana.

Two will be revoked here at once. All the whisky stock in three drug stores was destroyed and all the proprietors prosecuted. The soft-drink houses are now being investigated.

TWO FLYERS KILLED

Fall with Monoplane Fatal to German Officers at Freiburg.

Freiburg, Saxony, Sept. 23.—Two German military officers were killed when flying near here. This is the third double fatality in Europe within the present month in which members of army flying corps were the victims.

The machine, which was of the monoplane type, was piloted by Lieutenant Berger, who was carrying Lieutenant Junghans as a passenger, in flight from Chemnitz to Berlin. When passing over this city the machine suddenly plunged from a high elevation to the ground. The airmen were killed instantly and the monoplane was smashed to bits. The cause of the accident is not known.

New York, Sept. 23.—The London Express cabled Gov. Woodrow Wilson that reports were being circulated in London that he favored free trade and the removal of protection from American industries, and asked how he stood on the matter.

The following is his reply:

"No foundation for a statement that I advocate free trade for the United States. Under the present system of the division of the field of taxation between the federal and state governments, free trade would be impossible. WOODROW WILSON.

PRESIDENT TAFT OPENS CONGRESS

[illegible] is International and [illegible]berates upon Hygiene.

EXHIBITS ATTRACT ATTENTION

[illegible] Thousand Persons Inspect Inter[illegible] in Conservation of Health.

Washington, Sept. 23.—Fully 10,000 persons, according to the official estimate, visited Sunday the exhibition in connection with the international congress of hygiene and demography, which was opened by President Taft today.

While the majority of Sunday's attendants were Washingtonians, a large number of delegates to and members of the congress and their families took the opportunity to inspect the remarkable exhibits. The center of general interest on the part of the men and women alike was the sensational exhibits of the hygiene section, concerning which nearly half a hundred lectures have been given during the past week.

Exhibits Attract Attention.

The marvelous and unique exhibit of the models of leper specimens, which arrived Saturday also attracted particular attention. The exhibits with accompanying tables, diagrams, mottoes, etc., concerning the use of alcohol and casualties resulting from it, and the tuberculosis exhibit, the most elaborate of its kind ever placed before the public, also came in for a wide share of attention.

Out in the camps, stretched across the monument grounds, the large crowd visited the exhibit.

Insurance Men Interested.

New York, Sept. 23.—One of the principal purposes of the fifteenth international congress on hygiene and demography which meets at Washington this week will be a discussion on how life may be prolonged. The sessions of the congress will be of particular interest, therefore, to the Association of Life Insurance Presidents, whose headquarters are in this city. The association will be represented before the congress by a health commission.

WOOD TO INSPECT DEFENSES

Chief of Staff Plans Extensive Tour of Military Posts.

Washington, Sept. 23.—Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, chief of staff of the army, has left here for an annual inspection of the national defenses. According to a tentative itinerary, he will be at Columbus barracks Sept. 24; Chicago, Sept. 25; Des Moines, Sept. 26 or 27; Fort Crook, Neb., Sept. 28; Robinson, Neb., Sept. 29, and McKenzie, Wyo., Oct. 2. Gen. Wood will meet Secretary Stimson at Fort McKenzie. Then he will go with Gen. Erasmus Weaver, chief of the coast artillery division, to Puget Sound, Washington, where the coast artillery defenses will be inspected Oct. 5 or 6. Gen. Wood next will go to Portland, Ore.; Vancouver, San Francisco, Monterey, Los Angeles and San Diego, Cal. The tour of inspection then will be continued along the Mexican frontier to San Antonio and New Orleans to the coast defenses of the Atlantic seaboard.

TAFT LAUDED IN OHIO BY LODGE

Republican Success for Best Welfare of U. S., He Says.

OPPOSES POLICY OF RECALL

Return of Democrats Pictured as Forerunner of Commercial Disaster If They Stick to Tariff Attitude.

Columbus, O., Sept. 23.—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge opened the Republican campaign in Ohio with an unqualified defense of the administration and a plea for the re-election of President Taft.

"I come to urge upon you to do everything in your power in this, his own state, for the re-election of the president," he said. "I urge this as a Republican who believes most profoundly that now, as in the past, the success of the Republican party is for the best welfare of the people of the United States. I believe that the election of the Republican candidates from the highest to the lowest was never more important than at the present time."

First Speech Since New Alignment.

Throughout the preconvention canvass the Massachusetts senator held aloof from factional quarrels because of his peculiarly intimate relations, personal and official, with Col. Roosevelt, and his friendly relations with the Taft administration. This speech was his first formal utterance on national issues as newly defined at Chicago and Baltimore.

He described the Democratic party as having abandoned the fundamental principles which it once supported and said that its platform looked on its face like a "perfectly vague and incoherent aggregation of sentences, a mass of language intended to get votes."

The return to power of that party was pictured as the forerunner of commercial disaster, providing its present attitde on the tariff was maintained.

Fears Constitutional Changes.

Regarding proposed constitutional changes, Senator Lodge said:

"The courts of the United States were made independent by giving to those who sit upon the bench a tenure

SENATOR ELIHU ROOT.

during good behavior, and an independent judiciary has been, as a whole, the great bulwark of human liberty. If you make your courts subservient to the will of a majority of the voters at any given moment they are no more independent than when they were subservient to the will of the king and the vital protection of our individual rights and liberties vanishes."

How the Katydid Sings.

Everybody is familiar with the rasping notes known as the katydid's "song." It is the male only that is capable of emitting the well known sounds, and he does it in a most peculiar manner. His "vocal organs" are at the base of his wings and consist of two flat excrescences of thin, dry membrane. It is the rubbing of these two membranous plates together which produces the "song." If your shoulder blades were so loosely put together that one could be slipped under the other and the underside of one and the upper side of the other were so rough that the operation of slipping them past each other would cause a rasping sound you could imitate the katydid's musical efforts very nicely.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces,

We will give One Hundred Dollars or any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY, & Co., Toledo, Ohio,

$80,000,000.00 LOST ANNUALLY BY WAGE EARNERS

Dr. Sadler estimates that about $800,000,000.00 in wages is lost annually to the American people as a direct result of colds, Lost time means lost wages and doctoring is expensive. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly It will stop the cough, and heal and sooth the sore and inflamed air passages. For sale by all druggists of Tecumseh.

There are a thousand things the people ought to do, and although they admit it, they will never do them,

Uncle Ezra Says

"It don't take more'n a gill uv effort to get folks into a peck of trouble' and a little neglect of constipation, billiousness, indigestion or other liver derangement will do the same. A man should either be able to keep his temper, or be abe to whip the man he is quarreling with.

The Men Who Succeed

as heads of large enterprises are men of great energy. Success, to-day, demands health. To all is to fail. It's utter folly for a man to endure a weak run-down, half alive condition when Electric Bitters will put him right on his feet in short order. "Four bottles did me more real good than any other medicine I ever took," writes Chas. B. Allen, Sylvania, Ga. "After years of suffering with rheumatism, liver trouble, stomach disorders, and deranged kidneys, I am again, thanks to Electric Bitters, sound and well." Try them. Only 50 cents at C. A. Discharging Mary Drake

By JANE OSBORNE

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press.)

Mary Drake, the pretty stenographer at Billington's, was kneeling before the filing cabinet in the outer office. Old Grenoble paced back and forth through the offices clutching his long, white hands in restrained annoyance. Never, in all the course of 20 years' experience as prime minister to the great steel king, Billington, had the wheels of the office machinery played such a trick, and now a mere slip of a ten-dollar-a-week girl had tied up a big deal involving tens of thousands of dollars by misfiling an important letter.

Grenoble came back to the outer office and stood behind the pretty stenographer. She was such a defenseless, well meaning little thing, and now she turned around and looked at him so squarely and unflinchingly as she admitted that the letter was still missing that Grenoble was speechless.

The fact was that Mary Drake's simple, childlike frankness and prettiness had once more disarmed old Grenoble. The little stenographer's smile had proved again to be her surest means of self defense.

Still she searched with unruffled serenity through the files, and still Grenoble stood torn between real anger and compassion.

"I do wish I could find that letter." the girl murmured in a conversational tone.

At this moment Tom Wayne, Grenoble's clever young assistant, came into the office and his eyes fell from force of the habit that he had been acquiring for the last few weeks on the figure of the pretty stenographer. Then he saw Grenoble, pale and struggling with suppressed irritation, and he knew that something had gone wrong.

Miss Drake was the first to break the silence.

"Please, Mr. Wayne," she said appealingly, without looking at him, "can't you think where I might have put that order from Smith's. You see Mr. Grenoble wants to have it right away and it will take all the afternoon for me to look in every folder in this cabinet. It isn't where it ought to be and I can't think where I could have put it."

Of course, the letter was found. Tom Wayne himself helped the girl look through the files for it. It had been misfiled—Miss Drake's fault, of course—and even Mr. Wayne realized then that Miss Drake would have to leave, for this error, and several others which had not been of so great moment, only went to prove that the little woman was as useless on the files as she had been at typewriting, or stenography, or at the office telephone switchboard, where, after a week, she had proved herself incapable of mastering the mechanism of the wires and plugs.

"See here, Wayne," Grenoble said to his young assistant that afternoon when they had finished discussing the important business of the day, "you will have to discharge that Miss Drake. I have tried a half dozen times and somehow she doesn't seem to understand. The first time I told her to go she was so nice about it that I promised to let her try another week. Then when I told her that she had shown no improvement she pleaded so earnestly to stay that I turned the telephone boy into an office boy and gave her a try at the telephone, but you know how impossible she was there. Then it was on the files and she has failed. I have tried again to discharge her but I don't believe she quite understood me. To tell you the truth, Wayne, she is so near the age of my own daughters that I haven't the heart to tell her brutally to go But I think it would be easy enough for you. Mr. Billington will be back in a day or so and he would never stand for any one like Miss Drake."

True, indeed, thought Wayne. Mary Drake would have to leave before Billington's return. One of the secrets of the great financier's success was his ability to choose his employes. Now for the first time since he had been in business he had consented to go away and had sailed for Europe for a few months of rest. Before he had gone he had suggested that a new stenographer be employed to lighten the tasks of the hardworking women in the office during the summer months. Miss Drake was the result of the suggestion—she had come from the employment agency the day after Billington left, and for the first time in history an employe of Billington's was chosen without his personal interview. Surely, thought Tom Wayne, for the good of Miss Drake she would have to be discharged before Billington's return.

It was with thoughts of the cool, deliberate manner of the great chief Billington that Tom Wayne came into the outer office that night intent on discharging Mary Drake. He walked deliberately toward her—trying not to look at her face for fear of catching one of her disarming smiles. He drew a chair beside her desk where she sat working on the files, and explained to her in a low monotone that her services on the files had proved worse than useless.

"You may as well go home at once," he said. "There will be no more to do."

"I know that I have failed," said Mary, looking at him out of those frank blue eyes, "and I am sorry."

"I am sorry, too," said Tom, forced to look at her, but he dared say no more. He had discharged her and that was the end of it. Then he sat watching her as she went to the wardrobe to get her wraps, and followed every motion as she adjusted her hat and drew on her little brown gloves. He said nothing and only smiled as she said good night to him and slipped out of the door.

That night Tom suffered mental torments—remorse, pity and longing—remorse, as he thought of the cruelty of his short, abrupt dismissal of the poor girl; pity as he thought of the possible want that awaited her, and longing—that was the worst of it. A selfish longing gripped at his heart, a hunger for one more glimpse of that frank, pretty smile.

The next day Tom Wayne came to the office with a heavy heart, but to his great surprise there was Mary Drake, her hat off, carefully opening and sorting the mail. Why had she come back? What would Grenoble say? What would the great Billington do under the circumstances?

Just then Mary smiled and said—still opening the mail—"I can open the letters and sort the mail, anyway."

Tom forgot all about Billington. "I want to have a talk with you, Miss Drake," he said. "I will start out with you tonight when you go. I can't talk easily in this office."

Somehow Tom thought that it would be easier to make Mary understand away from the office that she would have to leave, but before the evening came he had decided to settle the problem of discharging Mary Drake in a way that made him long with all his being for five o'clock to come. It was strange, he thought to himself, that he had not thought of this solution before.

That night when Mary Drake walked from the office with Tom Wayne through the busy crowded streets he told her the secret of his love, and as he told it she looked into his eyes with such a spirit of confidence and companionship that Tom wondered why he had hesitated to love her simply because she was an inefficient little working girl.

"Mr. Billington landed this afternoon, and will be at the office the first thing in the morning," he told her, "so you had better not turn up there again. It won't be so hard, having to leave now, will it, little girl? Everything I have is yours, now, and you must not worry about the salary. We will talk that over later."

As they walked Tom noticed that they were still walking up the brightly lighted thoroughfare, and when he asked to see her home Mary protested.

"Don't be ashamed, little girl," he said. "Come, I insist."

"Come, then," said Mary, and led the way past the business section to the brilliantly lighted fashionable residential section. Tom fairly gasped as she led the way up the wide brownstone steps of Billington's house.

"I am not Mary Drake," he heard the girl at his side saying as they stood before the front door. "I am Vivian Billington. I have been playing the part of a spy," she went on. "You know how father hated to leave his office even for a day, and this summer when he needed a rest so very much I hit on this plan. I knew he didn't like to leave because he thought things would go wrong while he was away. One day he said he would go if he had a son to leave in his office while he was away to watch things and let him know just what was doing—keep him constantly posted by wireless and cablegram and letter as only one of his own family could do.

"I told him I would take the place of a son—so he had me sent through the agency and, as you know, I didn't know the first thing about anything, but I did know enough to keep my eyes open and to stick to my job, even when you and old Grenoble tried to discharge me. I think I might have done my work better if I had not had to spend so much time when you were not around keeping the run of the business to let father know what you were doing."

"Then it has all been a game," Tom Wayne began, as he studied the girl's face. "You have been using us—you have been imposing on our sympathy and now your father is home you are through with us? You have been very clever, Miss Billington, and I congratulate you sincerely."

"Why, Tom," Vivian's two small hands were held out before her. "Tom, dear, it has all been a game but this, and this is the realest thing in the whole world."

Norway Turning to Wagner.

"One of the last European countries to accept Richard Wagner," says a letter from Christiania, "is Norway. To foreign ears it seems queer that, despite its high culture, this country has never become acquainted with the works of the great German master. The cause is known full well to us Norwegians. We have only one large theater in the realm, the National, in this city. There we have had occasional opera seasons of a few nights, at which never more than two operas were performed. We had a season of 'Aida' and one of 'Carmen,' and now we look forward to six performances of 'Lohengrin,' and Norway will have joined the Wagner ranks."

KNOW "HOW NOT TO DO IT"

And That Is the Chief Reason Why Women Make Such Really Good After-Dinner Speakers.

It is always the plaint of every generation of diners that after-dinner speaking is on the decline. In this day and generation, however, the eternal feminine has come to the rescue. At recent dinners, where both men and women have spoken, it has been common comment that of the two the women were the better speakers.

One clever man, after a dinner in New York, where the women carried off all the post-prandial honors, explained it thus: "The women are not such egotists. Every man felt himself the star of the evening. So he insisted on talking for twenty minutes and more, till the whole table was weary of him. The women had sense. They got up, talked brilliantly for just five minutes and then sat down, leaving everybody anxious for more."

Age-long training tells. For generations the women in every normal family have sat and listened to the favorite stories of their fathers, brothers and husbands. They have learned the long, irrelevant preludes to an anecdote, the dreary delays and advances up to its point; the boresome, flat epilogues.

They have been told patronizingly that "no woman knows how to tell a good story." And, meanwhile, in their gracious, gentle role of audience they have laid to heart that precious knowledge "how not to do it." The result, while temporarily astonishing to man, makes woman smile—and understand.—Harper's Bazar.

However, Grocerymen Seldom Do.

A man walked into a South Side grocery store a few days ago and called for the proprietor, relates the Kansas City Star. The owner was busy at the time, but the man sat and waited patiently until he was through. Then the man introduced himself, but the groceryman did not recall the name and could not remember ever having seen him.

The stranger then explained that several years ago he had sold the store keeper a load of melons which had all the large ones placed on top. The grocer could not remember the incident, but the stranger was insistent and said he wanted to make retribution, as he had been converted and the matter had always bothered him. The conversation finally ended by the man paying the grocer a dollar.

As he walked out the storekeeper pulled a handkerchief from his pocket and wiped his brow, exclaiming:

"What in the world would I ever do if I got religion that bad!"

MISS ESTHER L. HOUK

Musician

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Bidwell are entertaining their sister, Miss Esther Louise Houk, who has just returned from Berkeley, California, where she has been on the faculty of the State University Summer School, engaged in teaching vocal music.

Miss Houk's activities as church soloist, teacher, and concert artist, have in the last few years extended from one coast to the other. During the last year she has been prominently identified with the music faculty of the Iowa State Teachers College, and for the last two summers she has taught with marked success in Berkeley, California.

We clip the following from Pacific Coast Musical Review: "Miss Houk is one of the most artistic and tasteful vocalists that it has been our pleasure to hear. Possessing a voice of delightful flexibility and clarity, commanding a diction of splendid conciseness and intelligence, and having the general bearing and adaptability of a genuine artist, Miss Houk impresses us as being an authority in vocal art."

The Pagoda on the Balanced Rock.

One of the curious sights of Burma is a huge bowlder on Kelasa heights that rests in delicate poise on the very brink of a rounded cliff. So unstable is the equilibrium that the rock trembles in the wind. Very naturally this odd freak has attracted the attention of the superstitious natives, who look upon it as a miraculous work of the gods. They believe that the rock is held in place by a hair of Buddha. Hence they have clambered to the top of the rock and built there a pagoda which is about twenty-five feet in height. Should the bowlder ever fall, as is quite likely to happen, and dash to death a handful of worshipers the blind faith of the devout people would not be shaken, for in the catastrophe, no doubt, they would see but a manifestation of divine wrath at some unconscious sin of commission or omission.

A Quaint Costume.

The Thames waterman of a former day was bound by a number of restrictions. He was the first public servant to wear a uniform. "Long before England's army and navy wore any distinguishing garb," writes Guy Nickalls, "Thames watermen were known by their uniform and badge, a plaited coat, knee breeches and stockings and hat according to fashion, but always a plate on the arm, either of the Waterman's hall, to denote that they had the freedom of the river and were licensed, or the badge of their employer. Any person rowing or working any boat, wherry or other vessel who had not served seven years as apprentice incurred a penalty of £10."—London Globe.

Practical Consideration.

"You have no magnificent ruins such as we have in Europe."

"No," replied Mr. Cumrox. "I thought of putting up a few, but I gave it up. They're mighty artistic looking, but they're too hard to keep in repair."—Washington Star.

Happy Days.

Fred—Mamma, our principal says his school days were the happiest days of his life, Do you believe that? Mamma—Certainly, He wouldn't say so if it were not true. Fred—Well, I suppose he played hookey and didn't get caught.

AMUSEMENTS

"THE SPRING MAID"

Those who witnessed the charming presentation of "The Spring Maid" at the Opera House Friday night were favored with one of the greatest treats of their life and cannot fail to appreciate it.

The scenic effect was wonderful, and the costumes of the Merry Maids and their attendant admirers made a picture long to be remembered and the singing, words fail to express the pleasure, each one experienced as the rich full tones of the chorus filled the house.
